GREAT STRENGTH OF BIRDS

It Enables Them to Do Work Far Harder Than That of Human Beings.

Birds can eat and digest from ten to thirty times as much food in proportion to their size as men can. If a man could eat as much in proportion to his size as a sparrow is able to consume he would need a whole sheep for dinner, a couple of dozen chickens for breakfast and six turkeys for his evening meal, says the Washington Star. A tree sparrow has been known to eat 700 grass seeds in a day. Relative to the bird's size, these seeds were as big as an ordinary lunch basket would be to a full-grown man.

A bird's strength is equally amazing. A white-tailed eagle weighing 13 pounds, with a wing-spread of six feet, has been known to pounce on a pig weighing 42 pounds, raise it to a height of 100 feet and fly off with it. The bird has covered a distance of half a mile before the pig's owner succeeded in shooting the thief.

Birds can and do work far harder than human beings. A pair of house martins when nesting will feed their young once in 20 seconds—that is, each bird, male and female, makes 36 journeys to and fro in an hour, or about 1,000 a day. It must be remembered that on each journey the bird has the added work of catching the worm.

Even so tiny a bird as the wren has been counted to make 110 trips to and from its nest within 430 minutes; and the prey it carried home consisted of larger, heavier and harder-to-find insects than were caught by the sparrows. Among them were 20 good-sized caterpillars, 10 grasshoppers, 7 spiders, 11 worms and more than one fat chrysalis.

WHO OWNED THE PEARL?

Singular Suit Brought by Restaurant Proprietor for Gem Found in Oyster.

Is the finder of a pearl in an oyster served in a restaurant entitled to it, or does it belong to the proprietor of the restaurant? The bench of the superior court at Hamburg, Germany, has taken the question into consideration, states the Washington Star. The facts as told in court are that a lady beginning her dinner at a restaurant with oysters bit on something hard and took a pearl out of her mouth. She and her consort discussed its value, and finally before the dinner ended the latter took the pearl to a neighboring jeweler, who offered him $500 for it. The man refused to accept this amount and said the pearl was the property of a lady. The jeweler followed him to the restaurant and offered the lady $750, which was also declined.

The conversation attracted the proprietor's attention. He inquired into the circumstances, claimed the pearl and the lady refused to give it up to him. The proprietor of the restaurant then brought suit against the lady, averring that the bones of fowl and shells by traditional custom are left by customers of a restaurant and are a source of profit to the proprietor.

POINTS ABOUT ST. PATRICK

But Nothing Regarding the One Benign Act for Which He Is Remembered.

His baptismal name is said to have been Sicut, says the Philadelphia Record.

Little is known of him. He was born at Nemthur.

Nemthur, Scotland, is now Dumbarton.

He was born in 296 and died in 469. His father was the deacon Calpurnius.

In 411 Patrick was captured by the Picts and sold into Ireland as a slave.

After six years he escaped this slavery and devoted himself to the conversion of Ireland.

Then he prepared for the priesthood, entering upon his mission about 425.

It was in the year 441 that he was consecrated a bishop.

Of his writings there were his confessions and an epistle.

One prominent authority says that the only thing actually known of him is that he existed.

And not a word as to his greatest deed of effectually fixing matters so the sons of the Emerald Isle cannot see snakes.

New Use for Stamps.

The monks at the hospital of St. Jean de Dieu, at Ghent, have in their leisure moments decorated the walls with gorgeous landscapes, glowing with color and full of life, formed entirely by means of the postage stamps of all the nations of the world. Palaces, forests, streams and mountains are represented, butterflies flit about in the air, birds of beautiful plumage perch on branches, snakes and lizards glide about, and innumerable animals find places here and there. The pictures are most artistic, in the style of Chinese landscape gardening, and already between 9,000,000 and 10,000,000 stamps have been used.

In After Years.

"Women are certainly changeable creatures," said the weary-looking man.

"What's the explanation?" asked the friend of the family.

