

The Closing Year.
As the closing hours of the year are passing away, the mind naturally reverts to the scenes, through which we have passed during the last twelve months. Our pilgrimage here is one of continued change. A single turn of the kaleidoscope presents new combinations and new pictures. So it has been with many of us. While in some families, the only apparent change is that of increased age and greater experience, in many others it has been of a more serious and touching character. Some homes that were bright with joy at the beginning of the year, are now darkened by a shadow that will not dissolve. A loved member of the family has gone. The seat is vacant and there is a quietness about the home which is continually reminding us of our "great loss." It may have been a father, who for years has industriously labored for those he loved, or a mother whose constant care and affectionate love was felt by every member of the family; it may have been a kind and affectionate brother or sister, a loved son or gentle daughter, or the little prattler who is so sorely missed by all. This great law of change, in some cases, has been more severely felt. Father and mother have both gone, and the halls of the old homestead, that at the beginning of the year resounded with our merriest, now echo with the footfalls of strangers. With all of us there have been changes. We have all passed one more mile at one in the short journey of life, we have left behind us the opportunities of a year, opportunities that will never return, whether we have improved them or not. They are gone, and gone forever. In front of us, Hope beckons us onward. We begin to realize that "we are nearer our home, today than we have ever been before." The hold upon life in many respects is not so strong. The ties that bind us are not all here, and many of us begin to realize that their are ties which become stronger as we approach the other shore. Nature changes, the earth changes, the associations that once delighted us are now broken, many of them dissolved. With many there is a feeling of loneliness that tells us that we have no end during home here. We are proud to wish it otherwise. We would continue the pleasant home relations and we would keep them as they are, but these things must change. The slight turn of the next year's kaleidoscope will cause them to present altogether a new phase. Pleasant associations will be broken. New ones will be formed. Some of us must pass away. It is the law of change. It is God's law. We know not what is best. He knows. We cannot control these changes, we can only submit, and obediently say, "Thy will be done."

The New Year.
The HERALD extends to its many subscribers a hearty New Year's greeting. We do not do this as a matter of form. We do most sincerely appreciate the kindness extended to us during the past year. We conscientiously advocated what we believed to be right. This course offended many who had departed from the primary principles of their fathers. A few, and a very few, undertook to buy out us. They pursued us with a menacing malice. They privately interfered with our business. They tried to induce subscribers to do as they did. All the advertising which they could influence was kept from our office. We were kept informed of their secret and malignant attacks. In some cases they succeeded, in others they failed and we were informed of their mean work. Hundreds of subscribers who did not fully agree with us in our political views, were possessed of a magnanimous spirit and conceded to others the rights which they as men exercised for themselves. We have the highest respect for these people. There is a manliness about them which commands the respect of all; they are men who would scorn to do a mean act and then boast about it. The kindness which they have manifested towards us we most deeply appreciate. We make no complaints. In the future we propose to continue to advocate what we believe to be right. We do not expect to agree with all. A paper that attempts to do this will soon be without influence or subscribers. We will present our views upon public questions without regard to the expressed opinions of denigrators and their followers. We however, pledge our readers that we will not advocate or edit publicly and its opposite privately. We want all the subscribers that we can get, but we will not advocate what we do not believe to be true or right for all the subscribers in the county. Although we have promptly discontinued every subscriber who has requested it, our list has not decreased. There have always been men willing to take the places of those who were anxious to buy out us. We have now a larger subscription list than at any time since we have been in the newspaper business. We shall make every effort upon our part, by a strict attention to business and a fair discussion of public questions, to make the HERALD a welcome visitor at the homes of our subscribers to a lot of whom we most heartily extend a happy New Year's Greeting.

A PLUNGE TO DEATH.
A Train of the Birmingham Mineral Railroad Dashed from a Bridge to the Cahaba River. Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 28.—Twenty-seven lives were lost by the wrecking of a passenger train of the Birmingham Mineral Railroad Company at Cahaba river bridge, twenty-seven miles from this city, at 7:50 o'clock this morning. The wreck was caused by the removal of a rail on the middle span of the bridge. The train plunged into the shallow river, 100 feet below. It took fire after the fall and burned to the edge of the water, which was between three and four feet deep. After the crash robbers rushed to the scene and plundered the dead and dying. There seems to be little doubt that these robbers removed the rail which was missing from the bridge. Of the passengers and crew ten persons escaped alive. Most of the passengers were miners, who had round trip holiday tickets and were returning to their homes. The train was a local passenger which left Birmingham at 6:30 a. m. and was scheduled to make a circuit of the Birmingham Mineral Road, which is a branch line of the Louisville and Nashville, reaching all the important mining towns in this vicinity. It consisted of a locomotive, a baggage car and two day coaches. The train went to Toccoa, on the main line of the Louisville and Nashville. There it switched off to the Birmingham Mineral track and went to Gurnee, and from Gurnee to Blocton.

