A FEW FREAKS OF FASHION

Some are Ugly and Some are Really Beautiful.

There are Many Variations of the Blouse. Heavy Billow Crepons Made Crosswise. Some New Plaid Silks. Description of a Mourning Gown.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, May 21.—Some of the styles shown now are really beautiful, but others are so ugly as to be startling and to attract the eyes by sheer force, and one wonders that such things can be. For instance, there was a gown of the most pronounced paquin style, which means that it is wide and full and stiff and laid in deep folds, as far as the skirt is concerned. No trimming mars its smoothness around the bottom. I should have mentioned that the material used was thick satin duchess of the exact shade of bessemer steel. The lower parts of the sleeves were of the satin, while the enormous puffs were of the deepest magenta. There was also a band of the magenta color down the front of the waist. Another gown nearly like that was of light terra cotta glace, with a blouse effect, to the front of the waist, while all the rest was cut en princesse. On the waist and hanging below it for a short distance were lace set pieces of trimming. The collar was of magenta silk, with a violet shade. The sleeves were enormous puffs of magenta silk, plaited in such a manner as to resemble muskmelons. These puffs reached below the elbow and were stuffed to keep them in position. They must be interesting to wear in hot weather.

The blouse has more variations than I can mention, almost every dress for whatever occasion having this distinguishing feature. There was a pale coachman's drab tailor blouse gown. The skirt hung in one stiff, unbroken circle, except in the back, where there were three burnoose plaits which swelled out at the bottom like tin horns, and which were almost as stiff. Down the right side was a band of brocaded satin in green and old rose, and this was finished with two bows at the bottom. Two sets of loops were fastened at the sides of the waist, and these as well as those at the bottom were of old rose velvet. The blouse had one fold, and on the waist were two narrow lines of gold braid and two flat frosted gold buttons. The upper parts of the sleeves were of the brocade.

Among the quirks and pranks of fashion is one now for making those heavy billow crepons crosswise, which is not at all pretty. Some few very accomplished dressmakers make up these heavy rolled crepons so that the twill is diagonal. The effect is better this way, but one should be very sure of her capacity before venturing on this. There are some brown semitransparent crepons, and these are laid in folds over yellow silk. The yellow shows through the meshes with a decidedly rich effect.

There are some new plaid silks, and they are pretty—more, lovely. The groundwork is white or cream color, and the plaid is laid over the surface by means of light lines in delicate colors. The silk is always heavy and rich and the lines thrown up in satin finish. These are usually made into fancy waists alone, but often a whole skirt is seen of the same, and in that case there is a belt or yoke or other trimming made of velvet of a dark shade of the darkest color in the plaid.

Today I saw a mourning gown suitable for a young girl who has lost a parent. The dress itself is of dead luster bengaline, and the skirt was cut in the approved circular style, and it was bordered 18 inches deep around the bottom with English crape. On the right side of the skirt low down there was a large butterfly bow of crape, and there was another on the bust, reaching clear across. Around the waist there was a wide belt of crape, which tied in the back, with long ends. There was a ruff of the same around the neck, and a puffing around the elbows under the upper puff of silk. This is not too dressy for mourning nor too severe for youth.

OLIVE HARPER.

CHIEF ENGINEER CRAIGHILL.

His Great Work In Deepening Baltimore Harbor and the Kanawha River.

Colonel William P. Craighill, who succeeds Brigadier General Thomas L. Casey as chief of army engineers in the United States, was born in Virginia and was graduated from West Point Military academy in July, 1853, and stood second in a class of 52 members. He was appointed brevet second lieutenant of engineers and has steadily risen through all the intermediate grades until he at last stands on the very top round of the ladder. Before the war he was engaged in engineering duties connected with the defenses of the Atlantic coast. In August, 1859, he was assistant professor of engineering at the Military academy and served until June, 1863, when he took the field as engineer to General Morgan's division, Army of the Ohio, engaged in the defense of Cumberland Gap, Tenn.

WILLIAM P. CRAIGHILL.

At the close of the war he was brevetted lieutenant colonel for faithful and meritorious services, and since then his engineering feats have given him a high reputation among the men of his craft. One of his most notable projects was the improvement of the Great Kanawha river. The object of the work was to give the river a depth of not less than six feet all the year around, so that the vast coal deposits of the Kanawha valley would be more accessible. The desired end was accomplished by building a series of locks and dams at an expense of about $4,000,000.

Another great achievement was his work in increasing the depth of the harbor of Baltimore from 17 feet at mean low water to 27 feet, so that the heaviest ships could approach and leave the city wharves with full cargoes. The improvement cost $1,300,000 and was of vast benefit to Baltimore. Colonel Craighill has also done a great deal of important work on the harbor defenses of New York and San Francisco.

He has translated or compiled several military books, and in 1880, 1883 and 1886 was a deputy to the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church. He is an ex-president of the American Society of Civil Engineers and is a member of the American Association For the Advancement of Science.

Professor Langley's Flying Machine.

The Langley flying machine, it is reported, flew a distance of 1,000 feet, at a test, down the Potomac a few days ago. The machine is now propelled by storage batteries placed under the wings and moves independently of any control from the float from which the flights are made. It is now believed that the machine will fly a great distance.

Professor Langley has already spent more than $50,000 in the experimental work, and he believes that before long he will be able to build a practical machine. All of the recent tests have been for the purpose of developing certain facts in relation to propellers of different size and shape. It is understood that Alexander Melville Bell and Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, have placed at Professor Langley's disposal a sufficient sum of money to enable him to work freely without fear of financial embarrassment.—New York World.

Quick Work.

The whole garrison of Paris was mobilized without warning at an hour's notice. Directions were sent at 11 o'clock to have the men ordered out at midnight ready for war. They were armed, provided with rations and ammunition and marched through the streets to the different railroad stations within two hours.

Modern English.

It is a strange fact that when a business concern "goes up" it also "goes down," and that it is generally found that it has "gone under" when it is "all over." This fittingly illustrates the simplicity of the language.—Chicago Post.

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.:

Dear Sir—Two years ago I was pale and emaciated, food fermented in my stomach. A physician pronounced my case "Catarrh of the Stomach," but he could not help me. I lived a month without solid food and when I tried to eat I would vomit. At this time I began taking Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, and in two weeks I was decidedly better. Then I took "Golden Medical Discovery" and I am now in good health, and never felt better in my life. I have a better color, eat more, and have no distress after eating—having gained thirteen pounds since I began taking them.
