CONGRESSMAN JAMES T. McCLEARY.

A GREAT MEETING.

United States Senator W. D. Washburn and Congressman James T. McCleary

Address an Immense Audience
At Grand Army Hall.

Fully Three Hundred People
Fail to Gain Admittance.

It only needed the simple announcement that United States Senator W. D. Washburn and Congressman J. T. McCleary were to speak at Worthington to draw out the republican clans of Nobles and adjoining counties, and also a good sprinkling of democrats and populists. Wednesday evening, as per announcement, Grand Army hall was fire to its fullest capacity, and fully three hundred people were unable to get in, all anxious to hear the great republican orators.

Senator Washburn spoke first and for one hour and ten minutes held the closest attention of his vast audience. The Senator was not in condition, physically, to speak yet handled his subject with much vigor and conciseness. He dwelt wholly upon the falacies of the so-called Wilson bill, and, we believed, convinced all who heard him that the bill as it now stands is most damaging to the farming industries, inasmuch as nothing that the farmer produces is in any way protected, while all he has to buy is protected, notably coal (which had to be protected in order to placate Senator Brice.) Other Senators were purchased in the same way—by giving protection to some article in some article in which they were directly interested, leaving the great masses, the farmers and laboring men no protection but subjecting them to the unjust competition of the pauper labor of the old world. They even went so far as to place an extra burden upon the poor man by placing a duty on sugar, thus enhancing the price nearly 40 per cent. "The whole trend of democratic ambition," said the Senator, seemed to be to place extra burdens upon the farmers and how they have carried out that desire is clearly shown in the Wilson bill.

The Senator did not have the time he desired, nor the physical strength, to show up every inconsistency of that abominable abontion known as the Wilson bill.

Senator Washburn made a splendid impression on this people, and we believe the republicans of this county, without exception, heartily desire his re-election. He has accomplished more for the state of Minnesota than any Senator we have ever had, he is thoroughly honest, brainer, active and alert, therefore should be kept in the upper branch of congress just as long as he will consent to serve.

Congressman Jas. T. McCleary followed with a clear cut, able address upon finance. Mr. McCleary has made a deep and careful study of the money question back to the beginning of time, and up to the present day.

The speaker did not disappoint any one who had come to hear him; they all came expecting to hear this great and momentous question discussed in a learned and honest manner, and that is just what they received. He did not make a statement that could not be verified—many times during his address he called upon older members of the audience to "call him down" if he made a statement that was not true. There were a lot of good old democrats in the hall, but all seemed to consider that Mr. McCleary knew what he was talking about and was prepared to substantiate with figures any statement he might make—that is what he was there for. We would like to go into detail and give the speech entire but cannot for lack of time. It was a master effort, and is sure to bear good fruit, as it has already est many to thinking, and if they think good and hard it will be only a matter of time before they become staunch republicans they will abandon the "isms" and come out into the sunlight. There are several indications of it already and many more are on the anxious seat. Mr. McCleary predicted that at the close of this century (six years) there would not be a party in existence known as the Populists. He said populist disease was a good deal like the measles, when one has had it once and gotten over it there is no danger of their ever having it again. He looked for republican gains this fall that would surprise even the most sanguine republicans—it was in the air everywhere; many democrats are ashamed of the record their party has made in the past eighteen months and will quietly slip in a republican ballot this fall, and ask God to forgive them for not doing so in years gone by.

Today we have heard scores of people say that Mr. McCleary's speech was the best one they ever heard—that seems to be the general verdict.

It is hardly probable that either Senator Washburn or Congressman McCleary can again visit us during the present campaign as their time will be fully taken in other parts of the State. They are both doing a grand work for the party, and both merit a unanimous re-election by their steadfastness and loyalty to their constituents, they are entitled to it.

LOCATING MONUMENTS.

Work of the Chickamauga Battlefield Commission About Finished.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The Chickamauga battlefield commissioners, General Fullerton, Major Smith, General Stewart and General H. V. Boynton, historian of the commission, have returned to Washington from Chattanooga. They have been on the battlefield for the past two weeks, engaged with the state commissions in locating the battle monuments. They were accompanied by the Louisiana state commission, Senator Walthall and his staff from the Mississippi commission, Captain Carnes of the Tennessee commission, with the officers of his battery, some members of the Ohio commission, and about 20 members of the Pennsylvania commission. Three members of the Gettysburg commission were also in attendance, looking over the field. The state commissions have been engaged in locating the positions of the various regiments of their respective states, and with such a numerous representation from both sides, they were enabled to establish a number of points of historical interest hitherto in doubt. The members of the national commission report that the work of marking and improving the battlefield is progressing with the greatest vigor, and the road making has nearly finished under the direction of General Stewart, the resident commissioner. The formal dedication of the park is expected to take place next September.

WILL NOT ALTER HIS DECISION.

Champion Corbett Cannot Be Induced to Fight Fitzsimmons.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Oct. 3.—James J. Corbett cannot be induced to waive his position in regard to the pugilistic championship. He said to an Associated Press reporter here:

"I am disgusted with this whole business, and tired of all the fuss, but I propose to hold to my decision not to meet Fitzsimmons until after he has fought O'Donnell and demonstrated his ability to fight in my class."

When asked what he thought of the ultimatum issued by the Olympic club, he said "that concern is trying to work me, but they can't do it. I will not be bulldozed, and once for all I say I will not meet Fitzsimmons, and they nor no other concern or individual can force me to alter my decision. O'Donnell is good enough for Fitzsimmons."

Riordan Acquitted.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Mike Riordan, who was accused of murdering assault upon George Appo, the Lower East Side witness, and subpoena server, was acquitted upon a hearing of the case before Police Justice Ryan. Appo, who was accused of attempted suicide, was released on parole.

Indians Tracking.

It was a most strange and interesting experience to see the Indian read all the signs of the different animals in the grass or among the woods with the same ease as we read an open book. The least disarrangement in the grass or sticks, however small, was enough. Glancing casually at it in passing, he would say: "Bear—a week old." "Yesterday." "Deer—this morning." "Very old." "Caribou—last month," and so on. It was wonderful to behold this instinct in a man.

I had for a long time been following this trail of the moose, which I thought was a fresh trail, when I got sick of it and began to cross examine Mr. Big Partridge as to how far off our quarry was likely to be. Big Partridge then showed that he was sick of the imaginary moose hunt himself and owned up, "Old trail; all moose nipoh"—that is, dead. He had only been leading me about in this way to amuse me, knowing it useless the whole time. He exacted $3.50 for that day's sport.—Blackwood's Magazine.

—Proceedings of the Board of County Commissioners will appear next week.
