THE LODGE OF SORROW

Thousands of People Take Part in the Most Solemn Ceremonles.

GRAND EXALTED RULER HAY'S ADDRESS.

The Objects of the Order of Elks Ple tured in Beautiful Language-The Participants in the Exercises-A Beautiful Custom in Remembrance

The Elks' memorial services, which are annually observed on the first Sunday in December, is an event which brings to the Academy of Music a vast concourse of people, and the observance on Sunday last was no exception to the rule. The ceremonies were announced to begin at 3 p. m., but long before that hour the beautiful Academy of Music was filled from pit to dome, many hundreds of people being compelled to stand during the entire ceremony, and it is not too much to say that the 3,000 or more persons present were never more highly entertained. Exalted Ruler of Norfolk Lodge, E. R. Joynes, presided, and to his credit be it said he acquitted himself in a manner which was a pleasure to his friends.

The music of the occasion was furnished by a select orchestra of well-trained musicans under the skilful direction of Prof. A. F. Koerner, and the opening prayer was by Rev. A. S. Lloyd, of St. Luke's Church. Dr. Lloyd is not an Elk, but so closely is he endeared to the members of Norfolk Lodge that it would be painful to them to miss his presence at their services, Following the prayer the regular order of exercises was taken up and observed as published in the programme Saturday morning, with a slight exception. The ceremonies were closed with the singing of the doxology, after which Rev. Dr. M. B. Wharton, of Freend prayer. The following were the soloists: Miss M. K. Ewell, Mrs. J. P. Kevill, Miss B. L. Williams, Miss L. M. Edmunds, Mr. W. D. Crowell.

The memorial address, delivered by the Hon. Edwin B. Hay, of Washington, the Grand Exalted Ruler of the Elks, was a masterly effort. Mr. Hay consumed over an hour in its delivery, and yet the thousands who heard him the from Exalted Ruler of the ton, the Grand Exalted Ruler of the Elks, was a masterly effort. Mr. Hay consumed over an hour in its delivery, and yet the thousands who heard him were so entertained that they seemed willing to sit for ever under the eloquence of his words. Mr. Hay spoke as follows:

Exalted Ruler, Brother Elks, Ladies and Gentlemen:

quence of his words. Mr. Hay spoke as follows:

Exalted Ruler, Brother Elks, Ladies and Gentlemen:

A single touch of rature makes the world akin. Nothing can bring us closer together than the realization of death. To-day the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks is in perfect harmony. Where the chill of Northern air is upon ice bound New England, Bostom holds its session, and where the Golden Gate opens its portals to the Pacific, from where the laughing waters of the Northwest make rippling musle, to where the Southern flowers bloom, in all places where Charity, Justice, Brotherly Love, and Fidelity, are the watchwords, tributes are offered to our departed brothers.

The custom of expressing sentiment for the dead is an index of civilization extending from the rude, symbolic ceremonies and inscription of the savage to the eloquent eulogies that embain the memories of the dead in the literature and songs of cultured people, words live when monuments crumble. Good deeds survive both. One by one as the years go by our companions are joining the caravan travelling through the shadowy valley, leaving to us the memory of our friendly intercourse and communion with them: the fruits of their labors and sacrifices and the lessons of their excellent example. To us, saddened by their death, belongs the duty of commemorating their virtues, emulating their example, and proving ourselves worthy to have had their friendship and esteem.

There is nothing in the name of the organization that conveys any idea of its purposes. Organized for social intercourse, it has become one of the most benevolent institutions in this country, and its practices of Charity—effective and unostentatous—make sunshine in durkened places, gladden hearts that are said, dries the tears of sorrow, paints the silver lining on the clouds of adversity, and throws the cloak of forgetfulness around the form of poverty. The Supreme Being comes first in the degree of reverence, and the good, the true, and the beautiful is a part of the worship. The Golden

The parable of the Samaritan teaches the first. It is an answer to the lawyer asking. "Who is my Neighbor?" Sick, wounded, robbed and neglected upon the road side one had fallen, unheeded by those who pass, among them even the priest and levite. The Samaritan paused, saw, stopped, cared for the wounded, ministered unto his distressed condition, clothed him, fed him and succeed thim. Which, then, was his neighbor? He that showed mercy. Then Jesus gald, "Go, thou, and do Likewise."

It is in following that precept, that admonition, that command, that this order is founded, and not only in almsglving does it find its way "to do likewise," but in the relief of distress in every form that comes to hand.

It will be so until mercy and affection of life. It comes like a ministering of life, it comes like a ministering of life, it comes like a ministering of life, it comes like a ministering so the state of life. Sunshine developes shadow, as the upstain of life give rise and use to file. Sunshine developes shadow, as the rose is not without its thorns: for life sunshine developes shadow, as the rose is not without its thorns: for more than half of all the human help tites, there be no penury, no pain, what would become of fortitude, patience, and resignation. If there were no greatness, no affuence, no wealth, what would become of human pitty, of temperance, and resignation. If there were no inequality of condition, no aministering and the unequal of brotherly love and justice? If there were no inequality of condition, no aministering and the unequal of brotherly love and justice? If there were no inequality of condition, no aministering and the unequal of brotherly love and justice? If there were no inequality of condition, no aministering and the unequal of brotherly love and justice? If there were no inequality of condition, no aministering and the city succeeding the family would beco of man unto one great household. Sympathy securates man from the brute creation.

