

WOODSTOCK, VIRGINIA.

FRIDAY, APRIL 14, 1905.

We publish in this issue the speech of Senator Martin delivered at Lunenburg C. H., last Monday. He presented his claims to the people in an able manner, without attacking either of his opponents. Senator Martin invites the people to examine his record and if they find that record satisfactory to support him. He made no effort to secure votes by condemning the records of his opponents. For this he deserves the thanks and votes of the Democratic party. It is to be earnestly hoped that the canvass for the Primary will be conducted without bitterness or mud slinging and that the several nominees will receive the solid vote of the party. Nearly every individual has his choice, let him express it at the Primary and then support the nominees.

Not only did the democrats carry Chicago and St. Louis and most of the Colorado cities—even those that were reliably republican—but they carried Kansas City and Leavenworth, both in Kansas, where republicans supposed they were perfectly secure, and they carried Jefferson City, Mo., for the first time in 25 years, and made gains in all the Missouri towns. A democratic landslide in Colorado is a righteous retribution upon the republicans for stealing the governorship. Most of the municipal elections were carried by the democrats. Pueblo, Colorado Springs and Leadville are normally republican, and the last was carried by the democrats for the first time in twenty years. The crime of the republicans demanded an even more decisive defeat.

J. Mortimer Kilgour died at his home, near Hillsboro, Loudoun Co., Va., on Tuesday night, at the age of 84 years. The immediate cause of his death was pneumonia. He was a native of Montgomery Co., Md., and was the son of Judge Kilgour, late of that county, and a cousin of Col. Wm. Kilgour, of Rockville, Md. He was for many years a practicing attorney at the Leesburg bar, and after the civil war was elected commonwealth's attorney for Loudoun Co. Several years prior to his death he was engaged in writing a history of Loudoun county, but was not able to complete it. He was Quartermaster of White's Battalion during the civil war.

Perry Farmer, 30 years old, met a most tragic death at his home, west of Tazewell, Tuesday. He placed a stick of dynamite in his mouth, set fire to the fuse and his body was blown into shreds. The explosion also wrecked the room at his home which he had selected for his death. No motive is given by his parents for the suicide, save that Farmer's mind was unbalanced, and that he wanted to put himself out of the way.

Frightful Suffering Relieved. Suffering frightfully from the virulent poison of undigested food, C. G. Grayson, of Lula, Miss., took Dr. King's New Life Pills, "with the result," he writes, "that I was cured." All stomach and bowel disorders give way to their tonic, laxative properties. 25c at L. R. Irwin's drug store, guaranteed.

Those present were: Misses Olive George, Bessie, Nellie, Myrt, Della, Elsie, Nell, Gladys Orndorff, and Messrs Harry, Lester, Melvin, Paul Orndorff, Andrew Bolivar, Elmer Burke, Cleveland, Guy, Henry Peer, all report an enjoyable time.

Misses Edith and Eula Orndorff and Miss Ray Copeland returned to their homes Sunday last.

Miss Edith Orndorff, one of our most popular young ladies, left for Washington, Saturday, where she expects to spend the summer. Her many friends regretted to see her leave.

Some of our ladies were flower gathering Friday.

Misses Edith Orndorff and sisters were visiting their grandmother, the first of the week.

We are sorry to say Mr. Run, our new mail carrier has returned to his home, near Mt. Calvary.

SENATOR MARTIN TAKES THE STUMP.

Blackstone, Va., April 10.—Senator Martin made his first appearance on the stump in his own behalf at Lunenburg Courthouse today. He addressed one of the largest audiences ever seen here. The senator arrived last night, pending the night at the Central Hotel. He was up bright and early this morning and out to meet the people when they arrived. He spent the morning in the court green, mixing with the crowd and appeared much to the surprise of many as a good mixer. He was appealed to by many to make a speech but stated that he was not present for that purpose but only to meet and greet his friends. He finally, however, consented and immediately after dinner, was introduced by County Chairman George E. Smith, Judge Barksdale granting the court-room for that purpose.

After expressing his pleasure at being present and the embarrassment he felt at appearing on the stump in his own behalf, he took up the question of his record in the Senate, saying he had kept no books on this, but had called upon an information bureau in Washington to furnish him for him, the amount furnished him was a surprise but only his egotism he felt was in the thought that he had been able to repay in a slight way the high honor conferred upon him by the people of Virginia.

He declared that he did not desire to land himself and would not deary his adversaries, that he had striven to merit the honor conferred and had labored for the approval of his constituents, that he had been charged with being true to his friends which charge he did not deny, and that he did not care to live long enough to be false to them, that when he had favors to bestow, he would bestow them upon his friends but that as a representative he defied any man to say he had ever shown any difference in his service but had treated all alike and never stopped to question whether the service was for friend or enemy.

