

NORTHERN TRIBUNE.

SATURDAY, MARCH 3, 1883.

WIDE, WIDE WORLD.

Though he was giving all his life, Wm. E. Dodge left $350,000 to charities in his will.

The Lutherans in the United States are taking steps to erect a colossal bronze statue of Martin Luther in Washington.

When the great freshets of 1832 and 1847 left the Ohio valley, a deadly pestilence followed on both occasions, and immediately.

The timbered lands of Arizona embrace an area of 5,700,000 acres, which will probably be surveyed within the next three years.

Chicago fairly revels in the possession of 1,453 lawyers, while Illinois has more courts of record and judges than there are in Great Britain.

The defaulting officers of the city bank of Jersey City have been sentenced to hard labor in state prison for ten, six and four years, respectively.

A crabbed old bachelor says: "When rain falls, if she gets the biggest half of the umbrella they are lovers; if he takes the bigger half they are married."

The snow storm of Friday and Friday night of last week in Wisconsin blocked railroads to a greater extent than heretofore this winter. In some of the cuts the snow was packed thirty feet deep.

Besides the three electrical railroads in Prussia, Holland and Ireland, now in successful operation, there are four more in the course of construction and two others are projected in various countries of Europe.

The machinery of the cotton mills of the country now perform, with 160,000 people, the same work that would require the labor of 16,000,000 of people by the spinning wheel and hand loom of our foremothers.

The bark Amethyst, which from 1820 to the breaking out of the war was a champion New Bedford whaler, has been since in the merchant service, but now she lies at a San Francisco dock fitted out as an Arctic whaler. She was built in 1820 and is now said to be as sound as when she first struck the water.

It was discovered by a Bloomington physician that the internal organs of Samuel Fuchs, aged twenty, who sought treatment for lung troubles, were all misplaced, his heart being on the right side, and his other interior mechanism outside of their proper spheres. Heretofore he has enjoyed good health.

Mr. Hempstead, passenger agent of the New York and Hartford railroad at New York, recently refused to pass Mr. Nims, passenger agent of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad, from New York to Boston, so Mr. Nims paid his fare and returned to his home at Colorado Springs. There he found a letter from Mr. Hempstead asking for passes for seven friends over the Denver road to Durango. Mr. Nims replied that Mr. Hempstead's friends could go over the road without passes, as the roadbed was good, only they should look out for trains, so they wouldn't get run over.

Julian Hawthorne's Encounter.

Everything in Germany is subordinate to the army, and this subordination makes the officers perhaps the most arrogant set of men on the face of the earth; they walk the sidewalks and never think to give way to anyone, man or woman; while the least infringement of their dignity calls forth the sword, which is used by them with the utmost freedom. Sometimes they find that with an American they go a little too far.

In Dresden, Julian Hawthorne, the author is credited with following exploit: He had been driven from the sidewalk many and many a time by the German officers, till finally one day coming over the Elbe on one of the bridges with a friend, he vowed that the next German officer he met should at least give him half of the sidewalk. He soon met one and neither being willing to give way, they walked directly into one another. Hawthorne did not budge, neither would the German; they glared at one another for a few moments, when the German drew his sword and attempted to strike Hawthorne with the flat of the blade. In a twinkling Hawthorne knocked the officer down, took his sword away from him, broke it across his knee and threw it into the Elbe. The disgrace of having lost his sword was so great that the officer never dared mention the circumstance; so Hawthorne escaped without a fine or a punishment.

As a rule Germans have little gallantry for women; seldom giving way to them on the sidewalks. The sidewalks in the majority of streets are exceedingly narrow, with only room for one to walk on. Once in Düsseldorf the wife and I were walking along, the wife in front; a German meeting us crowded her off the sidewalk into the gutter, and on the impulse of the moment I pitched him off into the street with more vigor perhaps than was necessary. It took no end of explanations to soothe his wounded dignity, nor could the officials—I had to go before Mayor—at all understand why it was that a man should ever give place to a lady on the sidewalk.

A Peerless Perfume.

The refreshing aroma of Floreston Cologne, and its lasting fragrance, make it a peerless perfume for the toilet.

How to Save.

All hard workers are subject to bilious attacks which may end in serious illness. Parker's Ginger Tonic will keep the liver and kidneys active, and by preventing the attack save much sickness, loss of time and expense. Delay at such times means danger.—Detroit Press. See other column.

The collection of papers relating to Benjamin Franklin which Henry Stevens has been making for many years in London, and which has been purchased by the United States, is said by the correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial Gazette to be invaluable. Some of the manuscripts were found in a tailor's shop, where they had remained seventeen years. One was cut into the pattern of a sleeve, and another was crossed with figures of a customer's measurements. The papers have been carefully mounted, and bound in sixty volumes. The most curious and valuable is the original of the petition of the Continental Congress to the King, endorsed by its presiding officer, Henry Middleton, and marked as having passed through Franklin's hands on Oct. 26, 1774. Another gem is the earliest autograph of Franklin, the manuscript of his "Articles of Belief and Acts of Religion" dated 1728. There is a letter by Franklin to Cadwallader Colden, earnestly advising him to marry, and giving many reasons why a man is likely to become worthless and unhappy unless he is a husband. Moral and other considerations are mingled in the most amusing way. An argument is even made in favor of marrying old women—"they are so grateful."

What Everybody Wants.

Is a reliable medicine that never does any harm and that prevents and cures disease by keeping the stomach in order, the bowels regular, and the kidney and liver active. Such a medicine is Parker's Ginger Tonic. It relieves every case, and has cured thousands. See other column.—Tribune.

Worth Remembering.

Now that the good times are again upon us, it is worth remembering that no one can enjoy the pleasantest surroundings in bad health. There are hundreds of miserable people going about to-day with disordered stomach, liver or kidneys, when a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic would do them more good than all the medicines they have ever tried.
