Just above the plain in the suburbs of Fredericksburg, Va. is the grave of Mary Washington, marked now by an unfinished marble monument. It has been shamefully defaced by the hands of the vandal. Its sides have been marred by bullets, and the pretty smooth face of monument peppered by the thoughtless sporting men. No railing or enclosure of any sort protects the last resting place of this great and good woman, and the unthinking excursionist hides himself under the shade of the monument, eats his snack and desecrates the sacred place by leaving the rinds of watermelons and the refuse of the repast lying loosely around the tomb.

The Eighth Kansas Infantry will hold a regimental reunion during the Soldiers' reunion at Leavenworth. Chas. W. Rust of Atchison is secretary of the regimental association.
 A grand dance will take place at the city hall to-morrow evening. Excellent music has been secured, and an enjoyable evening is looked for.
 Frank Strain has been quite sick from effects of a large carbunkle on the back of his neck, but is better now.
