DEATH OF MR. NORRIS.

James L. Norris, a native and prominent resident of Washington, died at his home in that city on Saturday aged 65 years. Death was due to a general breakdown.

James L. Norris was born in Washington October 15, 1845. Beside his prominence among attorneys Mr. Norris was for many years a recognized leader of the democratic party in this city.

During most of his lifetime Mr. Norris was conspicuously identified with the affairs of the national capital. He served as national committeeman for the District as delegate to the National Democratic Convention in 1892, which nominated Grover Cleveland and Stevenson; was treasurer of the national democratic committee, and also was chairman of the inaugural committee of Cleveland's second term. He was a prominent Mason.

In 1867 Mr. Norris was married to Miss Annie Virginia Robinson, daughter of Col. Israel Robinson, of Martinsburg, Va. Mrs. Norris died January 12, 1895. There were seven children, of whom five survive. They are: James L. Norris, jr., Mrs. Erskine M. Sunderland, of Washington; Mrs. Arthur Poe Gorman, jr., of Howard county, Md.; Dr. R. E. Norris, of Orifield, Md.; and Mrs. P. P. Phillips, of Alexandria.

This game will be played for the benefit of the Alexandria Athletic Club, and a large crowd will no doubt be on hand to root for the Lycumites. The "Speed Boys" haven't lost a game this season, and they are in the pink of condition and expect to make their opponents fight hard to win this game.

LETTERS BY TELEGRAPH.

Announcement is made that the Western Union Telegraph Company is now prepared to handle long night messages at the rates customarily charged for ten-word day messages.

It appears that the Western Union has a large unemployed mileage of wire at night which is not earning anything. These wires must be maintained in any event to take care of the regular day business, and it is apparently the idea of the new interests in the telegraph company to let the public have the benefit of them. The announcement states that "a special night letter service will be established. The charge for this service will be the standard day rate for ten words for the transmission of fifty words or less, and one-fifth of such standard day rate will be charged for each additional ten words or less."

To be taken at these rates, "night letters" must be written in plain English language; that is to say, code words or communications written in foreign languages will not be accepted. The messages will be taken at any hour up to midnight and transmitted at the company's convenience during the night for delivery the following morning. For the present the new service is confined to Western Union offices in the United States.

The tariff charged for night letters is so low, it is expected that the new service will be largely availed of by business concerns and others to quicken their correspondence by using the telegraph instead of the mails. A night letter, sent by telegraph, will reach its destination at the opening of business hours the following morning, thus saving as much as three or four days when long distances are involved.

THE SQUEEZED LEMON.

"Who got the squeezed lemon?" That's the brief comment made by Harry E. George Tucker, the defeated candidate in the last gubernatorial primary, when asked in Norfolk a few days ago for an expression upon the Virginia Senate action in killing the prohibition submission bill.

Mr. Tucker's comment referred to a political prophecy made by him during the heated days of the campaign, when the air was surcharged with charged and counter charges. Mr. Tucker made several speeches in which he said that either the Anti-saloon League or the liquorists would receive a "squeezed lemon" if both supported the same candidate for governor.

An analysis of the votes, showing the political affiliations of the senators during the Mann-Tucker contest, shows a majority of the Tucker supporters in the legislature stood by the anti-saloon League, enabling it, while a big majority of the Mann followers voted against submitting it to the people.

The opponents of statewide prohibition believe that the action of the Senate on the Stride bill Friday is the end of the movement in Virginia, so far as any real results are concerned. They aver that there is no necessity for prohibition in Virginia so long as the Byrd law is on the statute books, inasmuch as that law is tantamount to a prohibition law except in well policed cities. It goes very much further in regulating drunkenness, it is claimed, than any prohibition law which concerns itself merely with the prevention of the sale of whisky, opponents of the statewide idea aver.

One of them, summing up the situation declared to the correspondent of a newspaper that even though the effort for a dry state is renewed two years hence, it is a great deal safer for Virginia to watch the effects of state prohibition in those commonwealths that have tried the experiment in the recent past than to rush into it herself at this juncture. The advocates of prohibition announce that they will not be discouraged by any adverse action that may be taken by the present legislature, but that they will continue their campaign for a dry state until the time for the election of another legislature, when they are confident of success.

POSTAL SAVING BANKS.

The administration postal savings banks bills was passed by the Senate Saturday afternoon. Forty-nine republicans, including all the insurgents, and one democrat, Senator Chamberlain, of Oregon, voted for the measure and twenty-two democrats voted against it.

While some amendments were made to the bill, there were no important changes after the adoption of the Smoot amendment as modified by the Brand amendment. The change in the Brand amendment, which allows the withdrawal of funds from local banks in time of war or other emergency involving the credit of the United States, by the Brand proviso that the money shall not be invested in bonds bearing less than 2 per cent interest, lined up the insurgents behind the bill, and not a single one of them voted "nay" on the final roll call.

The use of the savings deposits for the purchase of 2 per cent government bonds, which the president strongly urged, was forbidden in the bill as it passed the Senate.

The following are the provisions of the bill: Board of trustees, secretary of the treasury, postmaster general and attorney general.

Every post office that issues money orders and such others as the postmaster general may designate will be savings banks. Any person over ten years old may open an account. Married women will control their own accounts. An account may be started with $1. Not more than $100 may be deposited in any one month. No account shall exceed $500. Two per cent interest will be paid on deposits in banks with which the funds are deposited and pay the government at least 2.25 per cent interest. In time of war or any other emergency involving the credit of the government the president may invest the funds in government bonds bearing at least 2.25 per cent interest.

Accidents to Aeronauts.

Mourmelon, March 7.—Two aeroplane accidents marred the flying today on the local aviation grounds, in one of which M. Grochons in a Voisin biplane, had a miraculous escape from death. Grochons' machine fell from a height of 400 feet, overturning several times in its bullet-like descent. The aviator was saved by the machine striking the top of a tree. The biplane was smashed to smithereens, but Grochons, whose friends had rushed to the scene expecting to pick up his mangled body, climbed down from the three badly scared, but unhurt.

A few minutes later the Farman biplane used by M. Frey collided with Captain Moreau's machine, as the aviators were alighting. Both machines were badly twisted by the impact, but neither pilot was hurt.
