Upon the present prospects of high priced grain wouldn't it pay to save every kernel?

Would it not be economy to repair that old granary, corn crib or take it down and rebuild a more modern building, something that would keep the grain in, the water out?

We have for years made a business of building farm buildings and have assembled at our yard a complete stock of material, the best to be had for the purpose.

We are at your service at all times to help plan your building.
