The Derby Races—Empire's Defeat.
Derby Day is the day of days in the sporting calendar of England. Parliament adjourns over for the Derby races, and multitudes of all classes of people attend them.

The Derby stakes, for which horses are entered, consist of money which is raised by subscribers, each person entering a colt having to pay fifty sovereigns—$250.

The horses who run for the Derby will be three years old at the time of the race, or one year from the time of their being entered.

The Americans in London, and in fact, many of the best English judges of the turf, placed the fullest confidence in Empire, and believed, judging from his performance last fall, that he was safe to win the Derby.

There is a hurry and a movement; the horses are saddling. There are the riders, bearing the distinctive colors of their masters.

There is a hurry and a movement; the horses are saddling. There are the riders, bearing the distinctive colors of their masters.

Now for Thormanby, aided by Melbourne; he is as lively as a deer. Cautance rides him, and wears yellow and a black cap, the livery of Mr. Merry.

Here comes the favorite, as pretty a piece of horseflesh as ever the eye lighted upon. When he strips, his friends raise a shout of delight.

THE "OLD LINERS" FALLING IN.—The Examiner, published in Lancaster, Pa., the home of Buchanan, furnishes the following with regard to the former friends of Clay:

Another Fillmore Paper out for Lincoln. The Gallipolis Journal, which supported Fillmore in 1856, and has stood aloof, and in opposition to the Republican party, since boists the flag, and talks in this style:

ly, curses are uttered loudly, and then there was a shout, and that shout carries dismay to the hearts of the Americans, for Empire is nowhere. "It is impossible!" say all of us; "here is some trickery." Thormanby is the winner, Wizard is the second, and Horror, who was thought nothing of, is third; while Empire was, I think, sixth.

Mr. Ten Broeck, during the race, wore a face as calm as summer, and when the announcement was made, his coolness was the same. He lost no money, but gained nearly $60,000.

There may be some among your readers who do not exactly know why "Honest Old Abe" is called the "Rail Candidate," and the "rail-splitter of the Sangamon" (pronounced with the emphasis on gem).

The Illinois State Convention met at Decatur, Macon county, on the 9th of May 1859. Among the gentlemen on the platform was Abraham Lincoln, and every allusion to his honored name called forth a tempest of enthusiastic applause.

At an early stage in the balloting the Hon. Richard Oglesby, of Macon county, arose on the steps of the platform and requested general permission for "an old democrat, who had voted the straight Democratic ticket for thirty years, to present a small contribution to the Convention."

As "Dick Oglesby" is a privileged character, this permission was granted, and shortly, as Dick beckoned for them, a couple of men came forward from the main entrance, bearing a broad white banner, stretched between two common walnut fence rails, bearing as near as I can now recall it the following inscription:

"Well, gentlemen, I must confess I do not understand this. I don't think I know anything more about it than you do. It is very true that about thirty years ago I came to Illinois a poor boy, and that I 'landed' in Macon county. A few days afterward, I went some miles south of this place, in company with my old friend, John Hanks, to attend to some land which we had purchased, in the edge of the Sangamon timber. We cleared a piece of ground; put up a log house and split about 3,000 rails for our fencing; and I do say that I think I did the larger share of the work. Now, whether these two rails are specimens of what I made then, or of course I cannot say; but one thing I will say—I've made a good many better looking rails than either one of them."

Then the house came down in a perfect storm of applause, for the orator had reached the strong and honest hearts of the throng of pioneers before him.

Lincoln got into Congress in 1846, and so disgraced himself that he had to retire in 1848. He was elected to Congress in 1850, and so disgraced himself that he had to retire in 1852.

THE "OLD LINERS" FALLING IN.—The Examiner, published in Lancaster, Pa., the home of Buchanan, furnishes the following with regard to the former friends of Clay:

Another Fillmore Paper out for Lincoln. The Gallipolis Journal, which supported Fillmore in 1856, and has stood aloof, and in opposition to the Republican party, since boists the flag, and talks in this style:

A Freeman Sold into Slavery, while his Kidnappers go Free.
One of those disgraceful deeds that characterize the "barbarism of slavery" has just been perpetrated beneath the flag of Kentucky justice. A free man has been sold into slavery.

James Waggoner, a negro, was kidnapped at Cincinnati and taken over to Kentucky, where he and his two kidnappers were arrested and all put in jail. No one appeared against the kidnappers, for the facts had not become known to Waggoner's friends and so the kidnappers were released and Waggoner was advertised to be sold as a slave, for the jail fees.

The affidavit of Peter was introduced, but could not be admitted as evidence, according to the laws of Kentucky; but it showed that he had been set free by the will of his master, for whom he was named, in 1828; that he, then, or soon after, left Wythe county, Va., and settled in Ohio in 1831, and soon after that time, James was born, in Brown county, in that State.

The evidence on the other side did not disprove these facts; it consisted of the statements of two persons recently arrived from Virginia in pursuit of a fugitive from slavery, that they knew Peter Waggoner, the former owner of James' father and that he had been set free by that person's will in 1828; that the will had been annulled in 1853, twenty-five years afterwards.

A letter was read from the alleged owner aforesaid, which contained this very graphic description of his lost chattel—"He is tall slim man and has a crooked leg of white in his eye, and a donkey look."

On this proof the Mayor decided that Waggoner was a slave, and instantly he was hurried into a buggy by the sheriff, and driven towards Alexandria for the auction block. An injunction was got out, and while the sheriff's party was near Alexandria, Col. Smalley, with one of his swiftest horses overtook them, and acquainted them of the fact that an injunction was in pursuit, and that the party holding it were not far behind. He then took the negro into his buggy and pushed ahead, but when the injunction party reached Alexandria, the negro could not be either seen or heard of. No one in the place had either seen or heard of the sale; but the sheriff's party told the injunction party that Dr. J. Q. A. Foster of Newport, had purchased the negro for $700, giving his note for that amount endorsed by a man named Wilson.

The Cincinnati Gazette, in treating of this diabolical outrage, says: Here is a free man, a man born of parents legally freed and residing as free in Ohio, kidnapped, kept in jail six months, and finally sold for jail fees, while his kidnappers were allowed to escape.

We trust our readers whose blood will be stirred by the recital of this wrong, will not forget that the Democratic party is the champion and defender of that system of which this whole business is but the legitimate outgrowth. Their indignation should not vent itself in frothy declamation and violent invective, but should crystallize into efficient action.
