ON THE FRONTIER.

Two giant minds have stamped the mental world.
Instructors of our times and times to be:
Telling to bring mankind to harmony,
Smoke from each study on the frontier curled.
They searched more for finality than growth.
Not for the footprint but the thought of God.
They worshipped wisdom in the chattering rod
That scars transgressors, and yet both
Felt beauty as she moves through cycles vast.
And knew the hopefulness that cheers us here
In our promotion toward the perfect sphere:
They loved the future and esteemed the past.
Revere their lives, O man, for ne'er again
Will this old world contain two lovelier men.
—Edward B. Creaser in New York Sun.

A Ruined Wedding Cake.

An English gentleman residing in Calcutta brought an action against a firm of Paris pastry cooks and confectioners under rather interesting circumstances. The plaintiff was about to be married and ordered what has been called a phenomenal wedding cake from the defendants. A sum of $120 was paid down for the cake on delivery. The colossal and expensive article of confectionary was packed by the plaintiff's order, and he took it with him to Calcutta. On opening the case containing the cake when he arrived in India, the Englishman found that he had literally nothing but a shapeless mass of crumbs. The splendid gateau had been hopelessly bruised and broken during the voyage.

An action was then brought against the Paris firm for a sum of $135, which included, besides the price paid for the cake, the cost of packing and transport. The defendants maintained before the Paris tribunal of commerce that they had no more responsibility after they had delivered over the cake to the person who ordered it. It was true that they recommended a packer, but that expert acted under the orders of another individual, who had been selected by the plaintiff to superintend the operation. The tribunal decided in favor of the defendants. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Two Convincing Reasons.

Lord Peterborough, who lived in the reign of Queen Anne, was very frolicsome, and one day seeing from his carriage a dancing master with pearl colored stockings lightly stepping over the broad stones and picking his way in extremely dirty weather he alighted and ran after him with drawn sword in order to drive him into the mud, but into which he of course followed himself.

This nobleman was once taken for the Duke of Marlborough and was mobbed in consequence. The duke was then in disgrace with the people, and Lord Peterborough was about to be roughly handled. Turning to them, he said:

"Gentlemen, I can convince you by two reasons that I am not the Duke of Marlborough. In the first place, I have only 5 guineas in my pocket, and in the second they are heartily at your service." —Sala's Journal.

Reproved by the Prince.

Not long ago the Prince of Wales was one of a house party, his host being a well known peer. After dinner the royal guest, the host and the other male visitors repaired to the billiard room. On a table at the side were two or three boxes of cigars, and the prince was helping himself to one, when an ambitious millionaire approached him, and taking from his pocket a cigar case held it out to the prince, saying, "I think, sir, you will find these better."

"Mr. —," replied the prince, "if a man's dinner is good enough for me, his cigars are good enough for me."

The millionaire was unexpectedly called away to town next morning on business. —Detroit Free Press.

Newspaper Advertising.

How much money is spent annually in newspaper advertising? Probably any estimate less than $200,000,000 would fall short of the facts. Some single firms have spent as much as $500,000 in a year. To put out such enormous sums requires a large machinery in and out of the advertisers' offices, and the business—or the art, as you may choose to consider it—commands the services of men of a high order of ability. —John Irving Romer's Lecture.

The Bones Were All There.

An auctioneer in a New England city recently sold a horse at auction for 50 cents. The horse was so bony that the auctioneer said, by way of explanation, that "they (the bones) were exhibited intentionally, for the purpose of showing that none had been extracted." —Profitable Advertising.

Hopeless.

Physician (severely)—I have no hesitation in saying, sir, that your wife's nervous fits are occasioned by your staying out so late every night.

Witherby—Great heavens, doctor, I didn't know she was suffering from an incurable disease! —Exchange.

Although the French president travels free on the railways during his official tour in France, his secretary calculates what it would have cost if paid for at regular rates, and this sum is handed over to be distributed among the poorest paid of the railway men.

Aluminium has been put into another use. The French couturieres now use the metal in the making of the modern gown. A hoop of aluminium is placed in the bottom of the skirt for the purpose of making it hang well.

Germany is the greatest zinc producing country in the world. The main district is in Upper Silesia, where the metal is made from calamine and zinc blended by distillation.
