Farm and Household.

Chopped onions with a little vinegar mixed in it is said to be a sure cure for chicken cholera.

Among all domesticated animals none are more profitable than poultry, when their products are properly disposed of.

Wood ashes make an excellent fertilizer for pear trees. Mixed wood and coal ashes may also be applied with advantage. For fruit trees of all kinds ground bones are better than fermenting manure.

A fruit grower in Tangipahoe Parish, Louisiana, speaking of pear blight, says: "This disease is on the increase in almost every orchard in the South. The cause is chiefly bad culture and no pruning."

A farmer should always think in advance of his work. The whole plan should be laid out in the head before the hands are put to it. There is time yet to think over what should be done in the next two or three busy months.

To drain a depression in a field where a clayey or hardpan subsoil prevents the sinking of rain water, and the lay of the land is unfavorable for ordinary methods of drainage, first dig a hole, as if for a well, through the impervious stratum at the bottom of the hollow, fill it up to the brim with refuse stones, remove the excavated earth so as to allow the surface-water free access to the pit and standing water will never injure the grass or grain crop in that part of the field.

The present necessity of American agriculture, is larger crops at the same cost, or a less proportionate cost, than our present small ones. This result can only be secured by additional fertilizing. The present average of our crops is not more than one-fourth of that which the soil is capable of producing, and this extra three-fourths may be produced without any more labor by the use of fertilizers or additional manures; but fertilizers chiefly.

Fever and Ague.

There are some places in which fever and ague prevails every season, and this is the case in the vicinity of creeks and swamps. An acquaintance of ours, who has resided for several years on one of these creeks, never has had a case of fever and ague in his family, while all of his neighbors have been more or less affected with it every season. He attributes his immunity from this troublesome disease to the use of a good fire in his house every chilly and damp night in summer and fall. When the Indians travel at night or early in the morning in swampy regions they cover their nose and mouth with some part of their garments to warm the air which they inhale, and this they say prevents chills and fever.

Full and Empty Stomachs.

A business man who has been at work all day will enter his house for dinner as crabbed as a hungry bear—crabbed because he is as hungry as a hungry bear. The wife understands the mood, and while she says little to him, is careful not to have dinner delayed. In the mean time the children watch him cautiously, and do not tease him with questions. When the soup is gulped, and he leans back and wipes his mouth, there is evident relaxation, and his wife ventures to ask the news. When the roast beef is disposed of she presumes upon possibly a jest; and when, at last, the dessert is spread upon the table, all hands are merry, and the face of the husband and father, which entered the house so pinched, and savage, and sharp, becomes soft and full and beaming as the face of the round summer moon.

BUSINESS RULES.

Some Hints About Business That are Worth Preserving.

If a note or bill is transferred as security, or even as payment of a preexisting debt, the debt revivifies if the note or bill is dishonored.

An indorsement may be written on the face or back.

An indorser may prevent his own liability to be sued by writing "without recourse," or similar words.

An oral agreement must be proved by evidence. A written agreement proves itself. The law prefers written to oral evidence, because it is precise.

No evidence may be introduced to contradict or vary a written contract; but it may be received in order to explain it, when such contract is in need of explanation.

Written instruments are to be construed and interpreted by the law according to the simple, customary and natural meaning of the words used.

The finder of a negotiable paper, as of all other property, must make reasonable efforts to find the owner before he is entitled to appropriate it for his own purposes. If the finder conceals it, he is liable to the charge of larceny or theft.

Joint payees of a bill or note, who are not partners, must all join in an indorsement.

One may make a note payable to his own order and indorse it in blank. He must write his name across its back or across its face, the same as any other indorser.

After the death of a holder of a bill or note, his executor or administrator may transfer it by his indorsement.

The husband who acquires a right to a bill or note which was given to his wife, either before or after marriage, may indorse it.

"Acceptance" applies to bills and not to notes. It is an agreement on the part of the person on whom the bill is drawn to pay it according to its tenor. The usual way is to write across the face of the bill the word "accepted."

A Chinese Confidence Man.

