Spring Cleaning.

BY A REFUGEE.

The melancholy days have come, the saddest of the year,
Of cleaning paint and scrubbing floors, and scouring fac and seat;
Heaped in a corner of the room, the ancient dust lay quiet,
Nor rose up at the father's tread, nor at the children's frolic,
But now the carpets are all up, and from the staircase top
The mistress calls to maid and maid to wield the broom and mop.
Where are those rooms, those quiet rooms, the home but now deserted, Wherein we dwelt, nor dreamed of dirt, so easy
and contented?
Alas! they're turned all upside down, that quiet
suite of rooms,
With sops and suds, and soap and sand, and
tubs and mops and brooms, Chairs, tables, stands, are standing round at sixes and sevens,
While wife and housemaid fly about like nudes
in the heavens.
The parlor and best chamber floors were clean
a week ago;
The carpets shook, and windows washed as all the neighbors know
But still the sabbath has escaped, the table
placed with care,
Pens, ink and paper all about, peace in its very looks,
Till fell the woman on them all, as falls the plague on men,
And then they vanished all away, books, papers,
ink and pen,
And now when comes the master home, as come
he must of nights,
To find all things are "set to wrongs" that they have "set to rights,"
When sound of driving tracks is heard, though the house is far from still,
And the carpet woman on the stairs, the harbinger of ill,
He looks for papers, books or bills, that all were
there before,
And sighs to find them on the desk or in the
drawer to-morrow,
And wishes he grimly thinks of her who set this fuss about,
And wishes she was out at sea in a very leaky boat:
He meets her at the parlor door, with hair and cap
With sleeves tucked up, and broom in hand,
defiance in her eye;
He feels quite small and knows full well there's nothing to be said,
So holds his tongue, and drinks his tea, and snacks away to bed.

Canadian News.

Gold and silver have been discovered at the Huntington mine. Parties who have seen the result of the assay, says the Advertiser, state that in every ton of copper taken from the mine there is $5.00 worth of gold, and $40.00 worth of silver.
The St. Johns News of the 8th says: Yesterday afternoon three hundred and fifty able bodied young and middle aged men passed through this place for the States. They were on board the afternoon train from Montreal and come from a point below that city. Let not our statesmen talk of immigration when such alarming facts as these are daily staring us in the face.
The names of Judge Drummond and Lafontaine are both prominently before the public just now. The former has been impeached by Mr. T. K. Ramsay, who brings serious charges against him for alleged abuse of his position as a Judge. Judge Lafontaine is accused, by the people of Almyer, of perjury, incapacity, and defalcation of Government money. In both cases, these accusations are embodied in petitions to the House of Commons.
The Fate of the Apostles.
All the apostles were assaulted by the enemies of their Master. They were called to seal their doctrines with their blood, and nobly did they bear the trial. Schmaeher says:
St. Matthew suffered martyrdom by being slain with a sword at a distant city of Ethiopia.
St. Mark expired at Alexandria after having been cruelly dragged through the streets of that city.
St. Luke was hanged upon an olive tree in the classic land of Greece.
St. John was put into a cauldron of boiling oil, but escaped death in a miraculous manner, and was afterwards banished to Patmos.
St. James the Great was beheaded at Jerusalem.
St. James the Less was thrown from a lofty pinnacle of the temple and then beaten to death with a fuller's club.
St. Philip was hanged up against a pillar at Hierapolis in Phrygia.
St. Bartholomew was flayed alive.
St. Andrew was bound to a cross whence he preached to his persecutors until he died.
St. Thomas was run through the body with a lance at Coromandel in the East Indies.
St. Jude was shot to death with arrows.
St. Matthias was first stoned, and then beheaded.
St. Barnabas of the Gentiles, was stoned to death by the Jews at Salong.
St. Paul, after various tortures and persecutions, was at length beheaded at Rome by the Emperor Nero.

Senator Edmunds on Impeachment.

At the deliberation of the Senate on Monday, Senator Edmunds read his opinion from manuscript, of which we find the following abstract in the New York Times:
After declaring that he was not influenced by the partisan aspect of the case, Senator Edmunds explained his views regarding the judicial power of the Senate, and proceeded to argue at length for conviction on the charges of violating the Civil Tenure act. He argued that the charges were sustained by the proofs, and insisted that the only question then involved was whether the acts committed were crimes and misdemeanors. After quoting the constitutional provision regarding the appointing and confirming power, he proceeded to explain that the only powers granted to the President by the Constitution were those of Commander-in-Chief to grant reprieves and pardons; on the other hands his duties were distinctly defined. Among them being the responsibility of faithfully executing the laws. The limited powers which the framers of the Constitution thought fit to grant to the person who has to take the place of Kings and Emperors in systems of government hostile to liberty, could be easily named, and ought to be zealously defended. The duties relating to the execution of the laws could not be easily intrenched in detail, and from them could scarcely arise any danger to the Republic, for the President was not to execute the laws himself, but to take care that they be faithfully executed. This could only be done by just such and only the methods and agencies provided by the laws themselves. He could not rightfully violate the laws in order to enforce them.
After clearly stating these principles he proceeded to argue that the President could only use the power of appointment in the manner prescribed by the legislative department; he cannot accomplish a legal purpose by illegal means, or break the laws himself to prevent them being violated by others. To sustain this position he quoted the language of the Constitution that Congress shall have power to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing, i.e. the legislative powers, and all other powers vested by the Constitution in the Government of the United States or any department thereof. In view of these provisions he insisted that the power over the tenure of civil offices was vested in Congress, and that the framers of the Constitution intended to leave the selection of office-holders to the President, acting with the advice and consent of the Senate and leave to the whole Government, that is to the law-making power, full discretion as to the establishment of offices, and as to the time upon which and the tenure by which they should be held by the persons so selected.
Having thus argued the application of the Civil Tenure act to Secretary Stanton's case, he proceeded to explain that it had been violated by the President in his removal of that officer; he previously quoted a number of Supreme Court decisions sustaining his views regarding the legislative power, and then presented a lengthy statement of other authorities, including the members of the early Congresses; he then discussed the acts of 1792, 1795 and 1863, relating to ad interim appointments, and argued that Secretary Stanton was Secretary of War, notwithstanding the expiration of the term of office for which he had been confirmed, and consequently the Civil Tenure act held in his case. He dismissed the fourth article with the statement that it was not proven, and announced the same opinion regarding the conspiracy articles. He also dismissed the ninth in the same manner. Regarding the tenth and eleventh articles, he expressed the opinion that they did not come within the constitutional meaning of high crimes and misdemeanors.

