La Mountain is going to try another

The clause in the Kansas Constitution

The Mayor of Georgetown, D. C., has directed the removal of the alantus trees from the streets of that town, such trees having been declared a nuisance by municipal ordinance.

Captain John Porter, aged eighty-four years, one of the oldest citizens of Martinsburg, Va., died on Friday last week. On the same day his daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Stephens, of Shepherdsboro, died very suddenly.

Gold fish, which were originally brought to this country from China, and once kept in glass vases as objects of curiosity, have now become quite numerous in some of our rivers. In the Potomac large shoals of them may be seen sporting in the silvery water, and they are quite common in some of the creeks that feed the Hudson River.

The Postoffice in Vincennes, Ind., was robbed on Monday night, and valuable letters stolen. The burglar stole a brass lock bag, made up at Indianapolis for Evansville and Southern Indiana, an iron lock bag from Louisville for Henderson and other Southern Kentucky points-both bags full of letters and doubtless valuable.

Until recently it has been generally supposed that the only office of dining forks was to convey articles of food from the plate to the mouth, but another use has been found for them. A young gentleman, after dining at one of the fashionable hotels the other day, deliberately inserted the prongs of his dinner fork in his tangled mustache, and in the most artistic manner proceeded to straighten out that hirsute appendage.

The new system of sewerage in Paris contemplates the collection of all the sewerage water of the city into two great reservoirs, one each side of the Seine, which is to be disseminated by steam pumps upon the surrounding country, to serve as liquid manure. It is stated that this plan works admirably at Berlin, fertilizing the sandy plains around that city into a high state of fertility.

Parson Brownlow denies the newspaper story that he has been "struck with paralysis" and adds: "Should our Maker, in his righteous administration of affairs visit us with any such calamity, we will try and bear it without a murmur, regarding it as our due. If, however, we are allowed to choose one of many evils, we shall prefer to be struck with paralysis, blindness, dumbness, deafness, lunacy, the leprosy, or anything, in preference to Democracy."

M. Levarrier, the discoverer of Neptune, has been engaged lately in studying aberrations of the planet Mercury. He finds that the most probable cause of the existence of small asteroids, and he calls on his brother astronomers to assist in discovering them. The total eclipse of the sun in July, 1859, will afford an extraordinarily favorable opportunity for this. Photography affords a means of recording instantaneously whatever phenomena may appear.

Yellow fever prevailed in Galveston,

Texas, on the 9th inst. From the 7th to the 10th there were twenty-three deaths from yellow fever in Houston. The Republic, of that city, says that out of fifty-four persons residing at Cypress City, a small station on the Central Railroad, twenty-five miles from Houston, thirty-three, including the physician, were sick with yellow fever. The Union Howard Association sent up assistance.

Among the articles thrown overboard from the Quaker City, in order to save the ship, were sixty very valuable horses, estimated at least $1,000 each. On leaving the ship, the owner of the horses, as informed by his host that he would remain on board and take to the horses, but he said, "No, you had better come on board the bark with me, and be safe." Mr. Cooper, the first officer of the Quaker City, when ordered to dispose of the horses, observed that he would almost as soon throw himself over as the horses, but that the safety of the ship required that such precautionary steps should be taken. Two cows, which were on the lower deck, were saved.

At a meeting of the Buffalo Medical Association, Dr. Storck reported the case of a girl, 12 years of age, who passed from the bowels nineteen pins and five needles in the course of four days, and who confessed that she had been in the habit of swallowing them for three months, in order to get sick so that she might not be obliged to leave home and work out. One pin stuck in the throat, and gave some trouble, and the girl suffered occasional colicky pains, and had much swelling and tenderness of the abdomen, but there were no marked constitutional symptoms.

A Constantinople letter, received by the last mail, relates the almost incredible circumstance of the old barbarous law of Turkey which prescribes the assassination of all children which any Princess of the Imperial Family may bear to a subject, having been acted upon in the last few days. One of the Sultan's daughters, the wife of Mohammed Pasha, was secretly delivered of a fine boy. The Sultan had been to see her but a few hours before her engagement, and it is said that he gave express orders that the child should not be murdered. Nevertheless, "damned custom" prevailed; the officers of the seraglio who attended the Princess delivered over the babe to a eunuch to be strangled-and it was strangled accordingly.

MUSIC AS A MEDICINE.-Eugene de Mirecourt,

in his lively little biography of Felicien David, the composer, whose recent work, "Hirshlaeuum," was so successful at the Paris Opera, tells that when in the East, David cured a man sick with the fever by his piano-forte performances. The sick man, at the sound of the instrument, felt his fever leave him, and when it threatened to renew its attack, David would chase it away by a few preludes. In a week the man was well. This was not unlike the genuine original David played before King David.

Suicide of a Henpecked Husband.

An English paper contains the following story of a husband driven to commit suicide by his wife:

An inquest was held at Cambridge, on Saturday last, on the body of Henry John Masters, who had committed suicide by hanging. He left a letter addressed to his wife, in which he says: "You will get married again; I pity the unfortunate man that ever comes under your roof; he might as well be a toad under a barrow; there is some difference between the women in the shop and the frowns in the room; you cannot when alone give a kind answer. Oh, the deceit no one could believe; I always was cheerful before strangers, as I did not wish to let every one know what a fool I had made of myself; I can safely say the face has worn the smile when the heart bled, and many have said he has jumped into a good home; I can safely say I jumped out of one. You know I was unhappy, why did you not try to comfort me? No, but you were the more aggravating. My God! my God! I thank you that you left me nerve enough to write these few lines. When the wind blows and the snow falls, meditate upon these few lines, and say, 'God forgive his sins, and take him to that heavenly rest where there is all joy and happiness.' Keep this, look at it, and you know all the truth, so help me God. My time is getting short now, so I write no more. Go and pray to my heavenly Father to forgive my sins, and yours, and those connected with us. No more on earth from your loving and unhappy husband." The jury returned the following verdict: "That the deceased destroyed himself while in a fit of insanity, brought on through the bad conduct of his wife, and they thought the ought to be called before the jury and severely censured by the coroner." The coroner thought it would be better that the corpse should be conveyed to the wife in writing by him, and the jury concurred.