Under the ennobling influences, jay and sorrow are not in the individual self alone, but for all around him. The life of one person becomes the reflex of ohers, and the soul migrates so that the happiness of others becomes his happiness, and a compensatory pleasure is vouchsafed by his feeling for others's pains and sorrows.

Sympathy is a beneficence at the command of us all—the pauper and the king alike.

Sympathy is brotherhood itself, constantly on our lips is the golden rule. Why do we fail in its practice? Because sympathy enters into our acts but slightly, and it is a divine command and natural instinct. We do not fully follow the rule by which all the problems of humanity can be solved. What depths of feeling, what extent of regard, what appeals to the mind, to the heart should be profered; what offers of love, of affectionate consideration, of advice should be tendered. The practical exemplification and the real solution is to put yourself in the other's place. If you are strong and he is weak descend from your strength and become a part of his weakness. See with his eyes, become a part of his being, so that your heart shall beat in unison with his. Then you could realize the full sympathetic chord that would govern your every act toward your brother and conversely his towards you.

CHARITY AND LOVE.

CHARITY AND LOVE.

While in the divine reference to the subject Charity, is the word expressed, yet it is accepted as Love, and it, beyond doubt, is the proper construction of the memorable words of Paul.

It is not the want of benevolence, it is not the want of benevolence, it is not the want of sympathy, that makes us as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal, but the want of Charity—Love. The gift of prophecy may be ours, the mysteries known to us; we may possess all knowledge, all faith and strength to remove mountains, but we are nothing without Charity—Love. It is said further, which is conclusive as to the interpretation of Charity (Love), as contra intended to almsgiving and benevolence. "Though he bestow all his goods to feed the poor and hath not Charity (Love) he is nothing," so it is this philosophy that shows us that Love is Eupreme, Love is Lasting, Love is Eternal.

Be strengthened by its influence, Instill it into chargers make it the strengthened in the str the law of existence. Love all charity are synonomous, and are of such sublime import that the inspired bods is a treasure house of gems of thought is a treat of these is Charity. It shall not be the province of the known of the assertion that "Charity is the greatest." The proposition is accepted as an axiom and needs no proving. Faith inspires Hope. Without Faith is there Hope? Faith is the bond of union between God and man, now and eternity. It is the means, Charity the end. The end is greater than the means, therefore the greatest of these is Charity, it is the means charity the end. The end is greater than the means, therefore the greatest of these is Charity, it is the means charity the end. The end is greater than the means, therefore the greatest of these is Charity is the end of the province of the

ANOTHER RAID.

There was another raid on last Sunday morning, made by Sergeant Taylor and Detectives Curtis and Williams. This time the charge was for selling liquor without a Iclense and the principal victim was Dr. Thomas Moran, the alleged President of the Stonewall Fourth Ward Democratic Club. The place raided was the upstairs of No. 589 Church street, where the club's rooms are said to be located.

An additional charge of keeping a disorderly house and selling liquor on Sunday was also entered against the officers of the club, and charges of nuisances were preferred against the others who were found in the place at the time it was raided and who were also arrested. The various accounts given, by those arrested, as to why they happened to be in the club-room at the time of the raid and their tales of the manner in which they obtained drinks, etc., on Sunday was very amusing. Considerable grambiling rearrested. Sunday was very amusing. Considerable gambling paraphernalia and liquors were captured and is still held as evidence against Dr. Moran. After hearing the evidence Justice Burroughs dismissed all the warrants against the patrons of the place, but sent the case of Dr. Moran on to the grand jury under bond of $259, his attorney. BACK TO HIS CELL AGAIN.

The feelings of John Thomas, the colored ex-convict who was released on Saturday last from the charge of embezzleing $31 from the restaurant of King, Moseley & Co., on Commercial Place, and who was later re-arreated on the same charge, were very different yesterday after Justice Burroughs was through hearing his case. After the man's re-arrest on Saturday Mr. Julius T. Saunders was employed by Rev. David King to prosecute Thomas and yesterday he succeeded in producing sufficent evidence before the Justice to Justify him in sending Thomas on to the grand jury.

Air. D. Lawrence Groner and Attorney M. T. Hayes represented the prisoner to Saturday and yesterday. A tilt occurred between counsel during the trial, growing out of the question put to the prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (The prisoner by Mr. Saunders, "Where were you working in 1882" (Th

It brings us to pay tribute to-day to those who have gone to the long home, those who have gone to the long home, and actuates us to engage in this mean and actuates us to engage in this mean and actuates us to engage in this mean most with tears, but with music, flowers and love-ladened words, which left our whole being upward, upward to the spirit world to mingle with those gone before and lost awhile.

It is a sacred moment. There is not one among us but who is better for such an opportunity. We are drawn away an opportunity.