The Mineral Railroad trains are operated over the Southern Railway's Brerfield, Blocton and Birmingham Branch under a contract. On this part of the route the disaster occurred. Six miles south of Gurnee is the Cahaba river, a shallow mountain stream. This river is spanned by an iron bridge with wooden trestles on each side. The entire length of the bridge is 800 feet, and the length of the main span, on which the wreck occurred is 110 feet. The bridge was built four years ago and was regarded as strong. The main span is made of iron. When the crash came, the locomotive landed on its side almost at right angles with the track. The cars were piled up on each other. The entire wreck took fire soon afterward and was rapidly burned.

The first news of the wreck was taken to Hargrove, a telegraph station four miles from the Cahaba river, by a farmer who said that while passing near the place he heard a crash. Going nearer, he saw two spans of a bridge broken. When he discovered the burning wreckage in the shallow water, he could hear the groans of the wounded and dying but without waiting to see or hear he rode his horse rapidly to Hargrove, where the operator telegraphed to Birmingham and Blocton for relief. Meanwhile a few persons gathered at the scene to render what aid they could but it was too late to do much. Ten persons had gotten out of the wreck and the others had been burned.

When the relief train from Birmingham arrived the wounded were quickly attended to and sent to Blocton for further attention. The work of taking out the dead then began. Nothing was left of the wreckage but the smoldering ruins. Charred bodies were packed in between the iron frames where the seats had been. Most of the bodies had been burned beyond recognition. Some had their heads burned off and others nothing was left but skeletons. As rapidly as possible the bodies were taken out and laid in a row on the river bank. Samuel Spencer, colored, was the only one of the train crew who escaped alive. He was the fireman. Spencer jumped from the locomotive while it was in midair and landed in the water some distance from where the train fell. He left the scene for Blocton on foot soon after the wreck, almost crazed with fright. Among the survivors are Henry Handberry, who was taking his wife and two children out for a trip and William Gardner and Andrew Bryson miners from Blocton. Handberry was on the same seat with his wife and children when the crash came. The wife and children were killed and he was pinned down and would have been burned alive had he not been rescued by Bryson and Gardner. These two men also saved the women and their children mentioned above who were pinned down and appaled piteously for help. B. the time these five persons had been rescued the heat had become so intense that Gardner and Bryson were compelled to desist in their work of rescue. It is believed that fully three-fourths of the dead were killed outright in the crash, while the other were pinned down and burned to death. Gardner and Bryson were both severely hurt.

Dr. Ray, a Blocton physician, who attended Gardner, telegraphed tonight the statement made by Gardner as to the cause of the wreck. Gardner says that when he felt the cars leaving the track he looked out and saw three savage men rushing from a hiding place near the water's edge. After the wreck he says, they robbed the dead and injured and then fled to the woods. They did their work quietly, and offered no assistance toward rescue. Other facts tend to show that the disaster was the work of train-wreckers. An examination of the locomotive shows that Engineer White had shut off the steam and reversed before it went down, indicating that he saw danger as he approached the bridge and tried to stop the train. His charred body was found with his hand on the throttle. The survivors all say that the train left the track damped along the ties and then with a crash, plunged through the bridge. Expert engineers state that there is every indication that the rail was removed which derailed the train and caused it to pull down the bridge. The cross-ties show marks of the wheels. The flames had completed the work of destruction before any help arrived. The county around the scene of the accident is sparsely settled, and the few farmers who went to the scene arrived too late to be of much assistance.

A relief train with Superintendent Frazier, of the Southern Road, and eight physicians and nurses left Birmingham at 10 o'clock in the morning for the scene of the wreck. This train returned at 6 o'clock at night with the twenty-seven bodies. These bodies are now at undertaking establishments. Most of them are charred beyond recognition. Another wreck occurred near the Cahaba river bridge at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. A wrecking train that had gone to the relief of the passing train was standing on the track, when it was run into by a construction train from Birmingham which was on its way with men and timbers to rebuild the destroyed bridge. James Estis of Boyles, was fatally crushed and several other workmen were injured. Three men tried to wreck a train on the Southern Railway near Henry Ellen, fifteen miles east of Birmingham, by removing a rail on a trestle ninety feet high five days ago. The train left the track but the engineer managed by almost superhuman efforts to stop it before it could leave the trestle. In this case three men were seen running from the scene of the wreck and a crowbar with which the spikes had been withdrawn was found. Both disasters occurred in a wild, mountainous country.

The Bryante papers console themselves with the idea that Bryan will be President after 1901. It is a good idea. They can enjoy the feeling of victory from this time until Nov. 1900, and that will, in some measure, compensate them for the disappointment that awaits them if they should be rash enough to nominate Bryan again. Major David H. Bennett, of Backsburg, Montgomery county, a gallant Confederate, who rose from a private in the ranks to a majorship in the famous Stonewall Brigade, died Tuesday last. Trinity Methodist Church Lexington, has purchased from Mr. R. E. Hutten the new residence recently erected by him on Lewis street, next to Jackson avenue to be used as a church parsonage. The price paid for it was $1,000. Rev. Dr. Wightman and his family are now occupying it.

