CHEBOYGAN.

As seen by the Press-Gang while on their Recent Excursion.

The editorial fraternity visiting Cheboygan while on the late excursion of the Western Michigan Press Association are unanimous in expressing their favorable impressions of our village, and the hospitality of our citizens. The following extracts from different papers we give to show the feeling of the fraternity towards Cheboygan and her people:

The boat arrived in Cheboygan in the night, and those of the party unprovided with rooms repaired to the hotels. In the morning it was found that ample arrangements had been made for our pleasure; carriages were placed at our disposal, and nothing tending to comfort was left undone. The Grand Central Hotel was the headquarters, and every point of interest was viewed, even the railroad sign on which Till Warner was suspended was "pointed out with pride."—Bangor Advance.

We found the Cheboygan people not one whit less hospitable than were those of the two villages we had made objective points. The Grand Central and Spencer Hotels were thrown open to receive us, printer's money was no good as long as we were in the city, and hacks were sent to the hotels to be used at our pleasure. They were used, and that freely, and, as everyone can testify, the trip about Cheboygan was no less pleasant than about the other places. The waterworks were visited, the principal factories, mill, etc., the jail and railroad sign board, where the villain, Till Warner, spent his last hours. Cheboygan is growing. The place was incorporated as recently as 1871, and has nearly 5,000 inhabitants. It has splendid facilities for manufacturing, and a large amount is here done. The Mackinaw division of the M. C. R. R., the location of the village upon the straits, are all favorable for this place to become a large and flourishing city.—the metropolis to a vast region, rich and unbounded in resources. The Cheboygan Democrat and Northern Tribune, two as healthy-looking newspapers as can be found in the state are here published.—Benton Harbor Palladium.

Cheboygan is a fine town, and is growing rapidly, and we believe will eventually be the metropolis of Northern Michigan; she already has a fine system of water works, obtained at an expense of $35,000, and many fine public and private buildings. Here again we were banqueted at the Grand Central Hotel, and the affair was fully equal to the ones preceding it.—Sparta Sentinel.

Cheboygan is likewise metropolitan in its make up, possessing water works, fine buildings, good roads, and an abundance of public spirited men. Its two newspapers are standing monuments of its business men.—Big Rapids Herald.

In Cheboygan everything was fine; we were carried to and from the landing without cost, and kept at the hotels and banqueted twice without the expense of a penny; in fact, we were given to understand that our money was not good. All day long, easy carriages, excellent equipages too, were at our disposal for a drive around the city, and when the hour for our departure for Mackinac Island arrived, we were driven down to the boat as we had been received from it, without the acceptance of a single cent. The citizens of Cheboygan are the kind of men that build cities and govern them, large of heart, clear of brain, kind and generous, built upon that scale of manhood known as the "noblemen of nature." They have a city of which they may well feel proud, and for what the visiting editors and their friends received at their hands during their short stay, they will ever remember in a kindly way both them and their city.—Ovid Union.

Cheboygan was reached about half-past 12, and those who had not already retired—probably half the party—repaired to the Grand Central, a first-class hotel, and took lodgings for the night. After breakfast next morning, hacks and carriages were courteously provided by the citizens of Cheboygan, and the forenoon was very pleasantly passed in driving about the city, viewing its numerous mills and manufacturing industries, its excellent Water Works, its beautiful streets and fine residences. Cheboygan is a fine city, brim-full of energy, and, like most Northern Michigan towns, its people dispense hospitality with a lavish hand.—Grand Rapids Post.

The return to Cheboygan was a repetition of the ride to the "Soo." We must not forget to mention that Capt. Bouchard and E. A. Hall, clerk of the steamer Messenger, are thorough gentlemen and did all in their power to make the trip a pleasant and a comfortable one. Owing to the late start from the Sault we did not reach Cheboygan until near midnight, but found the hotels open to receive us, the greater portion stopping at the Grand Central, a finely furnished and well kept house by J. M. French. The Spencer house, where some of the partly stopped, we are informed is also a well kept place.

After breakfast carriages were placed at the disposal of the gang, and all were driven about the town and over Duncan City. Cheboygan is a place of over 3,000 population, a live, go-ahead place. It contains several fine churches, many large business places, a number of large saw-mills, and some very fine residences. It has two good newspapers, the Democrat and Tribune, both ably edited and printed at home on cylinder presses. Both offices appear to be doing a large amount of job work. Cheboygan is pleasantly located, and is doing an immense amount of work in the shipment and manufacture of lumber. The town is supplied with a system of water works similar to that of Traverse City. The people are very enterprising and have spent considerable money boring for salt, as yet without success, but they do not propose to give it up, and we are told that work on the salt well will be resumed again soon. In addition to the lumber interests Cheboygan county has a good deal of fine farming land, which is now being fast developed. Its present is good, and its future prospects are decidedly encouraging.

One thing that might seem rather strange happened to us at this place—nobody would take our money. The hotel men refused it; the livery men would not have it; in fact, we were politely informed that our money would not be taken for anything in Cheboygan.—Traverse Bay Eagle.

The boat arrived at Cheboygan at midnight. Some remained on board until morning, others hid themselves to the Grand Central Hotel and Spencer House, two excellent hotels. The entire party were received as the guests of the citizens of Cheboygan and therefore no editor's money was good in that town. Friday until three o'clock was spent there to advantage. Carriages—a score of them—were at the disposal of the visitors. We found it a live town, full of push and public spirit. The kindness of the press there and of the citizens was duly appreciated.—Lowell Journal.

