For Women's Ills

Mrs. Fannie Ellis, of Foster, Ark., suffered agony for seven years. Read her letter about Cardui. She writes: "I was sick for seven years with female trouble. AT ALL DRUG STORES

The sinking of the earth in cemeteries is mostly due to a settling down and resulting in the crushing in of the casket by the weight of the ground. This always follows in a short time where a casket made of wood is buried. The wood swells, bursts open or inevitably rots away and the remains of the dead lie in the dirt or water-filled grave a long time before complete dissolution takes place. Only the wealthiest people have been able to avert this disaster until the lead-coated steel casket was produced which is within the reach of the average person. This burial receptacle is made into practically one piece of heavy steel and rendered more indestructible by a double coating of thick layers of pure lead. The cost of these caskets does not exceed the expense of the average wood casket and it is now possible for everybody to bury their dead in a manner that will give absolute protection.

Lead-Coated Steel Caskets are now shown in numbers of styles and furnished exclusively to the patrons of H. M. Maus & Co., Funeral Directors, Prescott, Arizona.
