Against Self Government.

The Washington correspondent of the Richmond Journal writes: Representative Hay, of Virginia, is tired of the tendency of the times, to employ an already overworked phrase. He it knows that Mr. Hay is one of the strongest democrats in opinion in the House, a democrat of the old-fashioned type.

"I foresee the time, and it is not so very far away, either," he said today, "when the people of this country will demand that the government put the food into their mouths. You needn't laugh; I am in earnest," continued Mr. Hay, and there was not the trace of a smile on his countenance. "Anybody can see that time is coming. Look at this Congress. The people—or part of them, at any rate—are clamoring for so many things according to the patrons of the bills introduced to accomplish such a variety of objects.

"There are bills to give the government entire control of life insurance. "Bills to empower the government to regulate all transportation charges. "Bills to kill the bull weevil. "Bills to kill the gypsy moth. "Bills to build good roads. "Bills to kill the fruit scale. "Bills to pension everybody, who, by hook or crook, can show the slightest shadow of claim to the government's bounty.

"We are rapidly forgetting that such a thing as an individual State exists. We are looking to the national government for everything. Southern people as well as northern people are going too far in this matter.

"The protective tariff system is at the root of the entire trouble. "When people found that the government would help them to sell their goods at a higher price than they could otherwise be sold at the trouble started. "We enacted a tariff law shutting out competition from all other countries. This allowed the home producer to sell his products at the price he could have got before, with the amount of the tariff added. They commenced to get rich right away. Other people have seen all that can be done for a favored class by the government, and they are clamoring for assistance. They think the government can do everything for them, and they are asking it to try. I am opposed to the government doing for people that which they can do for themselves, and I am opposed to the federal government doing for the people of this country that which the States should do. I abhor so much centralization of power. We used to set our faces against all that in the South. Opposition to centralization was a cardinal tenet of democracy. I find we are drifting. And the protective policy of this country is responsible for it all.

"We must call a halt. I am trying, as all other Congressmen are doing, to do the best I can for the people of my district. But I believe in the old-fashioned doctrine of allowing the individual States to have all the power consistent with good government, and of allowing the individual to do most things for himself."

It was plain that Mr. Hay, who is one of the most active representatives in Congress in so far as looking out for the interests of his district is concerned, was very much in earnest as he dwelt upon the tendency of the public to ask of the national government legislation which has hitherto been regarded by men of both parties as within the exclusive province of the State legislature.

Woman After J. P. Morgan.
A slender, refined, black-robed woman of 40 was arrested by detectives as she prepared to enter 23 Wall street New York, yesterday afternoon, for the avowed purpose of shooting J. Pierpont Morgan. It was the fourth visit she had paid to the Morgan banking office since last Friday, when she first appeared, talking wildly and brandishing a revolver.

The detectives bundled the woman into a cab they had in waiting and started toward Broadway. Instantly their prisoner, developing usual strength, began struggling and screaming. A boy on the sidewalk yelled "Kidnaper!" Dozens of others took up the cry. The driver of the cab whipped up his horses, and with 500 men and boys in pursuit the cab rolled up Broadway.

The woman shrieked with every breath. Policemen left their street corner beats and joined in the chase, but the bouncing hansom distanced them. It never stopped until it reached the Criminal Courts building.

Once inside Magistrate Wahle's private office the captive quieted somewhat, although she was still verging upon hysteria. She made this statement: "I am Mrs. C. E. Williams and I live at the Hoffman House. I am a cousin

Starving to Death.
Because her stomach was so weakened by useless drugging that she could not eat, Mrs. Mary H. Walters, of St. Clair St., Columbus, O., was hierally starving to death. She writes: "My stomach was so weak from useless drugs that I could not eat, and my nerves so wrecked that I could not sleep; and not before I was given up to die was I induced to try Electric Bitters; with the wonderful result that improvement began at once, and a complete cure followed." Best health tonic on earth. Guaranteed by E. S. Leadbeater & Sons druggists.

Panic in Steerage.
A terrifying experience at sea was reported by the officers of the French line steamer Hudson which arrived in New York Tuesday. During the storm which swept the Atlantic last Friday afternoon and evening, the 336 steerage passengers on the steamer became panic-stricken and were quitted only after the captain and first officer had threatened them with revolver and knife.

Both the barometer and thermometer fell rapidly, and a terrific gale raged up the west coast. When the storm was at its worst the steerage passengers became panic-stricken and sought to go on deck, insisting that if they must die they wanted to meet death in the open. The steers and minor officers lost control of the passengers and appealed to the captain for assistance.

Capt. Juham and First Officer McManus, who were on the bridge hurried to the steerage quarters and attempted to pacify the terrified passengers. First they assured them that there was no danger, then threatened them, and finally drew revolvers and knives and threatened to use them unless the passengers became quiet. Order finally was restored. Soon afterward the storm abated.

Capt. Juham said that the storm, while it lasted, was the most severe he ever saw in his thirty years experience at sea.

of Lord Suffield, of England, and I own all the land upon which the city of Baltimore stands. J. Pierpont Morgan is my agent. Lately he mismanaged several millions which I put into his hands for investment. I went to his office to demand an accounting, and his clerks told me he had gone to Europe. On Tuesday I warned them that I would return Wednesday and punish him."

Then the woman grew incoherent. She was handsomely gowned and of refined appearance, but wild in her gestures and language.

Mrs. Williams is said to be a widow and of good English connections, and protested when ordered to the hospital and said she was the victim of a plot planned by J. P. Morgan. When removed from the magistrate's chamber she struggled desperately, and gave the five policemen who had her in charge all they could do to get her into a carriage.

It is said that the name Williams is probably a fictitious one. She is reputed to have been at one time a very wealthy woman, but is said to have lost considerably by bad investments.
