The roads are drying out quite fast and if they could only be dragged with a harrow they would soon be nice and smooth, and would be in better shape when the first rain comes to shed the water. Some farmers take pride in doing this work along their land and seem to feel well repaid for the work in the praise they receive from everyone.

Considerable interest was manifested in the good roads meeting held in Austin on Saturday afternoon. County President John Christgau was in charge, and Mr. Forbes of the state highway commission, addressed the meeting. While Mr. Forbes may understand his business it was the expression of almost everyone present that he was a mighty poor man to be sent out to explain the matters in question. He was not fully conversant with the new road law to explain it satisfactorily and worst of all he has not a good voice for a public speaker.

Mrs. O. D. Lambert very pleasantly entertained the croquet club at her home on Thursday afternoon. The guests making the discovery during the afternoon that the day was not only her birthday but the anniversary of her wedding, conspired together, and presented her with a lovely china plate as a small reminder of the occasion.
