The fifteenth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. "Tine" Turner was made the occasion of a very delightful party Saturday night. A large number of friends, embracing the leading citizens of the city, assembled at the beautiful home of the happy pair, tendered congratulations, and presented many handsome testimonials of their regard. Among the presents were a complete set of books from China from a number of the young people with whom the bride and bridegroom of fifteen years ago are still favorites. Altogether, it was a very delightful affair, rendered out of real regard and thoroughly enjoyed, because every one fully entered into the spirit that prompted it. That the lives of the happy couple may glide as smoothly along beyond the time for the golden wedding is the sincere wish of their friends who were present, and hosts of others who were not.

DIVORCE.

An Actress in a Great Play Tries It Herself.

A letter from New Haven, Conn. gives the following:

Mr. Charles E. Furbish's dramatic company, the "Fifth Avenue Combination," has for several years traveled in New England, giving representations of Mr. Augustin Daly's plays. The "leading lady" of the organization has been Elizabeth White, known as Georgiana Langley. She is beautiful, about thirty years old, and an excellent actress. She made a marked success in the drama of "D. Vance," and now she has obtained a real divorce from her husband. Last summer Mr. and Mrs. Furbish stayed in the city for some time, occupying a fine cottage, driving fine horses, and amusing themselves in good society. Here they made the acquaintance of Mr. Don Thompson, a wealthy widower, and his daughter, Lizzie, a pretty young brunette. These four were much together in quest of recreation; and it was soon noticed that in their rides Mr. Thompson and Mrs. Furbish occupied one wagon, and Mr. Furbish and Miss Thompson the other. This arrangement was not satisfactory to Miss Thompson, because she discerned that her father was falling so love with the fascinating actress. She called Mr. Furbish's attention to the subject, but he took no active measures to stop the course of events. Early in the fall he re-organized his company for the dramatic season, but his wife refused to travel any more. She said that she intended to retire from the stage, and he interpreted that to mean that she intended to get a divorce from him and marry Mr. Thompson. He went off on a tour, and a short time ago received a notice that she had begun a suit to get rid of him. Her accusation was drunkenness, and he wrote to her that he should make no opposition, and he was satisfied that she loved another. Later on he sent her the message: "I hope you are as happy as I am unhappy." His intention was to get her to quit, but the court ruled that she could not do so until she had her divorce. She is now happily married to Mr. Thompson, and they are understood to be matrimonially engaged. Miss Thompson is greatly incensed, and when somebody suggested that she might balance the account by marrying Mr. Furbish, she replied: "Well, revenge is sweet." That remark has grown into a rumor that she is really engaged to the former husband of her prospective step-mother.

A SELF-EXCUSED MURDERER.

The Hartford Courant of Friday contains the following: Twenty-two years ago a young man in New Haven was engaged to marry a young woman there. For some reason she transferred her promise to marry, if not her affections, to another person. The first suitor, who was a respectable mechanic, disappeared of the match and declared that his rival was a disreputable person who would lead his affianced a wretched life, and that while he could surrender her himself, he would rather she should die than marry that man.

Accordingly, and as he said solely to save her from the awful fate of such a degrading marriage, he killed the girl. He did not attempt to conceal his deed; he justified it, and regarded himself as the savior of his girl's happiness. He was tried for murder, and acquitted on the ground of insanity, although he stoutly denied that he was insane, and said that he had acted upon his cool conviction of what was best for the girl, and was ready to suffer the penalty of the law for the homicide. He was committed to the County Jail by the Court; he remained there seven or eight years, all the time protesting that he was in his right mind, and that the State should either hang him for murder or release him.

He was then transferred to the State Prison at Wethersfield, and while authorities do not appear, under his sentence. There he continued until his death in the same state of mind, apparently rationally on all subjects, except that he insists that he had a right to kill the girl to save her from dishonor; and that if the State thought otherwise it should have punished him as a murderer.

This is the story of Willard Clarke, who has now petitioned the Assembly to remove him from the State Prison to the Insane Asylum at Middletown.

LAKE-TITICACA CRUSTACEA.

Mr. W. Faxon has described and figured, in the Bulletin of the American Comparative Zoology, the collection of crustacea made by Prof. Agassiz and Gorman at Lake Titicaca. "Agassiz," he remarks, "a species of Cypris, all the specimens collected belong to one amphipodous genus, Allochroa, which had hitherto afforded but one or two authentic fresh-water species, ranging from Maine to Oregon and the Straits of Magellan. Seven new species are described in this paper from Lake Titicaca. Several of them are remarkable among the Orchestoidea for their abnormally developed epidermal and tergal spines. Some are also noteworthy as comparatively deep-water forms of a family commonly regarded as pre-eminently littoral. I believe that no Orchestoidea have heretofore been found at such a high altitude, six to six feet above sea level. Orchestoidea (Talitrus) Brasiliensis Dana, and Nicotiana Dana, dredged in the harbor of Rio Janeiro (at what depth is not specified by the Wilkes Exploring Expedition. The marine species usually inhabit the shores above low-water mark, and the previously-described fresh-water species are found in shallow water of brooks, pools, or edges of lakes."
