Cures permanently the cases he undertakes and sends the incurable home without taking a fee from them. This is why he continues his visits year after year, while other doctors have made a few visits and stopped. Dr. Jones is an eminently successful specialist in all chronic diseases, proven by the many cures effected in chronic cases which have baffled the skill of other physicians. His hospital experience and extensive practice have made him so proficient that he can name and locate a disease in a few minutes.

Treats all curable cases of Lung Disease, Consumption in early stage, Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowels, Gravel, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Nervousness, Sick Headache, Heart, Blood and Skin Diseases, Epilepsy, Appendicitis, Rupture and Bright's Disease, Diseases of Bladder, and Tobacco habit.

Absorption treatment given for Catarrh and Granulated Eyelids.

Special attention given to all Surgical cases, and all Diseases of the Eye, Ear, Nose, Throat, Ringing in Ears and Deafness.

I have a seldom failing remedy for Colic, Croup, Erysipelas without pain. Glasses fitted and guaranteed.

Remarkable cures are perfected in cases of Catarrh, and all catarrhal discharges, Rheumatism of muscles and joints, Eczema, Scall, Headed Poison, Nervous Debility, St. Vitus Dance.

Piles, Fissure, Fistula
 Guaranteed Cured Without Surgical Operation or Detention from Business. All kinds of piles and rectal disease treated. Piles in the general health, produce indigestion, bloating and nervousness. Often cause untold suffering and much loss of blood. Come and see even though you have been told a surgical operation was necessary. Hundreds of such cases cured.

Chronic Diseases of Men and Women a Specialty
 Space forbids the mention of but a few of the chronic diseases which I treat of both men and women. If you are nervous, excitable and irritable dependent, weak and easily tired out. If you have lack of energy, want of confidence, deposit in nose, or if you are a woman and have headache, backache or pain in side, or treated by a quack, or if you are married ladies should beheadquartered by their husbands.

Wonderful Cures
 Perfected in old cases which have been neglected or unskillfully treated. No experiments or failures. We do not undertake incurable cases, but cure thousands given up to die.

The Root of Evil

By THOMAS DIXON

"So I am, boy, so I am! That's why I gave you a glimpse tonight of the world in which I live and work and dream."

 "Bivens has put up to you a cold blooded business proposition."
 "Exactly. And there are things that can't be bought and sold. I am one of them!" The stalwart figure rose in simple dignity, and there was a deep tremor in his voice as he paused.
 "But I'm keeping you. It's 9 o'clock and somebody's waiting—eh, boy?"
 "Yes," Stuart answered apologetically. "I'm afraid I've not been of much use to you tonight."
 The doctor bent closer, smiling: "I understand—of course. The angels are singing in your heart this evening the old song of life that always makes the world new and young and beautiful. And yet—it couldn't be measured in terms of barter and sale, could it?" The doctor gripped his hand tenderly in parting.
 The smile died from the younger man's face, and his answer was scarcely audible: "No."

CHAPTER II. A Lovers' Quarrel.

WHEN Stuart reached the Gramercy park house a maid answered at last and ushered him into the dimly lighted parlor.
 "Miss Nan is at home, Berta?" he asked eagerly.
 The little Danish maid smiled knowingly: "Na, but Meesis Primrose!"
 With a groan Stuart sank to a chair. The entire house had been redecorated. An oriental rug of dazzling medallion pattern was on the newly polished floor. Instead of the set of Chipendale mahogany the Primroses had brought from the south a complete outfit of stately gilded stuff filled the room, and heavy draperies to match hung from the tall windows and folding doors. The mother's velvet hand he saw at once. Of course she had not borrowed the money from Bivens. She was too shrewd for that. But she had evidently gone the limit of her credit without a moment's hesitation. He wondered how far she had got with Bivens. Could it be possible that Nan was with him tonight? No—preposterous!
 Mrs. Primrose greeted him with unusual effusion:
 "Oh, Jim, this is such a glorious surprise! Nan didn't expect you till morning, and she will be heartbroken to have missed you even for a half hour. My dear, dear boy, you have no idea how lonely both of us have been without you the past two weeks."
 "You missed me, too, Mrs. Primrose?"
 "Of course I missed you, Jim! You've come to be like one of us. You know I've always loved you next to Nan."
 She spoke with such fervor that Stuart shivered. It was sinister. She evidently felt sure of his ruin.
 "We needed you here so much to help us fix up. We've had the good luck to rent our second floor to a young millionaire!"
 "Mr. Bivens, yes?"
 "Why, how did you know?" she asked with a start.
 "Dr. Woodman has just received an important letter from him, dated here, and he asked my advice about it."
 "Oh!"
 "Where's Nan?" Stuart asked.