He spoke of his connections with railroads, saying he was previous to his election to the Senate, employed as attorney before the court, but had never appeared as a lobbyist but for any legislative body and would not do so. The Senator grew warm at times but did not in any manner refer to his opponent, Governor Montague, the only inference to his position was in connection with his service in the different committees and as a department runner, saying that five thousand dollars was a big price to pay for a department runner, but not for one to serve on the Foreign Relations Committee.

He said he did not initiate this method of campaign, but did not shrink from it, and if the people of Virginia were not satisfied with his stewardship, he did not want their support. He mentioned in the course of discussion the fact that Virginia, through his efforts, had saved one million seven hundred thousand by a bill passed for the settlement of Virginia claims against the United States government on account of the war of 1812. He further stated that Senator Daniel had introduced the measure, but on account of his sickness and attendance on the Constitutional Convention, he, during Daniel's absence, had pressed the bill and secured its passage. He mentioned appropriations for Norfolk, Petersburg, Newport News and Richmond that he had secured, and said that he simply called attention to these matters to justify the salary of $5,000 a year to a department runner.

He strongly advocated the rail road rate bill, having the object of controlling rates, now before the United States Senate. He denounced the policy of combination of railroads to exact unfair and unjust rates, and said the heavy hand of the law was needed to restrain corporations from avarice and greed. He stated that he had endeavored to be placed on such committees and to occupy such positions as to best serve the material interests of his State, and from his position as senior Democratic member of the Committee on Claims, he had been in a position to secure appropriations of material benefit to the people of Virginia.

He cited further his amendment securing Southern representation on the railroad rate bill and his intention to press same, because he thought it of especial benefit to the people of the South to have a friend at court.

Senator Martin said the tongue of the slanderer had connected him with the railroads. He had at one time been connected with a railroad as attorney, for it, and in several counties at thousands a year as retaining fee. He said he had resigned the position when he was elected senator twelve years ago, and he further stated that when he was elected, Mr. Ingalls, the president of the Chesapeake and Ohio, and every other railroad president in Virginia, opposed him and so far as he knew and believed, every railroad president opposed him now.

He advocated Federal appropriations to roads, and said he proposed to fight for such an appropriation, stating that too much of the money obtained by taxation of the whole country was expended in the North for pensions and appropriations for public buildings and harbor improvements, but said that the only way a rural community could get any benefit would be by Federal aid to roads. The senator concluded his able speech by asking his audience in an impressive manner to search his record. If I have been unfaithful; if I have neglected your interests; if I have in any particular failed in my duty to the people of Virginia, vote against me, he said. In closing, he stated that he was willing to be judged by the voice of the people of the Commonwealth and to abide by their judgment. Senator Martin's speech was listened to with rapt attention and was applauded throughout, especially as it commended for its high and dignified plane, and the absolute absence of all personalities and personal allusions.

The Capt. put out sentinels and sent the remainder of the crowd down street about 12 o'clock the groom was located by the Capt. in an out house. Letter to F. W. Devoe & Co. Crew, Va., Apr. 5, 1905.

GENTLEMEN: Mrs. D. P. McCormick of this place wanted her house painted lately. Her painter estimated forty-five ($45) dollars for his paint.

We estimate on Devoe Lead and Zinc and told her that forty-two ($42) worth of Devoe paint would be sufficient to paint the house, and induced her to use your paint.

The painter finished on last Monday, and had enough left over to bring the paint bill down to thirty-five ($35) dollars, as he returned six gallons of paint. Her house is one of the largest in the town, and people who have seen it say it is also the whitest house here, being much whiter than houses painted with other white paints.

So much for Devoe "The Fewer Gallons: Wear Longer" paint. Yours truly, Leneave Bros.

HENDERSON'S BODY RECOVERED.

The body of George Henderson of the young negro chased by a crowd of white boys into the Shenandoah River and drowned on February 26th, was discovered last Sunday by Edward Dovel about a half mile down stream from Calvary's mill dam where Henderson was drowned. The body was washed out on a kind of ledge and was visible. On Monday morning Coroner Hudson, Commonwealth's Attorney Keyser, and Sheriff Sedwick went to Ingham and coroner's jury was summoned which brought in a verdict that Henderson came to his death by drowning in the Shenandoah River after having been pursued by Harry Keyser, June Comer, Marcus Doffelmeier and Pearl Kite. Henderson's body was in a good state of preservation when the fact it was in the water five weeks is considered. The skin had peeled off the body. There were to be seen no marks of violence. The body was decently cared for and sent to Shenandoah for interment by the good people, the attempt of the authorities to communicate with Henderson's relatives in North Carolina not having been successful.—Page News.