WASHINGTON LETTER.
(From our Regular Correspondent.)
Washington, D. C. Dec. 28.—"If Spain doesn't wish to see a more radical change of sentiment in the U. S. in favor of Cuba than that which has recently taken place in favor of a conservative course in dealing with the Cuban question," remarked a high official, "she will call off the lying press that she has lately been employing in Europe." He was referring especially to the report first published in a Paris dispatch to the London Times, that Germany had intimated to the U. S. Government that if it took any action calculated to aid the Cubans, Germany would join Spain in making war upon us. It was hardly necessary for the state Department to take the trouble to deny such rot as that, but its officials did so as soon as it was published. It can be stated on high authority that no European Government has ever given this government the slightest that it wished to interfere with the course this government was intending to pursue towards Cuba. On the contrary, some of them have given this government assurance that they would keep their hands off in case we had any trouble with Spain. The publication of this report was unquestionably intended to work upon public sentiment in this country, and through that sentiment upon Congress and the President; but even if such a report were known to be true, it would have an effect just the opposite from that intended. Americans have been outwitted in diplomacy by European nations, but they have never been frightened by any of them of all them, and what is more they never will be. Americans don't want war, but if they should have to fight Spain, they would much prefer fighting her backed by Germany to fighting her alone. Spain is regarded as such a pigmy among the world's nations that there could be but little credit attached to threatening her, but Spain as assisted by any of the great European nations would make a formidable foe, if it were not for the honorably avoided.

There is the usual anti-inauguration talk in Washington about having more artistic stands erected along Pennsylvania avenue for those spectators who prefer to pay for the privilege of viewing the Inaugural Parade from a seat, but nobody really expects to see anything different from the usual rough board stands which are always erected by the speculators who buy that privilege from the inaugural committee, and who, by the way, lose money much oftener than they make any. When inauguration day happens to be clear and fairly pleasant, the owners of the street stands reap a harvest, but if it is cold and storm, the seats on the stands are almost empty. There is plenty of money committed to pay for the erection of stands both artistic and comfortable, but it all has a string tied to it, and the contributors expect the committee to return it to them from the receipts for privileges and from the inauguration bill, and was he unto the committee which should fail to meet that expectation. As a matter of fact, these loans, for such the contributions are considered, are always returned, and a surplus is left that is usually donated to the poor by the Inaugural committee.

In view of the beginning of the tariff hearings before the majority of the House Ways and Means Committee today, it is interesting to note the geographical make up of that committee, which will frame the tariff bill to be passed at the extra session of the next Congress. Of the majority, New England has two members, Chairman Dingley, and Russell, of Conn.; the middle states two, Payne, of N. Y., and Dailzell, of Pa.; the Middle West, four, Hopkins, of Ills., Grosvenor, of Ohio, Dilliver, of Iowa, and Steele, of Ind.; the North-west two, Johnson, of N. Dak., and Tawney, of Minn.; the South one, Evans, of Ky. The minority originally consisted of six, all from the South, but owing to the deaths of Crisp, of Ga., and Tarsney, of Mo., there are now two vacancies, which will almost certainly go to the South, but it really makes no difference whether they are filled or not except as a personal honor to the men chosen, as the minority of the committee will have nothing to do with the making of the new tariff bill. Representative Curtis, of Kans., would be enjoying his holiday much more than he is if he could persuade Secretary Francis to appoint the allotting agents for the Wichita Reservation, which the people of the Southwest are anxious to have open to settlement. Mr. Curtis insists that there are no legal obstacles to opening the reservation, but Secretary Francis declines to act until the Department of Justice has passed upon some questions he is brought to it. For some reason the Huntington lobby is much less confident of the passage of the Pacific Railroad Funding bill which will be taken up by the House on Jan. 7th and voted upon four days later, than it was a week ago.

Attention Ex-Confederates!
All ex-Confederates in Shenandoah county, who are desirous of attending the inauguration of President Elect Wm. McKinley on the 4th of March 1897 in a body, and who favor the formation of a permanent non-partisan organization of Union and Confederate veterans for the purpose of bringing about a closer brotherhood between those who wore the Blue and those who wore the Gray, and thereby simulating patriotism and obliterating sectionalism in our common country, are cordially invited to attend a meeting to be held in Woodstock, Va., on January 11th (Sunday) for the purpose before mentioned.

Let there be a full attendance as it is important to enroll all ex-Confederates at once who wish to attend the inauguration in order to secure special railroad rates and quarters while in Washington. John N. Davis, J. K. P. Hooper, Hugh Logan, Committee.

La Grippe
If you have had the Grippe, you know its aches and pains, the fever, the chills, the cough, the depression—you know them all. The Grippe exhausts the nervous system quickly, lowers the vitality. Two things should be done at once:—the body must be strengthened, and force must be given to the nervous system. Cod-liver Oil will do the first; Hyposphosphites the second. These are permanently and pleasantly combined in Scott's Emulsion. It lifts the despondency and heals the inflamed membranes of the throat and lungs. But you need not have LA GRIPPE. You can put your system in a condition unfavorable to it. You can have rich, red blood; resistive strength; steady brain and nerves. Scott's Emulsion prevents as well as cures. And whether you send or go for Scott's Emulsion, be sure you get the genuine.