sudden anger in spite of his effort to keep cool.
 "Why, she's giving a little box party at the theater tonight!"
 "And our mutual friend, John C. Calhoun Bivens, is presiding?"
 "Why, Jim, how could you be so absurd?" she protested indignantly. "I've been saving money for a month to give Nan this chance to return some courtesies she has received from rich friends. I need Mr. Bivens' money to pay the rent of this big house. But any attention on his part to Nan would be disgusting to me beyond measure."
 "Yet he's the sensation in high finance just now," Stuart said, with an unconscious sneer. "They say he's destined to become a multi-millionaire."
 "Come, come, Jim, it's not like you to be nasty to me. You know as well as I do his origin in North Carolina. His people are the veriest trash. He was at college with you!"
 "And how did you know that?"
 "Not from you, of course. You've never mentioned his name in your life. He told me. He thinks you are going to be the greatest lawyer in New York. And I told him we'd known that for a long time."
 Stuart turned his head to hide a smile.
 "But of course he's not in Nan's social set. I told her the day he came that we would treat him politely, but draw the line strictly on any efforts he may make to pass the limits of acquaintance."
 A carriage stopped at the door.
 "There's Nan now," the mother exclaimed, rising to go. "I'll leave you to surprise her, Jim."
 Stuart heard the carriage door slam, and in a moment the girl he loved stood in the hall, the joy of an evening's perfect happiness shining in her great dark eyes. He watched her a moment unobserved as she laid aside her opera cloak and stood before the big mirror proudly and calmly surveying her figure. Never had her beauty seemed to him so dazzling. The smile was one of conscious power. The corners of the full sensuous lips curved the slightest bit as the smile faded and a gleam of something like cruelty flashed from the depths of her eyes as her head lifted.
 Stuart, unable to wait longer, was about to spring to her side when she caught the flash of his laughing face in the mirror and turned.
 "Oh, you rascal! To surprise me like this!" she cried, with joyous laughter. "In all your pride and vanity!"
 "You can't help being a little vain yourself, Jim, any more than I can. You know you're a stunning looking fellow. These Yankee girls all love you at first sight—the tall, straight, sinewy figure, strong and swift in every movement, the finely chiselled face, the deep set, dark brown eyes under their heavy brows, that big masterful jaw and firm mouth!"
 Stuart suddenly took her in his arms and kissed her into silence.
 "Hush, Nan. I don't like the way you say that."
 "Why? Am I too modest?"
 "No, too deliberate and coldly measured of yourself. I wish you loved me a little more tumultuously as I do you."
 "Well, let me whisper then that your return tonight has made a perfect ending to a perfect day. Oh, Jim, I've been so happy tonight! Seated in that big stage box I felt that I was somebody. This is the first really decent dress I've ever had in my life."
 "And you are proud and happy?"
 "Proud for your sake, Jim, yes; and happy in your love."
 Stuart's face clouded and he turned away, startled for the first time by a strange similarity in the tone of Nan's voice to her mother's.
 The painful impression was suddenly broken by a quick touch of Nan's hand on his arm.
 "Oh, Jim, I'm glad you came a day earlier. I've something to tell you, something wonderful, something that will bring our happiness near!" Her voice sank to the tenderest accents. "You know Mr. Bivens?"
 "Yes," Stuart answered evenly, controlling himself with an effort.
 "Well, he has taken our second floor. I had a long talk with him last week. By the merest accident I learned that his big trust, the American Chemical company, needs another lawyer. They pay an enormous salary with all sorts of chances to get rich. They are making millions on millions. I told him that you were the very man for the place and that you were going to be the greatest lawyer in New York. Imagine my joy when he not only agreed with me, but said he would double the salary if you would accept it. He thought you wouldn't, merely because you lived in the house of old Woodman with whom the company may have a fight. I told him it was nonsense, that I knew you would accept. You'll accept, of course?"
 "Emphatically no!"
 "You can't be so absurd!"
 "Have you been receiving the attentions of this distinguished young millionaire, Nan?"
 "I've been cultivating him."
 "Cultivating?"
 "Yes, for your sake only, you big, handsome, foolish, jealous boy! You can't be in earnest when you say that you will refuse such an offer?"
 "Yes, because I will not become the hireling of a corporation, to say nothing of this particular one headed by Mr. Bivens."
 "Nonsense, Jim. You wouldn't be a hireling. You would lay the law down for them to follow."
 "No. A modern corporation has no soul, and the man who serves this master must sell both body and soul for the wages he receives. I am a lawyer of the old school. My work is illumined by imagination. My business is to enforce justice in the relations of men."