"For ways that are dark and tricks that are vain the heathen Chinese is peculiar," says the Kansas City Times, and a case in point yesterday shows a little sharp trick which places "John" even with the most intelligent of confidence men. The celestial who played the last trick for pecuniary profit is Hop Sing, who occupies the position of proprietor of a washing establishment on Fourth street. He had as a customer about two weeks ago a young man from Kentucky on his way West, but who stopped at the Metropolitan Hotel for a few days. The customer, in calling for his washing, was so indiscreet as to leave his pocket-book lying within the reach of some of the sharp-eyed celestials attached to the concern, while he walked away a few steps. The pocket-book mysteriously disappeared, and after searching some time for it the stranger offered $20 reward. Hop Sing immediately produced the book and pocketed the money.

The book contained valuable papers, and as the customer was in a hurry to leave the city, he took the wisest course to regain it. Yesterday he returned and unfolded the scheme to Chief Speers, who at once sent an officer to Hop's place of business to demand a restoration of the money. The almond-eyed follower of Confucius saw the point and gave up the money, complaining that the man who took the book was another Chinaman who had "glon West to grow up with countess."

The Exodus.

The Washington Post, in a late number, reviewing the negro exodus scheme thus pertinently remarks:

"It was a Republican, in good standing with his political brethren, who testified before the Exodus committee that for every imported negro who found work in Indiana a white man lost his chance to earn a living. Both Republicans and Democrats, of the highest respectability agree that there is no demand for labor in excess of present supply in any part of that State, while in some sections there is still idle muscle seeking employment. Both Republicans and Democrats, conversant with the facts and of the best character for veracity, agree that there is no lack of work at fair wages in the locality from which the exodus blacks have been and are removing. Republicans and Democrats, whose character cannot be successfully assailed, agree that the object of getting the blacks into Indiana, was purely political—to put down the Democratic party." It seems to us that no investigation ever undertaken has more fully established the statements on which it originated than this inquiry into the cause and effects of the exodus."

The Medical Society of Tennessee will meet in Knoxville on the 6th day of April.

There are thirty-eight persons in Rhea county, Tenn., for every wheeled vehicle in that county.

In the Superior Court at Elberton, Ga., a son has sued his father for slander, fixing the slander at $5,000.

Cents have begun to appear in San Francisco. Hitherto five-cent pieces have been the least coin received.

Chattanooga firms during January shipped 500 barrels of eggs over the East Tennessee and Georgia railroad.

In Henderson county, Tenn., a man only twenty-six years old married a woman who has experienced sixty-five hard winters.

A one-legged man and a one-legged woman were recently married in the timber lands in Buncombe county, North Carolina.

A gentleman at Atlanta has purchased Confederate currency to the amount of $1,000,000, which he will use as circulars, printing his advertisements on the back of each bill.

The supreme court of Indiana has recently made a decision that the legal name of a person consists of his Christian name and a surname, and that an omission or mistake in the middle initial of a name does not in any way affect its validity.

One of the teachers in a Reno public school a few days ago, was laboring with an urchin on the science of simple division. This is what came of it: "Now, Johnny, if you had an orange which you wished to divide with your little sister, how much would you give her?" Johnny: "A suck."

In New Orleans, while a dusky dame named Annie Warwick was on trial for stealing a ring, the court adjourned for dinner, and Annie, accompanied by three of the jurors, also colored, went to a restaurant for refreshments. The refreshments were paid for by pawing the stolen rings.

Dr. Pruden walked into a prayer meeting at Benton, Minn., with an open Bible in one hand and a cocked pistol in the other. He said there had been altogether too much controversy over the meaning of a certain scriptural passage, and that he meant to kill anybody who differed with him on the subject. He was hurried off to an insane asylum.

The five wives of an Indiana man are buried side by side. He long desired to place a tombstone at the head of each, but the cost deterred him until he hit upon an economical method of lettering. On every headstone is the christian name of a wife only, with an index finger, accompanied by these words: "For epitaph, see large stone."

Nearly three hundred million postal cards were used in the United States last year. They are made at Holyoke, Mass., by a private concern, under the general supervision of a Government officer. The work is nearly all done by machinery, even to counting and putting them up in packages of twenty-five. The use of postal cards is said to have driven many makers of writing paper and envelopes out of business.

