

WHY not give your lad the same training?

"When I was a growing lad, and came upon many words in my reading that I did not understand, my mother, instead of giving me the definition when I applied to her, uniformly sent me to the dictionary to learn it, and in this way I gradually learned many things besides the meaning of the individual words in question—among other things, how to use a dictionary, and the great pleasure and advantage there might be in the use of the dictionary. Afterwards, when I went to the village school, my chief diversion, after lessons were learned and before they were recited, was in turning over the pages of the 'Unabridged' of those days. Now the most modern Unabridged—the NEW INTERNATIONAL—gives me a pleasure of the same sort. So far as my knowledge extends, it is at present the best of the one-volume dictionaries, and quite sufficient for all ordinary uses. Even those who possess the splendid dictionaries in several volumes will yet find it a great convenience to have this, which is so compact, so full, and so trustworthy as to leave, in most cases, little to be desired."—Albert S. Cook, Ph.D., LL.D., Professor of the English Language and Literature, Yale Univ. April 28, 1911.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

To Our Readers: In taking over the Transcript we feel we appreciate fully the responsibility and the work which will be ours to keep the Mower County Transcript up to that high degree of excellence it attained under the management and editorship of Rev. C. D. Belden. For twenty-three years, the Transcript, under his guidance, stood for those things which speak for better things. He has always stood for a severe but a just, and always advocated what he believed would be for the betterment of public service and civic righteousness. With the purpose at heart to continue this work, to give our readers all the news that is clean, to give them a paper that will represent all parts of our county and to give them a paper which will be a credit to all, we will need the assistance of those noble friends of the Transcript of the past. Our country correspondents and all—Friends who so often dropped into the office with items of interest—we recognize the fact that the first requisite of a good newspaper is news. If we fail in that we fail in everything. We earnestly hope that those friends, who aided so much in making the Mower County Transcript a valuable newspaper will stay by us in our work. We want our readers to have the best newspaper that can be made and with their aid it can be accomplished.

ANNA B. ROBLE.

From Austin Daily Herald of Wednesday, Feb. 17:
The new owner of the Transcript is well known in the local newspaper field, having been associated with the work since 1896. For a number of years she was with the Herald and later she was connected with newspaper work in Jamestown, N. D. For the last four years she has been with the Transcript. Since Mr. Belden's illness she has had full charge of the plant. For several weeks previous to the date of the transfer, Feb. 1, she had been negotiating for the property with the intention of having one of her brothers associated with her in the work. Miss Roble knows news and is quick and accurate with the pen.
The Herald extends its congratulations and wishes her the best of success.

Formosa's Leading Industry.
In spite of all its difficulties the camphor industry is Formosa's chief source of revenue. Over eight million pounds of the drug, valued at nearly three million dollars, are marketed every year. Once the head-hunters are subdued, the annual crop will be much larger and the price to the ultimate consumer much lower than at present.

CHEAP FEEDS ARE SOMETIMES COSTLY

Straw and Corn Stover May Be Fed at Expense of the Milk Yield.

BY A. J. M'GUIRE, Extension Division, Minnesota College of Agriculture.

A feed for dairy cows may be cheap and yet not cheap from the standpoint of milk-production. If we may regard straw as a feed, it is cheap, but the farmer who uses straw largely in feeding cows will find it very expensive. It does not contain milk-producing substances, and it is a waste of time, labor and cows to use straw in any quantity. Hence it is an expensive feed. Corn stover (corn stalks from which the ears have been husked) is also an expensive feed for the same reason, when it is the only roughage used for cows.

Clover-hay, when cut in season and properly cured, is the cheapest milk-producing feed that can be grown on the average farm. Alfalfa is also a cheap milk-producing feed, more valuable per ton than clover, but not fitting in so well in crop-rotations.

Clover and Alfalfa.
Either or both of these feeds should be grown on every farm where cows are kept for milk-production. It is not necessary that clover or alfalfa should make up the entire rough feed. Fodder-corn, timothy or wild hay, some corn stover or even straw may make up part of the roughage, but at least half of the rough feed should be clover or alfalfa, to get the most economical and profitable results.

With clover or alfalfa no mill feeds (bran, shorts, etc.) need be purchased to make up a balanced ration where there is a sufficient supply of farm-grown grains—oats, corn and barley. The farm-grown grains, combined with clover or alfalfa, make a balanced ration, and a balanced ration, when it can be produced on the farm, is always cheapest.

Fodder-Corn is Cheap.
Fodder-corn (corn grown thickly) is a cheap feed and contains considerable milk-producing substance. It gives best results when fed in connection with clover or alfalfa. Fodder-corn yields an abundance of feed per acre—from three to six tons of cured fodder—and a crop can be produced in three months. It is a splendid supplement to the hay crop.

Roots as a milk-producing feed will take the place of ensilage on the small farm, where a sufficient number of cows are not kept to warrant the silo. Roots will also take the place of grain to a considerable extent. Like grass, roots contain a large quantity of water and they need to be fed in large quantities when they are used in place of grain. Aside from their actual food value, roots have a value as nature's medicine. They are a valuable tonic for dairy cows when only dry feeds are used.

Wise Fathers.
In these days it is a wise father who does not dread to know his own soil—Life.