 "But some of the greatest lawyers in America are corporation attorneys!"
 "All the reason more why I should keep clean. Lawyers once constituted our aristocracy of brain and culture. I can't prostitute my talents to a work I don't believe in. A man's work is a revelation of what he is. And what he is will depend at last on what he does."
 "But you mean to be rich and powerful, Jim?"
 "If it comes with the growth of manhood and character, yes. But I will not degrade myself with work I hate or take orders from men I despise. The world is already full of such slaves."
 Stuart paused and laid his hand gently on the girl's white, round arm, and she turned, with a start.
 "I didn't hear your last sentence, Jim."
 "Of what were you thinking?"
 "Of what a woman is always thinking—consciously or unconsciously, of my home—whether it shall be a hotel or a palace."
 "It all depends on whether love is the builder!"
 "It all depends on the man I marry," was the laughing answer. "I've always dreamed of you as a man of wealth and power. Your splendid talents mean this. When you came to New York I was more sure of you than ever. You've simply got to make money, Jim. Nothing else counts in the world today. I hate poverty—I fear it—I loathe it!"
 "And yet," the lover said, drawing closer. "I hold the touch of your little finger of greater value than all the gold on the earth or beneath it."
 "Don't interrupt me, please, with irrelevant remarks," Nan cried, laughing in spite of herself. "Seriously, Jim—you must listen to me. I'm in dead earnest. You must have money, if for no other reason because I wish it. I can't be happy in poverty. The man I love must be rich. Oh, Jim, you shall be! Wealth is the only road now from the vulgar crowd—the only way to climb on top."
 "But suppose I don't wish to climb on the top of people?"
 "You can't be such a fool!"
 "But suppose I am? True civilization has always placed manhood above money."
 "Jim, are you crazy?"
 "It's true, dear. My father gave up his law practice to bend over my mother's bedside for six months. He was a giant in mind and body—she a poor little, broken, withered invalid. He lost money and clients and never regained them. Did it pay? Does anything that's born of love pay? Surely not children. I was always a dead expense. The biggest fee I ever received as a lawyer in New York was a shout of joy from a poor woman whose boy I freed from a false charge of crime. She fell sobbing before me and actually kissed my feet."
 "Oh, Jim, why can't you be practical? Why are you not willing to fight for a fortune—as other men?"
 "Because, dear," he answered quickly and tenderly. "We haven't time—you and I. Life is too short. Love is too sweet. The fields are too green."

"The man I love must be rich."
 The birds sing too sweetly. Have you forgotten our old day dreams in the fields at home?"
 "I've forgotten everything," she answered bitterly, "except that you are falling me when put to the first test. And it would be such a little thing for you to do."
 "At the price of my self respect—and you call this a little thing. Great God!"
 Nan rose with a sudden gesture of impatience.
 "You refuse absolutely to consider this generous offer?"
 "Absolutely."
 "And you are willing that the woman you love shall live in poverty while her more fortunate sisters laugh and dance in luxury?"
 "The one joy of my life will be to gratify every reasonable wish of your body and soul."
 "Yet the first reasonable wish I express you refuse to consider. Mr. Bivens says he would make you a millionaire in five years. You're only twenty-six now."
 "That's very kind of Mr. Bivens. I'm sure. When I need his patronage I'll take my place in line with other henchmen and ask for it."

 Nan suddenly extended her hand.
 "Good night."
 He attempted to draw her into his arms.
 She repulsed him and repeated her cold dismissal:
 "Good night."
 "Nan, dear," he pleaded, "we've never parted in anger before. Of all the hours of my life this is one in which I—I—least dreamed of such a thing."
 Without a word she turned toward the stairs.
 "Nan!" he called tenderly.
 With a sob she threw herself into his arms.
 "Forgive me, Jim."
 "Forgive me, dear, if I've seemed unreasonable," was the low answer.
 "But you will think it over, won't you? just for my sake—just because I ask it—won't you?"
 "Just because you ask it—yes, I will, dearest."
