This Pretty Matron Had Headache and Backache, and Her Condition Was Serious.

PE-RU-NA CURED.

MRS. M. BRICKNER.

99 Eleventh Street, Milwaukee, Wis.

"A short time ago I found my condition very serious. I had headaches, pains in the back, and frequent dizzy spells which grew worse every month. I tried two remedies before Peruna, and was discouraged when I took the first dose, but my courage soon returned. In less than two months my health was restored."—Mrs. M. Brickner.

The reason of so many failures to cure cases similar to the above is the fact that diseases peculiar to the female sex are not commonly recognized as being caused by catarrh.

Catarrh of one organ is exactly the same as catarrh of any other organ. What will cure catarrh of the head will also cure catarrh of the pelvic organs. Peruna cures these cases simply because it cures the catarrh.

If you have catarrh write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

OREGON EXPOSITION NOTES.

Sutter's Fort, where gold was first discovered in California, 57 years ago, will be reproduced at the Lewis and Clark exposition by the Sacramento Valley Development association.

There will be a riot of roses in bloom on the grounds of the Lewis and Clark exposition the opening day, and for many days thereafter. The rose exhibit will show forth the glories of the Oregon climate as a producer of hues and perfume.

Abraham Lincoln's old home at Springfield, Ill., the only piece of real estate ever owned by the martyred president, will be reproduced as the Illinois state building at the Lewis and Clark exposition. Many Lincoln relics will be exhibited.

Every day during the four and a half months of the Lewis and Clark exposition one or more excursions to Portland, on account of special events, will be run. It is estimated that 1,000 visitors will reach Portland daily on excursion trains alone.

ATAXIA IS CURABLE

REPORTED CURE STANDS TEST OF FULL INVESTIGATION.

A Former Victim of Locomotor Ataxia Now Free from Suffering and Actively at Work.

"Yes," said Mr. Watkins to a reporter, "it is true that I have been cured of ataxia by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

"Are you sure you had locomotor ataxia?"

"The doctors themselves told me so. Besides I recognized the symptoms."

"What were they?"

"Well, the first indications were a stiffness about the knee joints that came on about four years ago. A few months after that appeared, my walk got to be uncertain, shaky-like. I lost confidence in my power to control the movements of my legs. Once, when I was in the cellar, I started to pick up two scuttles of coal, and my legs gave way suddenly, and I tumbled all in a heap in a basket. I couldn't close my eyes and keep my balance to save my life. Then I had fearful pains over my whole body and I lost control over my kidneys and my bowels."

"How about your general health?"

"Sometimes I was so weak that I had to keep my bed and my weight fell off twenty pounds. Things looked pretty bad for me until I ran across a young man who had been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and who advised me to try them."

"Did these pills help you right away?"

"I didn't see much improvement until I had used six boxes. The first benefit I noticed was a better circulation and a picking up in strength and weight. I gradually got confidence in my ability to direct the movements of my legs, and in the course of seven or eight months all the troubles had disappeared."

"Do you regard yourself as entirely well now?"

"I do the work of a well man at any rate. I can close my eyes and stand up all right and move about the same as other men. The pains are all gone except an occasional twitch in the calves of my legs."

Mr. James H. Watkins resides at No. 73 West 10th street, Albany, N.Y. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can be obtained at any drug store. They should be used as soon as the first signs of locomotor ataxia appear in a peculiar numbness of the feet.

"THE OREGON PONY."

STORY OF FIRST LOCOMOTIVE EVER USED IN STATE.

The Progress of Invention Has Made the Old Engine a Back Number, But in Its Day It Was a Great Worker.

Portland, Ore.—Standing in the Machinery, Electricity and Transportation building at the Portland Lewis and Clark exposition is a tiny locomotive, little larger than an automobile. The four wheels of the locomotive appear slightly larger than barrel hoops, the boiler is about as big as an apple barrel, and the whole engine is only 13 feet long.

This little engine, which bears the title Oregon Pony, was the first locomotive used in Oregon. The pony, as almost every visitor takes occasion to remark, is "not so much to look at." But in its day it was a great engine to work, and its history is so entangled with the history of early days in Oregon as to make it worthy of more than passing attention.

The Oregon Pony was born in the year 1861 at San Francisco, and immediately entered upon its life labors, going into commission as a portage connecting steamboats on the Columbia river at a place where for seven miles the rapids made it impossible for boats to pass.

