OFFERS BARE FOR SALE.

Dr. Lester Cox, 48 years old, of 229 west Thirty-fourth street, New York, was arrested on Tuesday near One Hundred and Fifteenth street, after carrying a baby boy, about eight weeks old, around in a market-basket, and endeavoring to give it away to nearly every woman he met. All the police station the doctor refused to discuss the parentage of the infant.

"Nice child," said the doctor. "Beautiful boy, pretty blue eyes and light hair, perfectly formed—not a blemish on him."

Had it been a basket of kittens or puppies, according to the police, the physician could not have tried harder to convince persons of the sterling quality of the good qualities of the article he was offering for adoption.

At the station he was absolutely non-committal as to the child or the reason for giving it away. He rambled in his talk and the police gained the idea that he was trying to dispose of it for some poor woman.

The infant was sent to Bellevue and the physician locked up. An hour later the prisoner was found to be ill and an ambulance was called. Dr. Brogna, who responded, said he was suffering from acute cirrhosis of the liver and was in a serious condition.

Not long after the removal of the doctor, two women visited the police station. They inquired about the doctor, said he had been ill and that the child belonged to a wealthy family on Long Island.

They, too, refused to reveal the identity of the parent or parents of the child.

At the office of the physician in west Thirty-fourth street it was said her family was on Long Island, and the child belonged to a poor patient of the doctor.

WILL LET WAGES ALONE.

Now that the Pennsylvania Railroad wage dispute is settled, officials of other lines are predicting that President McCrea will discontinue the policy of maintaining a higher standard of pay than that prevailing on most roads.

Among those who discussed the subject in Philadelphia on Tuesday were experts connected with the Baltimore and Ohio, the Philadelphia and Reading and the Lehigh Valley. These asserted that the Pennsylvania had kept other companies in "hot water" for years, their managers being constantly in a state of fear lest at any time they be confronted with demands that would seriously affect their corporation's finances.

For this reason, it was said also that the railroads of the country were anxious that the Pennsylvania should refuse to yield to demands that meant increased wages. This the Pennsylvania did. It is maintained that Mr. McCrea and his successors will let the wage scale stand as it is, that no more voluntary increases will be made, at least until other lines have reached the Pennsylvania's higher wage level.

Thereafter, say the officials referred to, the Pennsylvania will be found doing what the other roads do and nothing more. And thus was killed the goose that laid the golden egg.

Issues Before the People.

New York July 28.—"The four issues before the American people this year—direct primaries, congressional organization, railway regulation and conservation—are all one and the same; the perpetually recurring issue between oligarchy and democracy."

In this way the Outlook in its current issue sums up an editorial on the coming campaign.

Although not signed by Theodore Roosevelt, and not written in his characteristic style, the article is known to express in many respects his views, and there is good reason to believe that he was consulted in its preparation.

"The paramount issue," says the article, "on which the American people will have to vote in the campaign this fall is not between the republican and democratic parties; between protection and free trade; between Ballinger and anti-Ballinger. It is between oligarchy and democracy."

ST. ANNE VENERATED.

A great and devout congregation attended St. Ann's Catholic Church Philadelphia Tuesday to venerate a relic of the patron saint. It was the feast of the saint, and people from far and near came to the church to obtain, through the special intercession of St. Anne, what in many cases science was powerless to bring about. The old and afflicted, the lame the blind and people with all sorts of physical deformities and diseases thronged the edifice during the entire day and prayed with a fervent faith. As they walked up the aisle, many of them with difficulty, from the sad expressions on their faces it could be readily discerned that those who were found in body were begging to be relieved from some anxiety or heartache.

The church of St. Anne, which is by far the largest church in the archdiocese, was much too small to accommodate the worshippers. From the early mass at 6 a. m., a constant stream passed into the church, and Rev. Matthew A. Hand, the rector; Rev. Joseph Murphy and Rev. Father Grace were in constant attendance during the entire day. In the evening the crowds were such that before the opening of the services in honor of the saint it was impossible to get standing room on the pavement of the edifice.

Father Hand made a short address, explaining the devotion of St. Anne, who was the mother of the Blessed Virgin, and urging all present to pray with faith for the favors they desired. He also made mention of the rare relic of St. Anne, a piece of the wrist bone of the saint. Fully 10,000 persons approached the altar to kiss the relic at the close of the services and it was estimated that more than 20,000 did so during the entire day.

TUESDAY NIGHT'S STORM.

Reports from seaside resorts in the vicinity of Norfolk yesterday seem to indicate that lives were lost in the terrific squall that swept Hampton Roads and the lower Chesapeake Tuesday night. A number of unidentified motor boats and small yachts were reported as being caught in the storm and none of them is known to have reached safety. Cottagers at Willoughby Beach, opposite Old Point Comfort, are confident that some of the boats they saw struggling in the 50-mile gale were swamped. A two-masted schooner capsized and came ashore at Willoughby. No sign of the crew has been seen. The Hampton Roads Yacht Club reports that several boats were in distress within view of the clubhouse.

W. R. Johnson, A. Martin and J. Haynes, composing a fishing party from Isle of Wight county, had a narrow escape when Houghton's fishhouse at Willoughby was blown over. The men were in a small gasoline auxiliary canoe when the fishery tumbled over on them. The men were at the time cooking with gasoline and their stove being overturned, set fire to the canoe. One man had to jump overboard and the others barely had time to get off before the boat went completely under water. All three of the pleasure seekers lost their clothing.

Another gasoline auxiliary was also caught under the fishhouse as it blew over and one of the occupants, Harry Powell, a machinist, sustained a fracture of the hip. The boat occupied by Messrs. Powell, Cotton and Taylor also took fire from burning gasoline but her sinking saved her from total destruction.

FUGITIVE CAPTURED.

Frank Moore, alleged murderer and fugitive from the Tennessee penitentiary from which it is said he escaped, was arrested by Policeman E. K. Stratton near the Union railroad station in Charlottesville late yesterday afternoon while eating a watermelon in a restaurant. When captured Moore remarked that it was a "d— good thing for Stratton he had lost his pistol." He was handcuffed and taken to the city jail.

MOORE IS A FUGITIVE FROM MORRISTOWN, TENN., BEING WANTED FOR THE MURDER OF CHARLES CLARKE, MOORE'S BROTHER-IN-LAW.

On April 20, following a quarrel over some ditches on their mountain farms, which adjoin, Moore is said to have shot his brother-in-law to death while the latter was unarmed and begging for his life.

It is said that Moore's record includes incarceration in the Tennessee penitentiary for theft and his escape from that institution.

Moore's act left his sister the sole support of a family of small children. A reward of $300 for his capture was offered by Governor Patterson. Moore says he will return to Tennessee without requisition papers.
