BASED ON INDUSTRY.
CAUSE OF THE GROWTH OF THE LOWELL OF THE SOUTH.

Marvelous Expansion of Cotton Manufacturing in South Carolina.
Spartanburg's Progress—How a Thriving City Grew.

The growth of the cotton manufacturing industry in the south in recent years has been by leaps and bounds, and nowhere is this more apparent than in Spartanburg county, S. C., sometimes called the Lowell of the south.

Uninformed visitors may be disposed to smile at the adoption of the description, "Lowell of the south." Lowell does not smile at it, for this is the great cotton manufacturing center of the south, the country that has set the example which other counties are following with advantage and great profit.

Angusta, Ga., talks with pride of her 200,000 spindles; Columbia, with scarce five years' experience in cotton manufacturing in real earnest, also boasts of 200,000 spindles and a promise of speedy increase; Spartanburg county calmly shows the record of 24 cotton mills, capitalized at $5,110,200, with 410,640 spindles and 12,454 looms, turning into cloth about 250,000 bales of cotton each year.

Each mill is a history in itself of the progress of the industrial movement in South Carolina. But all of them acknowledge an influence, the wisdom and sagacity of a leader who pointed out the way with a confidence, foresight, energy and ability that entitle him to the honor in which his memory is held—D. E. Converse, a Virginian, born in 1828, who was the pioneer in cotton manufacturing in that part of South Carolina.

These great mills have made of a once diminutive but pleasant town a large and thriving one, with a future that must be full of comfort to those who choose to settle down here almost under the shadow of the hills of the Blue Ridge. In 1870 the population was 1,070. In 1890, after the development of cotton spinning and weaving had begun, it had increased to 5,500. Judging by the public school attendance it is now considered a moderate estimate to put the population at 17,000. With the influx of builders, of mill operatives, of persons interested in the direction of new enterprises, all sorts of business have marched along until now the number of wholesale houses is impressive, and the increase in the number of churches and schools and the quality of all such structures tell of the prosperity of the mills, running night and day, and of the share that the people of the town have in it.

The natural attractions, the scenery, the water supply, the health statistics, invite more comers from the mountain and the lowlands. The statement that more than 1,000 houses have been built in the last year ought to convey an idea of the activity prevailing in this bustling little city, with its quaint, old fashioned, irregular public square, or unadorned with a fine bronze statue in honor of Morgan, the patriotic rifleman of the Revolution. The stores are many and well stocked. Along the street are seen many mountaineers, the tall, athletic men of the type found in eastern Kentucky and Tennessee, and you are told that there has been a greater infusion of them in recent years than before the industrial era set in. The schools are not only in good buildings, but are said to be as efficient as the best in the south.

A short drive from the center of the town to the eastward brings the visitor to Converse college, an institution broadly established and liberally endowed by D. E. Converse, the gentleman whose enterprise encouraged and guided the recent development of the cotton manufacturing in this part of South Carolina. Within certain limits it is an independent institution. It is Christian, but not denominational, and the founder took great pains that his intentions should be carried out. The situation and grounds are superb. Upon the highest spot in Spartanburg, elevated 1,200 feet above the sea level, with 50 acres of ground about the establishment and commanding a view of the nearby Blue Ridge that is exquisite, there are fine brick buildings costing $120,000 that are complete in every detail. The main building is 400 feet long and 190 feet deep and contains 175 rooms. Converse college is exclusively for girls. There are also other excellent educational institutions in Spartanburg.

Public spirit is asserting itself in Spartanburg. J. C. Garlington, the proprietor of The Herald, who cherishes a worthy ambition for the town, predicts that it will not be long before the many evidences of awakening enterprise will be crystallized in improvements that will add to the comfort of a place greatly favored by nature. Hitherto there has been so much concentration of interest in the construction of mills that there has been little attention given to municipal improvements. For the sake of business in its closely built up main street Spartanburg must soon have pavements. It is promising to be rich. It cannot afford to be wastefully economical.

Making Dairy Cows
IT IS EASIER TO BREED THE RIGHT KIND THAN TO BUY THEM.

The average dairyman, by instinct or education, has come to realize that a cow is not merely an animal with a leg on each corner, writes W. F. McSparan in The National Stockman. Many a farmer knows pretty well when he sees a good cow, not because he has studied or perhaps even seen a scale of points, but because he does. He knows there are cows and cows, and the more he knows that the more difficult it becomes for him to acquire by purchase such cows as he knows he wants. He wants the bag and teats and body and back and head and heart and hide of a cow, and when he drives around and finds this combination in one cow or organism he finds her owner does not want to sell her. If he goes to the public sale or auction, where a great many kinds, but very few of the one-kind, go, and he picks out that one kind as meeting the specifications, he finds a number of other men also who want her, and the man who is willing to back his judgment with the most cash or the biggest note gets her.

