WINE OF CARDUL.

NOT A PATENT MEDICINE. The Most Astonishing Discovery in Medical Science of the Nineteenth Century—A Revolution in the Treatment of Female Diseases—Endorsed by Eminent Divines and Philanthropists.

There seems to be a mistaken idea prevalent regarding the astonishing new remedy—McElree's Wine of Cardul—which has accomplished such wonderful results in the cure of a troublesome and fatal class of diseases.

It should be understood that this remedy is NOT A PATENT MEDICINE. The manufacturers have applied for no patent on their formula, and have no idea of doing so. The good man—Rev. R. L. McElree—who was instrumental in acquainting the public with its wonderful healing virtues, is a humble minister in the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. He tried through the instrumentality of his brethren and fellow clergymen in his church to introduce the medicine to the women of the world, for several years. He received much encouragement and valuable assistance from them, but with their best endeavors its great value was made known to comparatively few of those who needed it. In order to reach the sphere of its usefulness he arranged with the Chattanooga Medicine Company, of Chattanooga, Tenn., to undertake its manufacture, knowing that with the unlimited means and facilities possessed by this great medicine house, they could put it within the reach of every woman in the world.

He required them to advertise it, and by every means in their power to place before the public, and to sell it at a price as low as the cost of its manufacture would permit.

To the best of their ability they have and are doing this. They have never attempted, nor do they desire to make it a patent medicine.

They regard it one of the most valuable discoveries in medical science of the nineteenth century. It belongs to the public, and it is their wish to introduce it to every mother, wife and household in America.

They hope for and expect from Christian medicine every where, and especially from those who retain their health by its use, assistance in their laudable work. Good men, clergymen, physicians and philanthropists constantly encourage them by kind letters and advice, good women bid them "God-speed."

The following letter was given to Dr. McElree soon after he discovered the great remedy, by that good man,

REV. T. C. BLAKE, D. D., of Nashville, Tenn., then the general financial agent of the Cumberland Presbyterian Publishing House, and since editor and proprietor of the "Youths' Treasury," a monthly magazine for boys and girls, published at Nashville, Tenn.:

DEAR McElree—The medicine (Wine of Cardul) which you sent to me for distribution came to hand promptly, and through my wife's influence in placing it in the hands of the suffering.

To my certain knowledge it has been thoroughly tested, and its effects have been truly wonderful. It has entirely relieved some of the most obdurate cases known to medicine. I wish to state this statement I know to be true. You are a benefactor, my dear brother, and I wish you abundant success in your great work. Thousands upon thousands of suffering women will thank you for this most efficacious remedy. Most sincerely I wish that every suffering woman in this broad land knew of the virtues of your great medicine. Ever your brother,

T. C. BLAKE.

This simple letter, which cost this good man but a few moments of time, has been read by thousands of people, and has been the means of introducing the suffering women to use the wonderful medicine which he endorsed, after being convinced of its great value.

Mr. H. E. Moseley, of Mosley's Bluff, La., a merchant of that place, says:

"I never sold a medicine that gave such satisfaction. Every purchaser that I ask about it gives me the same reply—"It acts like a charm." It is certainly the greatest remedy I have discovered for what it is recommended."

Rev. J. A. McMahon, of Greencastle, Ind., writes:

The box of Wine of Cardul arrived safely to-day. Previous orders have given satisfaction in every case. I thank the Lord and you that it was discovered and brought to our notice. Our daughters, just at the dawn of womanhood, were suffering greatly, frequently unable to attend school, and we were advised by friends to stop one of them from her studies. I bought a box of Wine of Cardul. It cured them at once, and they continued in school, enjoying good health. The one that suffered most has not lost a day from school in eight months, and will in school. Others who have used it some who have suffered long and at great expense for medicine, say it is the best they have ever found, and express their satisfaction with it. For the sake of humanity, we hope its virtues may become generally known. Friendly yours,

J. A. MCMAHAN.