Mormon Idea of Heaven.

Elder Middlemas, one of the Saints of Mormonism, in a recent sermon at Salt Lake City, thus gave his ideas of Heaven:

I do not believe Heaven is that fairy, airy place of fancy that most people think it is. It is a bona fide place of materiality, much resembling this earth, only, of course, it is thousands of times larger, and everything there exists in greater perfection than the things of this earth. It is a globe just like the planet we inhabit. It is the home of God and the angels. That passage in the Scriptures which reads "A day with the Lord is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as a day," clearly establishes the fact that Heaven is a planet, a rotating globe, governed by the same natural laws and astronomical principles that this earth is governed by; but it is a much larger globe than our little earth, it takes 365,000 times longer to make a revolution upon its orbit than the earth. So we see that it is a fact that one of God's days, or a day in Heaven, is a thousand of our years.

They eat and drink and sleep in Heaven

the same as we do here. Earth is emphatically a miniature heaven. I believe they have a printing office in Heaven, and electric telegraphs and short-hand reporters. Why not? Are they not greater than we on earth? I believe there is a channel of communication extending from my mouth to the home of the angels, and probably an angel at the telegraph office in Heaven is now waiting for the news from here, and as soon as he gets it he will take it right to the hands of the printer; they will set it upon type and print it in newspapers, and then boys or men will jump on horse back and ride around giving the inhabitants of Heaven the latest news concerning the kingdom of God on earth. There are more than two reporters here-more than brother Long and brother Watt. I believe there is a reporter here from Heaven to find out who is speaking, what he is speaking about, and everything else of interest. He sends the items, as fast as he gets them, right up to Heaven, and there they are printed.

The Use of Tobacco.

A "Convallescent" correspondent of the Mobile Register, writing from New York, furnishes the following curious experience of a tobacco slave:

I suffered more from nervousness than real sickness. Some days ago my physician, who is a very learned Theban, advised me by all means to leave off smoking, chewing, or using tobacco in any shape. Without the slightest hesitation I agreed to do precisely what he recommended. It never crossed my mind that I might suffer in making the attempt. Now I have for thirty years been a regular cigar smoker. At home or abroad, night and day, I have averaged not less than twenty to twenty-five cigars a day, except when by way of variety I have left off and smoked a pipe. When traveling I use chewing tobacco. I promised the doctor to leave off, and I have religiously kept my word; but for a hundred hours I have hardly known whether I was standing on my head or my feet, or writing with two or three pens-but I flatter myself I have conquered, and if I smoke pipe, cigar, or cigarette, chew, take snuff, or use tobacco in any shape until after the Charleston Convention in 1848, I hope I need be shot. It is a very curious fact that a habit should get such a hold upon a man. People say, "Oh, I can leave off using tobacco at any moment." Let them try it, and they will soon see or feel that a habit is not so easily got rid of or laid aside. It is as bad as drinking, and I do not know that I have been a more confirmed smoker than many others with whom I am acquainted. A choice, fragrant cigar is a luxury. It is very soothing-very exhilarating-but awfully expensive. My cigars have averaged more than $1 a day for twenty years. It is frightful to think of when you have ceased to be a smoker! But what is the odds? It will not make a great difference a hundred years hence whether your cigars cost $1 or $50 a day. It is all smoke-vapor!

A Breach of Promise Case.

A young woman in Rochester, New York, has lately sued a man for breach of promise of marriage, and recovered $900. The principal evidence against the defendant was the fact that he gave the plaintiff his tobacco box, and borrowed a gun of her father, both of which circumstances he thus explained in his testimony:

"I heard her evidence in regard to my attachment for her. When I would pass by her father's house, she would come out and ask to ride. I never took her out riding but once or twice in my life-once to Penfield and once to Pittsford-I am not positive which was first. I went to Pittsford with her alone the next day to Penfield. I remember leaving my tobacco box with her; I had been to singing-school. Nothing was said on the way about affection for her. It was cold, and they asked me to go in and warm myself, which I did. I had got warm and started for the door; took out my tobacco box and took a chew of tobacco; Mary reached out her hand across the store for the box; I let her have it, she said: 'When you take this box, you have got to take me.' I said very well, and she got it for me, for all that I know; I had no talk about marrying her then, or at any other time; I used to get there occasionally to borrow the old gentleman's gun, and sometimes they 'helloed' at me.

Noon Dispatches.

Western Tract Convention.

CHICAGO, October 20.

Second Day-The forenoon was occupied in the discussion of resolutions offered the previous day, which were adopted with slight amendment.

In view of the Harper's Ferry affair, a resolution, to the effect that the Convention desired the abolition of slavery by peaceful means alone, was unanimously adopted.

The committee appointed to report a plan for Tract operations, presented a report, which proposes the establishment of an agency for obtaining anti-slavery tracts wherever published. The committee to be empowered to raise funds for procuring and distributing such tracts.

The Cincinnati and Boston Societies are requested by a formal act of the Board of Directors to accept a committee of United Agency; considerable discussion occurred. The report was adopted.

A committee of nine was appointed to carry out the intentions of the Convention, which then adjourned.

Democratic Convention.

Boston, October 20.

The Democratic Convention of the Fifth Congressional District was held