Numerous experiences along the line of trying to buy such cows as he wants finally teach him what he should have known in the beginning of his business as a dairyman, that he must produce what he wants. And just here is where he is apt to make the gravest and most lasting mistake of the breeder—trying to breed up and buying the sire of his herd "way down."

It is past the day of trying to serve many masters in any line of business. The tendency is all toward specialties and intensification. If a man is in the dairy business, he is in error when he tries to serve butter and beef from the same dairy. He needs cows for milk, cream and butter. As he branches to butter he grows away from these. He must select his butter breed and hunt a sire with individual merit enough to make him conspicuous and an ancestral tendency that carries a guarantee that he will produce after his kind. Then buy him. He may cost three or four cows, but buy him. If he is a calf, clearly defined to the buyer's mind, should be the bull he wants to make him and then make him that. He must not be used until old enough and only then according to his age and strength. When his heifer calves come with a royal right to be better than their dams, it must be seen to that their rights are recognized by being fed and cared for toward their useful cowhood.

There has been so much said and written in warning lest the future cow be fed so as to lay on fat and grow into a beef animal instead of a desirable member of the dairy that the starvation plan is too often followed to the permanent hurt of the subject, and careful investigation of feeding young stock intended for the dairy will show more spoiled by timid underfeeding than by judicious full feeding. A mere matter of good feeding can scarcely change the tendency of heredity, and if you fill the calf's belly and its back gets fat send it to the butcher before you lose a lot of feed and care trying to make a cow of it. If fed at all intelligently, there will be no trouble with the young thing that is to make a profitable cow getting fat. That is heresy, but it is the truth. Being well fed, she will be big enough when old enough to make her start toward cowhood. Let her mate be better than she is. Try to have a cow when 20 to 24 months old. Having always treated her as a lady, treat her now as a mother as well. Keep her clean and give her plenty of good feed and pure water. If she shows a physical defect, breed it away in her offspring. If up to your ideas of what a cow should be, breed her offspring to its sire and take a seat among the public benefactors.

The Dirty Patron.
 All clean, intelligent patrons of a creamery or cheese factory whose property every day is endangered by the actions of a dirty patron will agree with the vigorous manner in which a writer in an Illinois paper goes for him in the following:

The dirty patron is the bane of the creamery and of every attempt at cooperative butter making. Some folks, the many, are instinctively clean; others, the few, are constitutionally and instinctively dirty. Paraphrasing the commandment "The dirty sins of the one dirty patron are visited continuously upon the ninety and nine clean ones." The dirty patron as he runs his dirty hand into the pail of foaming milk to get a material to still further lubricate the dirty teats of the cow he is milking and lets the pasty and odorous product of the effect drip into the pail can paralyze the effects of the best butter maker in America. This constitutionally dirty patron is proof against remonstrance, entreaty or threat, and there is really only one thing to be done with him, and that is to fire him. The tainted product of the one dirty patron will lower the grade of the entire product of the creamery with which he is connected, and it may really be said that he is the worst leak connected with the management of nearly all creameries. Fire him, gently if you can, but fire him.

Newspaper Advertising.
 A correspondent writes to Printers' Ink that the most advertised thing in the advertising world today is advertising itself. In every mail the business man receives arguments and statements as to the value of using space in newspapers, circulars and posters; every day advertising solicitors set before him the ease with which money has been made or may be made by appealing to the public through their respective media. This "hammering away" has had its effect in making the claims of advertising generally acknowledged.

These serials are copyrighted by The Living Age and will appear only in this magazine.

Published Weekly at $6.00 per year.

Single Numbers 15 Cents.

A NECESSITY TO EVERY READER OF INTELLIGENCE AND LITERARY TASTE.
 Each Weekly Number Contains Sixty-Four Pages.

In which are given, without abridgment, the most interesting and important contributions to the periodicals of Great Britain and the Continent, from the weighty articles in the quarterlies to the light literary and social essays of the weekly literary and political journals. Science, Politics, Biography, Art, Travel, Public Affairs, Literary Criticism and all other departments of knowledge and discussion which interest intelligent readers are represented in its pages.

The Siege of the Legations

THE LIVING AGE will begin in its issue for November 17, and will continue for several successive numbers, a thrilling account of The Siege of the Legations, written by Dr. Morrison, the well known correspondent of the London Times at Peking. This narrative is of absorbing interest in its descriptions of the daily life of the besieged legations, and it is noteworthy also as containing some disclosures relating to the inside history of what went on at Peking in those stirring days, which are altogether new and of the utmost importance. The unusual length of Dr. Morrison's narrative has precluded and probably will preclude any other publication of it on this side of the Atlantic. In England it has attracted wide notice.
