

Adapted: A STORY

"There was once a soldier who had a good thing and wished to sell it, but thought it would be unwise to let it go to let it be known (to advertise) and his neighbor would be sure to be in the court of his case and get it for his neighbor to come and buy, but they came not and he was disturbed. Then his scribe, being more MODERN and UP-TO-DATE, said: 'My lord, let us make writings about the good thing—tell its value and let the people know.' 'They did so and the drawbridge was at once lowered to let the people in who wanted the good thing.'"

Citizens National Bank

They are not still-kept; the drawbridge is lowered and the crowds come daily for THE GOOD THINGS they offer. A few of the "good things" are:

1. A fine Safety Deposit Vault with boxes to rent.
2. Drafts and Money Orders to send money all over world.
3. A Savings Department for small deposits.
4. Certificates of Deposit, 6 & 12 months, drawing interest.
5. The Best OPTIONAL PAYMENT FARM LOANS.
6. Clerking Auction Sales and buying the Notes.
7. Letting the People Know we Want Business.

We are MODERN SCRIBES and don't believe our "good things" will be enhanced by hiding them under a bushel. Don't stop to inquire if we are busy, for we are always busy, but ever ready to welcome new depositors and consider conservative banking propositions.

There is more disease in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney and Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. Cheney and Co., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

No one who is acquainted with its good qualities can be surprised at the great popularity of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It not only cures colds and grips effectively and permanently, but prevents these diseases from resulting in pneumonia. It also contains a certain cure for croup. Whooping cough is not dangerous when this remedy is given. It contains no opium or harmful substance and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. It is also pleasant to take. When all of these facts are taken into consideration it is not surprising that people in foreign lands as well as at home, esteem this remedy very highly and very few are willing to take any other after having used it. For sale by F. M. Hickman.

Wednesday in room 8, of the school in this place, presided over by Miss Courtney, some of the scholars knocked down a wind vane pole which in falling hit a fire extinguisher and broke it, the liquid running down the wall into a chalk trough. Some of the scholars stuck their fingers in the liquid and were burned. Rosa Haaker being the worst was sent to a physician to have her hand dressed. Prof. Nicholas made applications that relieved all of them and all were on hand all right again Thursday.

A quiet wedding was celebrated last week Tuesday evening when Miss Jennie M. Page of Des Moines township and Mr. Hurl R. Free of West Heron Lake were united in the bonds of holy matrimony. TOO MUCH FOR NIGHT REEL

Speaker Was Unable to Entertain Offered Resolution.

Congressman William E. Lovering of Massachusetts told this story of the late "Tom" Reed the other evening:

"It was one of those long night sessions in the House when the Dingley tariff bill was in the conference committee, and we were all worrying lest the debate on the measure, when it should emerge, would pass all the bounds of our strength and patience."

"I went to the Speaker's desk at one stage and asked Mr. Reed if he would entertain a resolution to the effect that no one should be allowed to speak on the tariff unless he had something new to say. Mr. Reed gave me one of those quizzical looks of his and drawled out:

"Mr. Lovering, tyrannical as I am, thoroughly depraved and bad as I am, I have not yet reached the point of heartlessness where I can condemn this House to a silence as profound as that resolution would entail. I will not entertain it, sir."—New York Times.

COSTUMES FOR AUTO DOGS

Milady's Pet Is Well Protected When He Rides.

Milady with the pet dog appendage takes his royal highness automobiling these days in "auto-togs" as up-to-date as her own. His eyes are screened by chauffeur's goggles, his silken coat is protected from the dust by a linen or silk covering made like a bag, but with slits for his legs to come through so that, should there be an accident to the car, it would be possible for him to land on his feet. A hood of linen or silk is put over his head to match the body covering.

Some dogs might resent this costume, but milady's pet is so accustomed to the delicate attentions of his mistress that he takes kindly to his "auto-togs" and wears them with an appreciative air.

Fate of the Lonely Man

The lonely death of the man who had lived alone is but the natural sequel to an unnatural life. The duty of the neighbors of such a human creature is done when, notified of the fact of his demise by noisome odors, they bury him and save the world a nuisance. The good people of a suburb of McMinnville were called upon to discharge this disagreeable duty a few days ago by burying a man who had lived alone, died alone and been dead two weeks when discovered. It is sad commentary upon a freak of human nature when a man makes so little of life that, passing out, he is not missed by his nearest neighbors for full two weeks.—Portland Oregonian.

On the Siberian Railway

Think of the snap the railroad lunch-counter privilege would be at Irkutsk, Yakutsk and the other Siberian points. Even on the dining cars ice cream could be served the year around without the use of refrigerators, especially through Siberia. Simply by stopping the train occasionally to milk a musk ox one could obtain all the ready flavored ice cream necessary to human happiness. And then it would be so pleasant to hear the brakeman sing out: "Behring, Behring! Change cars for the north pole, Pearyville, Walrus Beach, Nansen's Ford, Melville Island and all points north."—Baltimore American.