It was the discovery of gold at Canyon City, Ore., that made the pony a necessary factor in western transportation, and the story of that discovery in itself forms an interesting tale that few people know.

At about the time of the outbreak of the civil war a party of emigrants, making their weary way over the mountains, crossed a stream which led into a lake. In the bed of the stream they found a yellow metal, which, they discovered, could be flattened out into a thin sheet by laying a chunk of it on a wagon wheel and pounding it with a hammer. The emigrants were interested and left a blue bucket to mark the place where they had picked up the yellow metal, and when they met some miners they told of their find. The search for the blue bucket began in a hurry. The bucket never was found, but the men who went in search of it found other streams as rich as the one which the bucket had been left to mark. Certain holdings there are named the Blue Bucket mines.

Canyon City has been called "the last stand of the Argonauts." Thither flocked the "forty-niners" from California, pioneer gold seekers who had sought the rainbow's end in many places. The "forty-niners" made the trip overland, but when the news of the new find reached San Francisco hundreds of people set sail from the city for the north in the sailing vessels that then plied the Pacific coast. The ships brought the gold seekers to Portland, then a struggling town of about 3,000 inhabitants.

Beyond Portland ocean vessels could not sail, and immediately the Oregon Navigation company was formed to put in commission on the upper Columbia steamboats of a light draft which could navigate the stream. The company built steamboats to carry passengers and freight from Portland to the Cascades, a little more than half way to The Dalles, which point was then, and still is, the head of navigation, and other boats to ply the water above the Cascades. Between the end of one steamship run and the beginning of the other was a stretch of seven miles of rapids, where no steamboats could navigate on account of the rocks which blocked the channel.

At first the steamboat company built a wagon road, and made the portage of gold seekers and their goods by team. But the road was a poor one, and the rains washed part of it away every little while. The difficulty was overcome temporarily by building a track with oak rails over which was laid a thin covering of strap iron. And it was for service on this track that the pony was built.

The pony was found to be the very thing needed. The engine was not too heavy for the rails, and was so small that she took the curves without difficulty; and she could make the seven miles in an hour, which was not at all bad. The first run was made on May 10, 1862, and for two years the faithful pony ran up and down with her load of passengers and freight. By the end of this period the iron rails from the east had arrived and been put in place, and a new engine, bigger and stronger, took the place of the pony. The pony, being now of no use, was sold to David Hewes, of San Francisco, for $1,000, and entered upon a prosaic existence, hauling sand to fill up San Francisco bay. In 1872 the pony was retired from active service. Mr. Hewes agreed to send the pony to the Lewis and Clark exposition, and stipulated that after the close of the fair the engine was to be given to the state of Oregon. This will be done.

OLD DEBTORS' PRISON.

Building at Georgetown Still in Good State of Preservation—Now Used as a Church.

Washington.—South of the canal on Thirty-second street, Georgetown, stands the old debtors' prison, one of the oldest buildings in that historic city.

Years prior to the laying out of the District of Columbia this structure was built, and as far back as the latter part of the seventeenth century was used as a municipal prison, among its first inmates as prisoners being Michael and Matthew Dulaney, charged with setting fire to a tobacco warehouse. The prison was regarded as unsafe and the men were placed in irons and special guards placed over them. This was the only prison in the then lower part of Montgomery county, Maryland, although the county court was held at Rockville, and there it was that all violators of the state laws in the county were carried for trial. Even in those good old days people would get into trouble and into jail. The laws were strict—early to bed and early to rise, and if one failed to meet his financial obligations he was thrown into jail.

The old building has been used for many purposes since then, and now a faithful band of colored people, Baptists, hold religious services there, entrance being through an end door which is reached by a long rickety flight of stone steps. The lower floor is used as a storage house for fertilizer, but this does not interfere with the worshipers. Barring the dilapidated condition of the roof, windows and chimneys, the building, which is of stone and brick, is in a splendid state of preservation, and unless torn down to make room for another building will doubtless remain as a historic spot of interest for many years.

CAPT. HOBSON WEDS.

Hero of the Merrimac and Miss Hull Married—Both Come of Famous Ancestry.

New York.—The marriage of Miss Grizelda Houston Hull and Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson, the hero of the Merrimac, on May 25 was the culmination of an interesting romance and marks an alliance which joins some of the best blood in the country. The marriage was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents in Tuxedo. Only relatives and a few intimate friends of the contracting parties were present.

