Americans in London.
The London Chronicle has the following: "The bus driver, who is a good judge in these matters, says that there are more Americans in London this year than ever before—that is to say, Americans who ride on omnibuses. The corporation possibly attracted more of our wealthy cousins last year. And, to quote the bus driver, they are very charming. The party, which generally manages to secure front seats at a western terminus and travels right through to the city, consists, as a rule, of 'mamma' and two or three girls. 'Poppa' presumably stays at home and pays the bills. They talk the whole way and most of their conversation is directed to the driver in the shape of questions."