New York's Great Cathedral

When the great Episcopal cathedral of St. John the Divine, in New York, was projected, about twelve years ago, the promoters did not fix any definite date for its completion. It is to cost about $55,000,000 and is ranked with St. Peter's at Rome, both in size and architectural splendor. Although work has been going on steadily for the last five years, only one of the four great arches that are to support the central dome is completed, and the contractors say that the whole structure may be finished in another half century.

Love's Glamor

O, love is like the wondrous dawn Of summer days.
O, when thro' mom's haze A purple beauty comes, is gone.
For e'en when short 'tis, O, so sweet, And while it lasts A glamor casts Far stretched and far before our feet.
Ah, love, why need that glamor fade? Do we not know Enough of woe, Of sorrow and of hope dismayed.
Without the crowning loss of thee? For love life's ways And dear its days To hearts where love has ceased to be.—Chicago Chronicle.

He Knew

"I don't see how a man can be so mean," expostulated Mrs. Cowbigger. "Just because I'm going a few miles out of the city to spend a day or two with an old school friend you rave like a madman about the expense. You know very well, Henry, the railway fare is only 40 cents." "I know that, my dear," replied Cowbigger, "and I know also that every time you go on one of these little trips you spend at least $25 for the things you say are absolutely necessary to make you presentable."

The Duke's Secretary

The Duke of Marlborough, who has been appointed under secretary of state for foreign affairs, is to be provided with a private secretary who will be capable of filling the office and keeping the duke from committing blunders. The name of the private secretary is not mentioned, probably owing to his insignificance and the fact that he hasn't much except brains.

STREET LIGHTING

Reasons Why the Expenditure of New York for This Purpose Are Large.

Chicago spends $400,000 a year in street lighting; Boston, $450,000; Cincinnati, $425,000; Baltimore, $350,000; San Francisco, $245,000; Providence, $250,000; New Orleans, $230,000; Cleveland, $225,000; and Washington, a city of long distances, low houses and wide streets, $225,000. New York will expend for street lighting in 1901 $745,000 for gas and electricity. Of this total Manhattan uses $560,000; Brooklyn, $950,000; The Bronx, $350,000; Queens, $355,000; and Richmond, $130,000. By comparison with the expenditures of other American cities for illumination, New York's annual payment may seem to be abnormally high, but there are various reasons why the cost of public lighting should be proportionately much larger here than elsewhere. New York has a larger waterfront than any other American city. While other cities have usually one public market, New York has a dozen, and the eight included within the borough of Manhattan use on an average 5,000,000 cubic feet of gas in a year. Many other American cities rent the premises they require for public departments, whereas New York owns most of her public buildings, and the gas bills, which in some other cases are met by private individuals, are in most cases here paid directly from the appropriation, which, while nominally for street lighting, actually includes all forms of illumination for which the city is responsible. New York has in all nearly 60,000 lamps, gas and electric. There are 30,000 in New York and The Bronx, of which 24,286 are gas lamps, 4,538 electric, and the others naphtha lamps. Brooklyn has 11,015 gas lamps and 4,603 electric lamps. Queens borough, the most extensive division of New York to be lighted, has 3,339 gas lamps and 2,106 electric lamps. Richmond, the most progressive of the boroughs of New York in this particular, has all electric lights—no gas. Of these, 2,883 are incandescent lamps and 382 are arc light. There are, moreover, 100 oil lamps in use in Richmond borough. The extent of the territory to be covered and the peculiar conditions existing in New York explain to a great extent the reasons for so large an appropriation for illumination, nearly 3 per cent of the entire budget of the city, which is $100,000,000 for next year. Though the most expensively lighted city in the country, the assertion is not made for New York that it is the best lighted American city.—New York Sun.

A DARING GIRL

Pretty Susan Shelly Has Many Thrilling Adventures.

Pretty and accomplished Susan Shelly of Shellingrove, Pa., has recently acquired considerable notoriety by her many deeds of daring that would challenge the bravado of the most dashing cowboy of the wild west. She is well known to the citizens of Freeburg, Snyder county, and vicinity. She is 21 years of age, highly educated, and but for the publicity given her for wearing male attire, playing hobo and hold-up of a train near Richmond, Ind., within the past fortnight, her Freeburg friends and acquaintances would only think of her as the pretty, witty and accomplished singer and pianist as she was ten years ago. It seems her motive in leading a temporary life of dime novel romance is to imbue her with the true spirit of the real and practical in the realm of daring and adventure to enable her to write a book containing her experiences as a tramp and railroad hold-up. Professor H. B. Moyer, director of the Freeburg Music College, says of Miss Shelly: "She was a student at the music college here when hardly 12 years old. After the lapse of some years, having in the meantime taken a thorough course in the New York College of Oratory and Music, she returned to Freeburg and filled the chair of elocution. Her ideal of life seemed to be centered around some vocation in which the physical activities were called into frequent requisition. She was always preparing for some definite work."