A Sheep Shearing Machine.

The Woodstock Standard thus notes the advent of a sheep shearing machine in that vicinity.
By the politeness of Messrs. Cushing & Boynton we yesterday had an opportunity of observing the operation of shearing sheep by machinery, the machine used being that manufactured at Nashua, N. H., by the American Sheep Shearer Machine Manufacturing Company. To operate the machine requires two men, or a man and boy, one to hold the sheep and guide the cutter, and the other to turn the wheel. For this latter purpose a small boy is as good as a man. The cutter operates upon the same general principle as the mowing machine, differing only in that it revolves, while its attachment to the frame, being by means of two universal joints, renders it capable of being held in any position desired. It is claimed that the machine can do the work of two or three men, and we presume it might in the hands of an experienced operator; lacking such a man yesterday, it was, of course, working at a great disadvantage. Perhaps no better flock than that of Messrs. Cushing and Boynton could be found on which to test it, if we combine the very best condition of carcass with the heaviest fleeces, the former being a very important consideration if machinery is to be used for shearing. But while the process of shearing was novel and interesting, the wool taken from the backs of our neighbors' sheep is a sight far more rich and enjoyable. Such evenness, delicacy of color and texture, length and strength of staple, in so large a flock, are very remarkable, and are the result only of care and labor. They shear this season about 400, and the number of fleeces, taken at random, which exceed ten pounds in weight is, we had almost said, innumerable. On Tuesday 37 of the flock were sold, and started for Missouri.

Important to Stock Growers.

Blood, Beauty, Speed, Kindness and Endurance.
YOUNG DEXTER.
Those who desire to raise first-class stock, and all lovers of good horses, are respectfully informed that the Hambletonian trotting stallion, YOUNG DEXTER, will stand for a limited number of mares the ensuing season, at the Homestead Stock Farm, Greenwich, Washington County, N. Y.; season to commence on the 1st of May and to end on the 1st day of September. Young Dexter was bred at Chester, Orange County, N. Y., is four years old, by Rysdyk's Hambletonian, stands nearly 16 hands high, and is one of the best of the get of his celebrated sire, Young Dexter is a half brother to Dexter, George Wilkes, Bruno, Brunette—allied to Mountain Boy—and other well known horses. Very evidently, from his size, shape, etc., Young Dexter will not only bring gentle, fine and speedy stock, but also handsome carriage and family horses as well. It is manifestly for the benefit of stock growers that they obtain not only the best and most popular blood in the country, but also that which commands the highest prices in market, and it requires no more labor or care to raise a good colt than an inferior one. It was with a view to improve the stock of horses in Northern New York, Vermont and New Hampshire, etc., that Young Dexter was purchased by its present owner, Mr. H. C. Page, Editor of the People's Journal—the object being to benefit farmers and stock growers who are willing to undergo the care and expense necessary to the raising of good horses.

AGENTS WANTED FOR THE OFFICIAL HISTORY OF THE WAR.

Its Causes, Character, Conduct and Results!

By Hon. Alexander H. Stephens.

A Book for all Sections and all Parties.

This great work presents the only complete and impartial analysis of the causes of the War yet published, and gives these interior lights and shadows of the great conflict only known to those high officers who watched the flood-tide of revolution from its fountain springs, and which were so accessible to Mr. Stephens from his position as second officer of the Confederacy.

The public that has been surfeited with apparently similar productions, we promise a change of fare, both agreeable and salutary; and an intellectual treat of the highest order. The Great American War has at last found a historian worthy of its importance, and at whose hands it will receive that moderate, candid and impartial treatment which truth and justice so urgently demand.

The intense desire everywhere manifested to obtain this work, its official character and ready sale, combined with an increased commission, make it the best subscription book ever published.

One Agent in Easton, Pa., reports 72 subscribers in three days.
One in Boston, Mass., 103 subscribers in four days.
One in Memphis, Tenn., 106 subscribers in five days.

Send for circulars and see our terms, and a full description of the work, with press notices of advance sheets, &c.