A TERRIBLE STRUGGLE.
A Man and Bear Fight to the Death.

Last Thursday afternoon Samuel Flynn was gathering blackberries back of Mrs. Ball's farm, on Mullet Lake, when he came across the dead body of a man partially resting on a log, at five o'clock. Mr. Flynn at once started for town, and about ten o'clock notified Sheriff Harrington. Yesterday the Sheriff, accompanied by Doctor Perrin and Justice Fife, went up to hold an inquest. It proved to be the body of a man named Devereaux, who lived in that vicinity. There was evidence of a struggle with some animal, and search revealed the carcass of a bear, and the examination of the dead man showed that he had made a hard struggle for his life. It is supposed that Devereaux had started out berrying, taking his gun along, and that while looking for berries had come across the bear and shot him, the ball passing through and breaking one of the bear's shoulders. The man was terribly bitten on the arms, shoulders, neck, side and lower part of abdomen. From his position when found it is thought that he managed to crawl to the log and recline on it, his head resting on one of his hands. The rifle showed several marks of the bear's teeth, the ram-rod being bitten and broken. As no ammunition was found upon his person it is presumed that he only took the loaded rifle with him and was not expecting to encounter so terrible a foe. The man was fifty-two years of age according to his statement. The verdict at the inquest was to the effect that the man had died of wounds inflicted by a bear.

The Pensaukee.

The schooner Pensaukee which went on Lighthouse Point bar Friday morning of last week still roosts on the bar. The Pendell commenced dredging last Sunday forenoon, and it took her 38 hours of steady dredging to get along side of the craft. Capt. Kitchen, of the Pendell, says that under her bow are large boulders with only a foot of sand on top of them. Monday a steam pump was put on board and easily keeps her free from water, only being required to run once or twice during twenty-four hours. The tug Champion pulled on her Wednesday and moved her stern around about 140 feet. Thursday she pulled on her three times but could not move her, but parted her 12-inch hawser. Thursday the Pendell's boiler became so full of sand that she had to come in and have it cleaned out. The tug Duncan City dredged while the Pendell was away, the latter returning to work yesterday. The Champion got aground Thursday and had to have the assistance of the Pendell.

POLITICAL TIT-BITS.

A good deal of presidential talk hits Sheridan.
Democrats are drinking heavily on carrying Iowa.
The New York Herald suggests Conkling and Blaine.
Foster says that there is no doubt but Foraker will be elected.
Tewksbury Boston will not easily defeat the irrepresible Butler.

Tilden and Kelly reconciliation will not stand—it is Democratic sand.
Foster says that 300,000 votes will be cast on the prohibition amendment.
Ohio Republicans contemplate two Democratic tickets with quiet satisfaction.

Why not the Democrats nominate Be-gole for 1884. It is believed he would pardon them for the cruelty.
Pendleton's civil service reform has been pronounced by the Democratic party unmitigated nonsense.

Harper's Weekly, speaking of Democrats, says; "John Kelley is the only courageous man in his party."
English spent Sunday with Hendricks and as Sunday is a good day for politics it is supposed both were willing.

The Iowa slate, to make Kinze Governor and Weayer Senator, will be broken by a numerous Republican vote.
Since Sitting Bull helped to lay the corner-stone of Dakota's capitol, he looms up as a possible Democratic nominee.

Blaine says he is not a candidate, but his friends know him the best qualified man for the position, and believe he wants it.

Henderson has paid a visit to the Hermit of Grammercy Park, and the "old ticket" was the sweet morsel feasted upon.

Headly's disease is contagious, several Democratic candidates are nervous, and getting very sick, and it is feared the result will be fatal.

The Ohio Democracy has been nipped in the bud with an early frost, which with its frequent nips and the malaria threaten seriously.

The Chicago Herald says of Democrats that unless they brace up and carry New York by a good majority, that "the outlook for them will be gloomy indeed."

The Cincinnati Enquirer, the most influential Democratic paper in Ohio, if not in the country, has read Hon. Geo. H. Pendleton out of the party. Civil Service Reform with Democracy is an unpardonable sin.

FOREIGN.

Hoste the French aeronaut crossed from France to England in a balloon.

It is denied that England or America has offered to mediate between France and China.

A number of Jews were mobbed in Agram on Saturday. The military fired into the mob, and several are reported killed. Large number of Italian laborers shipped from Toronto, Ont. to work on the Lake Superior section of the Canadian Pacific railroad.

It is announced that in the event of a war between France and China, Germany will not allow France to blockade Chinese ports in which Germany is interested.

The Vatican has adopted a very important decision in regard to the church question in Prussia, which will permit the removal of the misunderstanding between the Prussian Government and the Pope.

A Hong Kong dispatch says; "It is reported that the Chinese are erecting defenses between Canton and the mouth of the river. The question here now is, not will there be war, put when and where will it begin."

One of our young men happened to have a pair of handcuffs in his pocket, last Saturday night about 11 o'clock, and just in fun, you know, locked one on his wrist and the other on the wrist of a very pretty woman, and they both thought it was quite a good joke. A handcuff is a good deal like the marriage ceremony—that is, it is a good deal easier to slip it on than to slip it off, especially if you happen to be in an awful hurry. The club that her husband came to congratulate them with was a ball club, and it came awful sudden. The young man is sore in several places yet, and the lady herself doesn't feel very well. Never handcuff yourself to a woman, if by any possibility it may be necessary to jump out of a window and climb a fence! This is good advice.—Three Rivers Herald.
