
OUR GUESTS

And the Warm Contest in Which They Are Engaged.

The Situation Not Materially Changed Since Saturday.

Mr. Tilden Positively Out of the Fight.

And the Other Jews Still Bounding, With F再 in the Lead.

Thine's Letter of Dissidence at Last Promulgated.

The Indiana Delegation Reveals Its Allegiance to Kennedy.

Organization of State Delegations Today.

Cincinnati, June 21, 1880.

Editor was a long day with delegations, delegates coming in and going out, discussing the situation and making preparations for the coming convention. The atmosphere was hot and feverish, with a sense of excitement and expectancy that only a convention can create.

The delegates arrived from all parts of the country, representing the different states and their interests. They were gathered in the hotel where the convention was to be held. The air was thick with the sound of voices, arguments, and discussions. It was a typical day in the life of a convention.

The atmosphere was tense and charged with anticipation. The delegates were eager to make their voices heard and to influence the outcome of the convention. It was a day of action, a day of decision, and a day of hope.

The convention was expected to make some significant decisions, and the delegates were determined to make their mark. The atmosphere was electric, and the day was filled with a sense of excitement and determination.

The delegates were divided on many issues, but they were united in their desire to make a difference. They were determined to speak their minds and to influence the outcome of the convention. It was a day of action, a day of decision, and a day of hope.