Accused Pays Both Fines.

Two strangers from Hampton, Ia., were in Justice N. F. Earl's court Monday morning, one Herman Meyer claiming that he had been robbed of $14 by the other Lewis Fourland. They met by chance on the train coming to Austin and a bottle of whiskey created intimacy. The apparently came up for a supply of Minnesota liquor to take back with them to the prohibition state as both had considerable money when they struck Austin.

In the course of the trial it developed that while in an Austin saloon, Meyer missed his roll of money and naturally suspected that Fourland had taken it. In the examination it was disclosed that both were so drunk that they could not have sure knowledge of what happened, the only thing evident being that Meyer's purse was empty when he struck court and that Fourland had quite a bit left. Justice Earl fined each of them $10 and costs for drunkenness and when poor Meyer had not the wherewith Fourland stepped forward and paid both fines on the promise that Meyer would pay him later. Whiskey is a poor traveling companion.

NOTICE.

Commencing August 1st, 1913, THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF AUSTIN, MINN., will issue its Time Certificates of Deposit bearing interest at four per cent per annum for twelve months and at three per cent per annum for six months, being an increase in the rate of one per cent per annum above the rates paid by this bank for several years. This action is taken because the rates now obtainable upon Bonds and long term Securities, which are legal investments for Savings Banks, are such as to justify paying that rate. Indications are that an active demand for money at higher rates than formerly is likely to continue for some time. The bank feels that its depositors should receive this increase. All depositors now holding our interest bearing Certificates are hereby notified that they can hold their existing certificates until they become due, as usual, at which time, when presented, the interest will be computed and paid on them at one per cent per annum increase from August 1st, 1913.

We take this occasion to express our appreciation and gratitude to our friends and customers who have so loyally remained with us, and to assure them as well as all new depositors, that it is our purpose to provide a safe place where accumulated savings can be deposited and earn for the depositor as high a rate of interest as conditions warrant, and as prudence, conservatism and security will permit.
