ALLEGED CONFESSION

Waite Will Be Charged With Murder of His Father-in-Law

New York, March 25—District Attorney Edward Swann yesterday said he had practically clinched his case against Dr. Arthur Warren Waite, young surgical dentist and tennis expert, accused of the murder of his millionaire father-in-law, John E. Peck.

Waite, it is alleged made a confession to Judge Swann. The alleged confession fell but one point short of the admission that John E. Peck died Sunday, March 12, from a lethal dose of arsenic administered under the bedside grilling of the district attorney, Waite said: "I bought the arsenic that killed Dr. Peck and gave it to him. He begged me to give him the poison saying that he wished to take his life. Mr. Peck was racked with illness and stricken with inconsolable grief over the death of his wife. "I did not kill Mr. Peck. This I swear. I know that you do not believe me and that this means the electric chair. Do with me as you like. I do not care whether I live or die. I have no remorse. A man has a right to take his life if he wishes."

Waite's confession came after he had been confronted with facts amassed by detectives working under Judge Swann. He would not talk to Judge Swann until the latter gave him the name of a druggist and physician through whom Waite had secured one and one-half grams of arsenic on March 9, three days before the death of Peck.

When he had concluded a seventy-minute interview with Waite, Judge Swann said he had not made up his mind whether the dentist's statement was intended as a crafty device to formulate an insanity defense or whether the young man hopes to escape the major penalty of his crime.

That his statement to Judge Swann was part of a general scheme he has worked out seemed apparent after a dramatic incident that occurred just after the district attorney left the room. Waite summoned Raymond Schindler, a private detective representing the Peck family, and asked him to give his colored maid, Dora Hillier, a $1,000 bribe to inform Judge Swann that she had heard Peck say to him: "Arthur, you must get me some poison. I have determined to commit suicide."

The district attorney's office during the day discovered several places where Waite bought poisons between December 21 and March 9. Benjamin Derry Gardner, who was the victim of an automobile accident on last Wednesday afternoon near Chase City, and who was taken to Danville in a serious condition, died yesterday morning, without regaining consciousness.

PARADE OF THE GROTTO WILL SEPARATE FAMILY

Law Takes Charge of Wife and Children of William J. Bruff Of This City.

The law yesterday took charge of the affairs of William J. Bruff, his wife, Helen Bruff, and three small children, Lillian 7 years old, William, 4 years old, and Martha 2 years old, and decided to have the family separated. A week ago Bruff was arrested charged with beating his little girl, Lillian, and an investigation by the police officers showed that the three children were not properly cared for by their parents, both of whom are in poor health. The children are feeble and undersized and have not received proper nourishment. Two other children are in institutions in Washington.

A commission composed of Justice R. B. Washington, and Drs. M. D. Delaney and Walter A. Warfield, with which Police Justice Harry B. Caton also conferred, sat upon the case and decided that the family should be separated. The father was sent to the Western Asylum for the insane at Staunton, Va., and the mother to an institution near Lynchburg. It was decided to turn the children over to the Children's Aid Society of Richmond. Policeman Kern and Garvey escorted the children to the railway station where they were met by an attaché of the home. The family have for some time past been living at 206 South Fairfax street where they have been existing in abject poverty.