Mrs. Hobson is on her father's side related to the Hulls, Strongs, Farnhams and Doolittles of New England, and is through her mother, who was a Miss Lucia Houston, daughter of Judge Russell Houston, of Kentucky, related to some of the finest families of the south. She is the grandniece of Gov. Houston, of Alabama, who was recognized as one of the greatest executives who ever presided over the destinies of that state. She, therefore, has in her veins the blood of the Polks, the famous President Sam Houston, of Texas, the Longs, the Joneses, the Eatons, and other noted families of Georgia, Alabama, Kentucky and Tennessee.

Capt. Hobson, too, comes of famous ancestry, both south and north. Through his mother, who was Miss Sarah Croom Pearson, daughter of Chief Justice Richmond Pearson, he is related to the Saltentals and Brewsters, of Massachusetts, and on his father's side is related to the Moreheads, Whites, Williams and others who did much to lay the foundations of the great states in North Carolina.

Catches Prize Codfish.

Capt. Lorenzen, of the schooner E. A. Hooper, of Gloucester, brought in the prize codfish to Boston recently. The fish was a monster in appearance, with a head like that of a good-sized swordfish. It was caught off Halfway rock. The fish weighed 83 pounds dressed, and according to fishermen who saw it must have weighed nearly 100 pounds when caught. The fish measured almost six feet in length. It was bought by one of the wholesale houses and sold immediately to a retail dealer in the Back bay.

GOT AN EXCUSE TO TALK.

Wanted to Say Something to the Old Woman and the Way Was Opened.

"I was in a Long Island village last summer," said a New York lawyer, according to the Cleveland Leader, "when a big automobile came tearing along, and just in front of the post office it struck and killed a big hog belonging to a villager who was leaning over his gate at the time."

"How fast was the machine going?" I asked of him, as he came out and looked after the flying auto.

"Forty miles an hour," he replied.

"Then you can make the owner pay for your hog?"

"Yes, I suppose so, but I don't think I shall fool with the case."

"Don't you think the hog is worth going to law about, eh?"

"He was a fine hog, and I ought to be paid for him, but me and the old woman have been grouchy at each other for a week, and I've been aching for a chance to open out on her. This is just what I wanted, and I'll let the auto go and go in and tell her some things she won't forget for the next 30 years!"

TELEPHONE AS REFORMER.

An Example of the Surprising Effect It May Have on Our Morals.

Congressman Bingham, at a dinner of the Philadelphia Clover club, spoke of modern life in the most optimistic way, relates the Cincinnati Enquirer.

"The world is growing better," he said. "Daily it becomes cleaner, kinder, and more upright. Nearly everything makes for reform. Even the telephone has a tremendous reforming influence."

"Let me give you an example of the surprising effect that the telephone exercises over our morals."

"A certain man, at breakfast one morning, said to his wife:

"My dear, I'll not be home to dinner to-night, and you had better not sit up for me, as I shall be detained very late at the office posting my books."

"Very well," the lady answered. "Before I go to bed I'll say good night to you over the telephone."

"The man had forgotten, you see, that a telephone now connected his office and his house."

In Record Time.

Piney Flats, Tenn., May 29.—(Special)—Cured in two days of Rheumatism that had made his life a torture for two years, D. S. Hilton, of this place, naturally wants every other sufferer from rheumatism to know what cured him. It was Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills are the grandest pill on earth," says Mr. Hilton, "I would not take any sum of money for what they did for me. For two years I had what the doctors called rheumatism. I could hardly walk around in the house. It seemed to be in my back and hip and legs. I tried everything, but nothing helped me till I got Dodd's Kidney Pills. Two days after I took the first dose all pain left me and it has never come back since. I can't praise Dodd's Kidney Pills too much."

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. Healthy kidneys take all the uric acid out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills make healthy kidneys.

The Truth Breaks Out.

"Now, of course, doctor," said the man upon whose eye the operation had been performed, "I respect your skill highly, and all that; but doesn't it seem, even to you, a little too much to charge $50 for doing a bit of work that occupied you about five minutes?"

"My good sir," said the great oculist, hastening to the defense of himself and his profession, "you don't realize that in acquiring the skill to perform such an operation in five minutes I have spoiled perhaps two bushels of eyes quite as valuable as yours!"—N. Y. Times.
