FRIDAY, MAY 31, 1907. THE IMPERIAL SOUTHWEST. In an editorial in the Topeka Capital of recent date, the views of Stuyvesant Fish on the future of the great southwest territory are of interest.

Shortly after leaving the Illinois Central, its longtime president, Hamilton Fish, connected himself with the Gould lines of the southwest, and recently Mr. Fish came out into this region to inspect these lines and the general trade conditions with relation to the future business of the Gould properties.

In a letter on Mr. Fish's journey Holland recalls that William H. Seward a decade before the civil war predicted a great interior empire, particularly in the northwest, with its capital or metropolis at St. Paul or thereabouts.

On the other hand, Holland recalls that when Hamilton Fish was Grant's secretary of state, affairs which brought his attention to the southwest convinced him that the center of wealth and power on this continent was destined to fall in this locality, and during the late years of his life he was in the habit of expatiating on that topic among his friends.

Whether the Seward and Hill or the Fish and Harriman theory is correct, nobody can dispute the capability of the great southwest of accommodating all the people that railroads can be built to bring here for its development.

LA FOLLETTEISM. Mr. D. W. Mulvane, national committee man for Kansas, recently asked the president whom he wanted from Kansas as delegates to the next national republican convention.

Passing by the suggestive feature of the inquiry that only delegates must be chosen who are satisfactory to the president, and shutting our eyes to this bald evidence of machine politics on the part of both of these distinguished gentlemen, we venture to ask, what did the president mean by "La Folletteism"?

We know that La Follette has given Wisconsin a good cleaning. We know that he has done more to correct corporate abuses in Wisconsin than any one man has accomplished in any other state in this union.

We know that when La Follette drove Senator Spooner out of the senate, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft each hastened to give this corporate representative a high certificate of character. They were very pronounced and emphatic in their fulsome praise of the departed senator.

hands with the commercial interests and helped elect Senator Long. We know that Senator Long and his machine in Kansas has always had the loyal support of Mr. Roosevelt.

What has La Follette done to have his name associated with Harriman's? Can it be that La Follette, too, is an "undesirable citizen"?

DISCONTENTED REPUBLICANS. The democrats claim that the republican tariff plunders the people to enrich the protected monopolists, and the republicans declare the high tariff rates foster industry and protect labor.

A late convert to tariff revision is the Bath Anvil, a republican paper in good standing in the state of Maine, which in an editorial entitled, "The Tariff Injures Maine," declares that "Maine without question is suffering a great deal from the high tariff schedules and her influence in the republican councils ought to be exerted in favor of revision."

Wanted to See Lulu. From June Bohemian. Because of the curiosity of an actress delayed a belated Southern train there are some conductors south of the Mason Dixon line who are watching carefully for Miss Maude Fealy.

MEMORIAL DAY. Some-thing of Its Origin and a Prophecy as to Its Future. (By Major General Fred D. Grant.)

It was first suggested and made a great national holiday by General John A. Logan. It was a thoughtful and swayed by sentiment of the highest order, and a close student of the classics. He read much and frequently referred to historic episodes in his speeches.

By nature General Logan was inclined to be heroic, and as after the war, after reading much about the beautiful customs of the ancient Greeks in honoring the dead, he was swayed by a patriotic and popular thing to likewise honor the dead soldiers of our own country in a similar way.

It was a fact, as he well knew, that nearly every soldier had a wife, one or more members or relatives or dear friends. General Logan's inspiration swayed a responsive heart, and his movement was soon organized and made of national importance.

It is a beautiful idea, this decorating the graves of those who sacrificed their lives in honor of our country, and it is a pity indeed that public sentiment is so generally changing and we are forgetting the solemn lessons taught by the war and the sacred meaning of honoring the dead—drifting away and making the sacred festival more and more a common holiday of races, noisy stunts and hazy good times.

THE PAINT POT is a useful utensil if it contains good paint—such as we sell. If it holds some of the cheap, pebbly, quick fading kind, it is a delusion and a snare. It takes less of the good kind to cover the same space. When you need paint get the good kind—SEWALL'S CHEMICALLY PURE and get it from us. We don't keep any other kind.

MRS. MCKINLEY IS DEAD. END CAME AS RESULT OF SHOCK OF PARALYSIS. Will be Buried Beside Her Martyred Husband, and Her Babies—Invalid Many Years.

Canton, O., May 26.—The prayer of Mrs. McKinley uttered day by day for a year or more after the assassination of her husband, that she might join him in death, has been answered. She died at 1:05 o'clock this afternoon.

The end came peacefully—almost imperceptibly. Mrs. McKinley never knew the efforts made to prolong her life, or the hope against hope of her sister and other relatives and friends for her recovery.

The solemnity of the death hour was marred by a loudly playing band accompanying special cars of base-ball fans to the Sunday afternoon game, the McKinley home being close to the car tracks.

The body of Mrs. McKinley will be placed in the vault in West Lawn cemetery which holds also the body of her husband and her two babies, until the completion of the national mausoleum on Monument hill, when both caskets and those of the babies will be transferred to that tomb.

Mrs. McKinley's life of almost 60 years had been familiar to the nation by the fact that more than half of it was a period of invalidism. Through all this, however, she showed a firm and unswerving belief in the career of her husband and by her cheering words, in spite of personal afflictions, encouraged him when there was darkness at hand.

After President McKinley's death she expressed a desire to join him, and prayed day by day that she might die. Later, however, she frequently told friends she desired to live until the completion of the McKinley mausoleum, which is the gift of the nation, and which is to be dedicated on Monument hill September 30.

Mrs. McKinley is known to those in her home city as the "widow sorrow." Her love for her husband and his great love for her have left a very deep and sympathetic memory of all the people of the place.

Practical Father.—Why did you find it necessary, Ellnor, to discharge the baby's nurse? Hygienic Mother.—Why, I actually caught her giving baby a bath in water a third of a degree hotter than the physician had ordered. We can't afford to risk baby's life in that reckless manner.
