Perhaps no class of property suffered greater or more serious damage from Thursday's storm than the orchards. Owing to the high winds, many of the trees were blown down, and the fruit, which was in the process of ripening, was ruined. We have only a few reports from orchards.

Jas. H. Penick, on the Cottonwood, a few miles west of town, has one of the best orchards in the county, and it suffered greatly. He says where he had a prospect for a thousand bushels of apples, there is not more than enough left to supply his family. He has many pear trees full of fruit, all completely ruined.

Mr. Ames' peach orchard, just northeast of town, has succeeded in escaping the ravages of the storm. The peach orchard of Mr. Mayer, just northwest of the city, was damaged very seriously.

It becomes the pleasant duty of the Normal to extend its sympathy to the bereaved. During the storm, many of the individuals to whom the Normal is indebted for their services were killed. The Normal is indebted to many of the individuals to whom the Normal is indebted for their services.