"During our honeymoon," answered the weary party, "my wife declared she could not live a day without me."

"Well?" queried the family friend.

"Only last week," continued the other, "she tried to get me to insure my life for $10,000 in her favor."—Chicago Daily News.

TOOTH BRUSHES IN SCHOOL

English Writer Would Require All Pupils to Be Furnished with Them.

"In the political economy of nations the toothbrush is of much more importance than the sword, and tooth powder is infinitely more important than gunpowder."

So writes Mrs. John Lane in the Fortnightly Review, in the course of a plea, both amusing and very sensible, for greater care of the teeth than is customary in this country.

The English have not the habit of going to the dentist; money paid to him they consider wasted—there is nothing to show for it.

They still have teeth out rather than stopped (filled) as being cheaper, and when they are all out they replace them on too slight provocation by what American humor calls "store teeth."

Nor are the English supersensitive, and their complacency, which upholds them in more important things, inclines them to believe that if their fathers muddled along with bad teeth, so can they.

If, as it is said, bad teeth are a sign of the degeneracy of a race, then are the sturdy English in a very bad way.

The English, Mrs. Lane points out, used to be always caricatured on the continent as possessing very prominent front teeth. Now they often have no front teeth at all.

And the worst of it is they do not seem to mind.

"If I were one of the powers that be," concludes Mrs. Lane, "I should require all board schools to furnish their pupils with toothbrushes and tooth powder, and I would open the morning session with a general brushing of the teeth. Not only that, but I would have a dentist attached to each school district whose duty it would be to attend to the children's teeth free of charge."

KISSING ADVERTISEMENT.

Paris Restaurants Wherein the Cashier Pays Peculiar Premium on Checks.

In many of the European cafes of the cheaper order it is the invariable custom to print the daily menu on the napkin provided for the guest, so that when the latter desires to study the bill of fare he has to raise his serviette from his knee in order to do so.

But perhaps the most extraordinary custom in connection with restaurant life, says a writer, is that which obtains in a certain little cafe in the suburbs of Paris, where every customer whose bill amounts to one shilling or over is entitled to receive a kiss from the very attractive young lady who acts as cashier to the establishment.

So used has the damsel become to the osculation routine that she goes through it without the slightest reticence, looking upon it purely as a matter of business, and it is reported that the proprietor of the restaurant is more than satisfied with the result of his curious device for attracting patrons.

Another enterprising restaurateur has instituted the practice of making a present of a box of Havana cigars every New Year's day to those patrons who have been pretty regular in their attendance at his establishment during the preceding year.

DON'T USE HARD BRUSH.

The Frequent Cause of Unsound Teeth in Young Persons, Says a Dentist.

"In spite of all that is printed now-a-days about the care of the teeth," said an experienced New York dentist, according to the Press, "we should have to go out of business if we depended upon the patronage of men and women who have passed the prime of life. It is a mistake to assume that most of the false teeth are made for old persons. I venture to say that scarcely a day passes that a patient well in the sixties does not come to my office for some slight treatment to an almost perfectly sound set of teeth."

"I have frequently treated men and women past 50 who never had a tooth out, and but one or two slight cavities that required filling. On the other hand, we are repeatedly called upon to make artificial teeth for very young persons. I attribute it to the use of the hard toothbrush, which is a comparatively modern invention. The use of a hard brush, even occasionally, is a great mistake. The softest kind of hogs' bristles makes the best toothbrush."

Splendid Offer.

The chance of his life has come to Robert Mantell. A young woman has written him offering to live up his productions by playing mouth organ solos between the acts. She says in a letter which he mistook for Volapuk until his leading woman pointed out to him that it was merely advanced spelling—spelling with regard only for sound, not for appearance—that besides being the only mouth-organ artist on the stage, she is handsome, and has her own trunk.—Boston Herald.

In Chicago.

"She's a distant relative of mine."

"Distant! Why, man, she's your wife, isn't she?"

"She was, but she's been married twice since then. She's my wife twice removed."—Boston Traveler.
