It was altogether one of the most delightful meetings of the Circle, much of which was due to Mr. Knight and his committee and the efforts of Miss Tipton to make all enjoy themselves.

The report of the Assessor was negatively, owing to the singular mode in which that "ancient official" has seen fit to do the duty assigned him by law, viz: assessing the property of the whole city without being duly qualified. At this stage of the proceedings Grace resurrected his ancient subject of exterminating the destroyer of the city's peace of mind, whereupon the modest Whipple undertook to get in a word or two edge-wise on his trouble got "rapped on the knuckles" by Grace, which so enraged the garrulous son of Yutan that he just went for his colleague until there was scarcely a grease spot left.

Business Transacted by the Board This Morning. The Board met in regular session, all the members present and President Bell in the chair.

The Engineer, on motion, was instructed to establish the grade of the west curb lines of Coleman street and west curb line of Coleman avenue. A communication from citizens on Ludlow street between Pearl and Third streets, asking for the improvement of that street, was referred to the committee on Street Repairs.

Some other unimportant business was transacted, after which the Board adjourned. It Wouldn't Work. Yesterday evening two darkeys walked into Uncle John McCall's rag-house, on Walnut street, and threw down a sack of stuff which they wished to dispose of at so much a pound. One of them said:

"Mistah McCall, heah's some fast-class rags what we fetched to you, and you must gib us a good price." "Whut-kind are they?" "Dis pile of rags, sah, are from a millinery shop, and dey's fine, I tell you, boss."

"Well, dump 'em out, and let's see what you have." The "goods" were emptied on the floor, and proved to be remnants of oil-tinting stuff. Uncle John carefully examined the lot, and then straightening up and fixing his eagle eye on the sable rag-gatherers, quietly said:

"Now, boys, what's the use of lying to me that way? You know you stole these rags from my pile down on the wharf. I'm much obliged to you for bringing them up to me." The "boys" didn't wait to hear any more, but dashed out on to the street and around the corner in the direction of Bucktown, like a streak of greased lightning. "Uncle John" had made a random shot, but it struck home.
