THE STATE CAPITAL.

Correspondence of the Star.

COLUMBUS, April 16, 1877.

Some of the Solons are straggling back after the three-weekly adjournment. The little Legislature—that is the eight-tenths of them that are left—will be up, I suppose, in the morning.

Wiltse vowed on leaving that he should triumph this week with his Mitchell Avenue Bill. It seems a pet measure of his, and he is as zealous in the matter as the Murphys are in fighting whisky—that is, he is red hot.

Talking about Murphys recalls the fact that they are turning Columbus upside down. Last night was the greatest success they have yet had. The Opera-house, which holds two thousand people, was jammed full, and as many more cried to go in and could not. Seven hundred and sixty signed the pledge during the meeting. The reformed drunkards occupied the stage and a pretty much conducted the meeting. The City Hall, which will hold three thousand, will be used to-night and will be packed. You may as well get ready for a time in Cincinnati, for the movement will strike your city pretty soon. Moral suasion and kindness does the work. No one speaks of the drunkard as a wretched outcast, nor does any one call a saloon-keeper a "villain." They are simply overwhelmed with loving words and sought to come up on the platform of total abstinence, and herein lies the tremendous power of the movement.

Hon. Thomas H. Thrasher, of Dayton, has raised quite a breeze by the introduction of what he termed "a little local bill for the benefit of Dayton only"—a bill to regulate street carroad companies. It looked as innocent as a fresh-born baby, but on scrutiny it was found to contain this curious clause, viz: "That whenever the lines of any two or more street railroad companies are organized under the laws of this State, or of an adjoining State, meet or intersect," &c. Now what was that clause, "or of an adjoining State," put into a bill to help Dayton street railroads? For Dayton has no such street railroads. On inquiry it was discovered to be a whopping big nigger in the woodpile. The bill is a big fraud, and Thrasher means a good deal more than Dayton by that bill. He meant Cincinnati likewise, and more than likewise.

They say the grants of certain street railroads in Cincinnati will soon expire; also there is a street railroad in Cincinnati chartered perpetually by Kentucky. Under this bill the Kentucky road could lease the Cincinnati roads and operate them forever under its Kentucky charter. Was that what Hon. Thos. H. Thrasher meant? If not let him rise and explain. The bill will probably be strangled in the Senate in a day or two on account of this exposure.

Another bill came from the Senate Friday which claimed only to reduce the city taxes of Toledo to 19 mills. On examination it was found that the bill really forbade the collection of any State and county taxes in Toledo at all, and did substantially the same thing in every city in Ohio! Was it purely a blunder, or did some crafty chap do it "on purpose" in the question now. The bill didn't get through the House, although it had passed the Senate. Question, of Clifton County, has a bill to establish members' pay at $500 a year, and $5 a day to be deducted for absence. But a Wheeling toby the bill don't use,

Only two weeks more of this General Assembly. We draw a long breath and thank the Lord for that.

CINCINNATI.

REV. DR. NOAH PORTER.

His Lecture at College Hall Last Night.

The subject of the lecture in the course of Christian Philosophy last night was "God Knowable Through the Spiritual in Man."

Man, said President Porter, is a part of nature. It has usually been conceded that he is the highest form of created existence, to which all others are subordinate. It is only of late that this has been disputed. It has been reserved for the scientists and philosophers of modern times to question this. The evolutionists expect some higher form of existence. Physicists of a certain school argue against man's supremacy from the vastness of the universe and the length of time which its past history has required. The evolutionist has no solid ground to stand on. Physical man occupies a very narrow space, however extended and lengthened, time, however overwhelming, are inferior to the mind that thinks and interprets. Man shows his superiority in understanding nature, and in ruling over nature, and in knowing his Creator. Moreover, we can not imagine any created being a superior to man in the quality or kind of his activities, only in their range and energy.

Man shows his superiority to nature by the capacity of emotion. The faculty of will is an endowment still higher. But what does man show God to be? Is God, as manifested through man, shown to be a Personal Being, and a Person who recognizes and endorses the moral law? In answer we urge that, if God is known to be intelligent, there is no special difficulty in according to Him feeling and will. Then, if the highest form of created existence is the personal, including the moral, much more may we believe that God is a moral Person. The universe of God, as we find it, shows feeling in the form of love. The constitutive law of man as an individual, as a social, shows that this feeling is moral. Science can only evade or avoid these conclusions by leaving out of view spiritual phenomena, and among these last, the phenomena of feeling and conscience. It is unscientific to overlook these and equally unscientific to refer them to mere sentiment, and deny their place and their importance in our intellectual theory of the universe and its Creator.

UNDER THE WHEELS.

A Child's Thigh Broken by a Milk Wagon.

Little Minnie Harkie, aged five years, daughter of Mr. J. H. Harkie, a hardware dealer at No. 289 Main street, while crossing the street in front of her father's residence, at half-past 10 o'clock this morning, was run down by one of B. H. Macke's milk wagon teams driven by a man named Wiesmann, and suffered a broken thigh.

Just as Wiesmann jumped on the wagon after delivering milk to a family opposite the depot, and before he had started off to gather up the lines, the horse started off on a brisk trot, and caught the poor child before she could get out of the way. Wiesmann did all that was possible in checking his team, but was too late. The testimony of several witnesses to the sad accident exonerates him from blame, and the father of the victim refused to have him arrested.