Baby Whale Is Thriving

A baby whale, two and one-half feet in length, was washed ashore in the breakers a few miles south of the Cliff House recently, and was picked up by C. Baker, S. Roberts and George Whistler, who were walking on the beach. The little whale was lively and in good condition, except for a slight bruise on the side of its head, and in half an hour the young whaler had him in a receptacle filled with salt water. The little fellow was brought to this city, and thrived so well that in a short time, to the amazement of his captors, he had grown to a length of nearly four feet. He is one of the blue species, and blows vigorously most of the time he is thrashing around in his tank. Seafaring men who looked upon the little whale said they had never seen so diminutive a specimen of his species before, but that he was nevertheless a whale. His tail is shapely and is already avoided by the young men who have taken it upon themselves to raise the embryo leviathan to adult size.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Our Arctic Coal Measures

The coal measures of our Arctic coast begin a little south of Cape Lisburne, the most northwestern corner of Alaska, and extend eastward along the coast line to Cape Sabine, showing up again at Cape Barrow. They are found a few miles inland at Wainwright inlet, and extend still further eastward no one knows how far. Very likely they cross the entire northern part of the continent, as explorers tell us of veins that outcrop in Grinnell land, north of Hudson's bay.—National Geographic.

OBJECTED TO THE UNIFORM

Governor Could Not Sit at Table with Common Privates.

A writer tells this story of the governor of a British colony: "A gentleman was serving as a private in a volunteer corps in another colony. Being a man of good social position he had dined with the governor, when one day, being in private uniform, he was taken by one of the officers of his regiment to luncheon in a tent in which the governor happened to be, whereupon the latter remarked in a loud voice to the officer in question that he could not sit down to table with one in private's uniform. When in consequence the man was about to retire the governor said it was not the man he objected to but the dress and suggested that he should either change it or turn it inside out. Being much in want of his luncheon, the man swallowed the insult and turned his coat inside out."

WAY OF THE GOOD WOMAN

The Real Meaning of the Much Used Word Charity.

If women would only bear in mind that they may need the world's good word themselves some day, they would be more careful in what they say and how they say it. Charity is of thought as well as deed. It is not restricted to the feeding of the hungry and clothing of the poor. It is as much needed among the rich as among any other class. The woman who would be a pattern of her sex will cultivate a still tongue; if she would be a blessing to humanity she will temper justice with mercy, and, above all, she will keep her verdicts to herself when she sits in judgment on her friends.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

After the Storm

Darling swept the rain
Over hill and plain,
Leaving tempest-trodden
Meadow dank and sodden,
Miry road and lane.

Now the storm is done,
Life is re-begun;
Tremulous leaves and grasses,
As the shadow passes,
Stretch to feel the sun.

Sudden splendors rift
Through each cloudy rift
Down on drooping bowers,
And their heads the flowers
As from weeping lift.

Snared in moss and mud,
Hushed and tamed, the flood
Rounds to puddles hazy;
Here and there a daisy
Shows its jeweled bud.

Thought of peace enskies,
Dreams of heights untied
In each pool life yearning,
As if earth were turning
Heavenward open-eyed.

Bloom and leaf and bird
Scatter, subtly stirred,
Songs of life and May born,
Creeping things and clay born
Sing with them unheard.

Voice and silence blend,
Breathing, praises penned
In no prisoning psalter,
While from green earth altars
Incense mists ascend.

—The Speaker.

Gen. Macdonald's Charger

Under the will of the late Sir Henry Macdonald, the British general who committed suicide in Paris some months ago, directions were given that his war horse used in the South African campaigns should be shot, the hoofs being preserved as mementoes. Before the contents of the will were known in Ceylon the animal was sold to a wealthy Singapore gentleman. He has now intimated his readiness to hand over the horse to Lady Macdonald on condition that it be not killed, or on the other hand to retain it, undertaking that whenever the death of the animal shall take place the hoofs shall be forwarded to the son of the late general.

Inducing Drowsiness

There are hundreds of persons in New York who take a long trolley ride in the evening simply to produce a feeling of sleepiness. If a man looks straight ahead of him or reads a newspaper, his ride will do him little good. He might as well remain at home on the front stoop. But if he looks about him, constantly shifting his gaze from one scene to another, he gets into a state of drowsiness such as is brought by artificial means, when it is called hypnotism.—Correspondence, Pittsburg Chronicle.

Stranger Won Bet

Like other men of prominence, Admiral Dewey often comes across the irrepressible party who always affects to be on terms of intimacy with notable personages. Courteous and genial, the admiral has profound dislike for this sort of nuisance. Not long ago, while out walking in Washington, he was accosted by an effusive stranger, who grasped his hand and said: "George, I'll bet you don't know me." The admiral looked his displeasure as he answered grimly: "You win," and walked on.

Think Goats Bring Good Luck

English medical papers are commenting on the remarkable survival of superstition at Cambridge, where a dairyman possessed of a goat is sending the animal, by request, into and around the houses of his neighbors in an area affected by the smallpox. The rustic superstition that goats bring good luck is widespread and the London Lancet quotes many instances.

Mule Bite Is Serious

J. R. Porter of Northboro, Mo., was bitten by a vicious mule. The wound did not heal well and Porter went to the Pasteur Institute in Chicago. There he was told that he had hydrophobia.
