PRETTY POLL.

Polly is gone. Polly is the Widow Beers' parrot. The Widow Beers is young and comely; the parrot old and ugly. Forty years ago a friend made Polly a present to Widow Beers' father.

Mr. Beers served to outline the plastic and no one knows but that the parrot had lived forty years before. Polly found the basement window open. Polly wanted to see the world. "Never too old to learn," shrieked Polly. She went declaring that a parrot can go it when they're old.

Polly is gone. The widow bewaileth. "I do so want the dear, ugly, old, greasy thing back again," she remarked to a "gentleman connected with the press," who was a great deal more anxious to get about that parrot than if it had belonged to his mother. But let that pass. "I don't care if Polly did swear and chew the furniture," sobbed the Widow Beers.

But Polly did worse. The Widow Beers one day hired a girl to sew on her machine. It was a good, pious girl. She sewed on Sunday. What do you think the Widow Beers' ugly, old green thing" did? Hey? That parrot must have known that it was wrong to sew on Sunday. Because as one seventh of shall they rip? What? That parrot pranced under that pious girl's dress, blundered quietly up to her knee and bit her. The girl cried "The Devil's got me!" She thought he had, for breaking the Sabbath. But it was not. It was only the Widow Beers' Polly. Any person finding the Widow Beers' parrot now wandering abroad, strange countries for to sew, will confer a favor by restoring to the dear, ugly, green old thing" to the Widow Beers, 48 West Eleventh street. [N. Y. Graphic.]

A correspondent of the London Times, after toiling through the dust and slime on the Lower Danube, reached Galatz and asked for a bath. He was told that the only bath he could have was a hot one. Accepting the offer, he was shown to one of a range of rooms with plunge baths in the corner. A sturdy Wallachian dandy of twenty-five was the attendant. She spoke only a few words of German, just enough to ask whether he would have soap and "altes." Seeing that there was nothing to dry himself with, he consented to have "altes," though with some misgiving as to the ultimate result. She told him to get into the bath and ring when he was ready for somebody to come to him. He rang accordingly, when she herself appeared with soap and towels, bare feet, and bare middle. She told him that the large piece of flannel she held in her hand was intended to be used by herself in cleaning him thoroughly. The offer was made in perfect simplicity; there was not a touch of coquetry about her, and her baby outside was calling to her, with pursuit of her legitimate business, with her child, perhaps for a jazy husband, she proposed to wash thoroughly as a groom would have washed a child or a groom would clean a horse.

WASHINGTON.

Special to the Star. AS TO MEXICO.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The credentials of Senor Mata, with accompanying documents, were presented to the Secretary of State yesterday, who received them for consideration. It is possible that the question of the recognition of the Diaz Government, upon which will depend the acceptance of the credentials of Mr. Mata, will be fully discussed at the Cabinet meeting to-day. The general sentiment of the Government is not inimical to the recognition of the Diaz Government. This, however, will not affect the determination of the Secretary of State to vigorously prosecute the decided policy resolved upon in the suppression and punishment of border raiders. The Secretary of State attaches little importance to the treaty of 1861 for the extradition of criminals, which, with other crimes, includes that of larceny of cattle or other goods and chattels committed within the frontier States or Territories of either of the contracting parties. The Secretary forcibly observed that extradition treaties were of great utility in the arraignment of criminals in countries where there are organized courts and other means of enforcing justice through juries, and an efficient police; but in the frontier of Mexico, the vast region from which these marauding expeditions emanate, there are no such means to bring offending parties to justice. People lead a roving life, without any fixed habitation, possibly without any names by which they might be identified. Under such circumstances, any attempt to carry out the stipulations of an extradition treaty would be utterly fruitless. It is quite evidently the purpose of the Secretary to prosecute a relentless war upon the class of persons who for years have been violating American soil with impunity.

THE SPEECH OF SENATOR BLAINE

at Woodstock was by the Secretary characterized as a most extraordinary and untimely effusion, and he did not think that the Senator could justify the atrocious murders and other crimes committed upon his fellow-citizens by the semi-civilized roving parties from the frontiers of Mexico. The Secretary did not think that the attention of the people of the United States would thus be diverted from the important reforms now going on under direction of the President.

HEADQUARTERS AT CINCINNATI.

Henry J. Martin, Special Agent of the Treasury, will be placed in charge of the new special agent district of inland ports, with headquarters at Cincinnati.

The Diaz Representative.

National Associated Press to the Star. WASHINGTON, July 6.—Senor Mata, R-representative of the Diaz Government, had an informal interview with Secretary Evarts yesterday and stated the object of his visit to this city, at the same time presenting his credentials. The entire interview was informal. It is understood Mr. Evarts will present the case at the Cabinet meeting to-day, when a decision will be reached as to whether the Diaz Government is to be recognized. The general belief in official circles is that Senor Mata will be received as the R-representative of Diaz, and a full recognition accorded to the latter.

The Secretary of Treasury

yesterday afternoon issued a call for

NEW YORK, July 6.—Secretary of Treasury Sherman arrived in New York this morning from Cape May, and visited the Custom-house, where he had an interview with Collector Arthur. He also attended a meeting of the Syndicate at 12 o'clock, and it is understood that he will have a conference with the Commission in regard to the recent reduction in the Custom service. It is understood that a further reduction may be necessary in the Custom-house. The Commission has still under consideration the day inspectors, and a list of the gaugers and weighers who can be dispensed with is being made out.

been the backer of the brigand Turk, who holds it the highest merit to despise and crush the Christian, body and soul; and yet she has her Christian Bible and missionary societies! She is, forsooth, the Defender of the Faith! So far as America is concerned, we have but one rival on earth, and that is England. Shall we be fools enough to play into her hands? In our hard fight for national life, we had but one efficient friend in Europe, and that was Russia. To go against her now, in moral or physical aid, would be the most unheard of ingratitude."