A clergyman in Brantford, Canada, in the course of his farwell sermon, remarked that a portion of the choir had placed obstacles in his way, saying that he had never had an hour's peace on account of the action of some of them. This aroused the ire of a gentleman in the choir, who promptly arose, and from the choir gallery, directly opposite the pulpit, he called upon the speaker to desist, as he was insulting every member of the choir. This created great commotion. The preacher instantly ordered the intruder to sit down. The latter retorted that if any further insults were offered he would turn on the organ and drown the parson's voice. During the controversy several ladies fainted.

John Nevins was a fireman on the Evert and Osceola Railroad in Michigan. A log was chained to the track one night, and his locomotive was wrecked, killing him instantly. His widow sued the company for $5,000 damages. While the suit was pending a good looking young fellow made her acquaintance, professed to fall in love with her, and made a marriage engagement. Having confidence in him, Mrs. Nevins told him that the log was placed on the track at her request, she desiring to get rid of her husband, while they were to have all the money that could be gained by a lawsuit. The wooer induced her to repeat the story in the hearing of concealed witnesses, and then had her arrested. He was a detective in the company's employ.

A Rochester Physician's Experience.

R. C. Calkins, M. D., of Rochester, N. Y., certifies Oct. 6th, 1879, that he had used the Safe Liver and Kidney Cure in his practice for diseases of the kidneys and liver, and the result has been satisfactory in the extreme. He says: "I would now prescribe the same remedy to all similarly afflicted, and you are at liberty to state in your testimonials."

Flashes of Fun.

A tornado is a great blow to any country, says an exchange.

Cesar's Commentaries—Remarks by the sheriff when making a levy.

It is not what an office-holder steals that makes him rich. It is what he saves.

A Boston paper advertises for a bachelor who is not looking for a rich widow.

A man may be as honest as the day is long and yet be a little crooked on thirty days' credit.

"Wanted a plain cook," reads an advertisement. We wonder whose wife put that in the paper?

A Washington correspondent notices that in promenade the men there take the women's arms.

A broker replied, on being asked what he cleared on a certain speculation, "Nothing but my pockets."

In this country a mean man has only to die to have everybody praise him and neglect the good who live on.

When we seek XX or XXX on a liquor cask we always think of the amount of criss-cross walking condensed inside of it.

"Going!" "This," said an auctioneer, holding up a well known volume, "is a book by a poor and pious girl of poor and pious poems."

The betrayed dollar is one that finds itself not able to pass for more than ninety cents after it has been stamped "In God we Trust."

Lady Examiner—Tell me what is an average? Child—A thing to lay eggs on. Mother says our old hen lays six eggs a week on an average.

"The men of to-day are too high strung," says a Chicago paper. Some of them, the Norristown Herald thinks, are not strung high enough.

"Single man, sir?" asked the lawyer as the witness took his place. "Yes, sir," was the reply. Lawyer: "Wife living?" Confusion and rapid explanations.

It is understood that a man cannot be tried twice for the same crime of murder unless he happens to be convicted the first time. In that case he may be tried until he is acquitted.

A botanist says there are 42,000 different kinds of weeds in the United States, and every man is willing to swear that 41,000 of them were to be found in the garden that he took care of when a boy.

A young man will stand in front of a church door half an hour on the coldest night without complaint, waiting for the service to end, but let his mother ask him to go out and get an armful of wood and he will grumble all the rest of the evening.

Old Prosy—What I say is this, doctor; I approve entirely of fox-hunting as a manly, health-giving and invigorating amusement, but not as a pursuit. Irish Doctor—"Faith, ye'll find many I agree with ye there. Especially foxes."

Stunning piece of humor from Punch: "The Ute Indians in Colorado are reported to have been giving trouble to their neighbors. The head chief of these aboriginals bears the name Ouray. Their war-cry is naturally, 'Ouray for our leader!'"

For sore throat, gargle with Piso's Cure mixed with a little water. Relief is instant.

Is it not singular that no one has got up a corner on loafers, just to offset the loafers on corners?

Wanted.

Sherman & Co., Marshall, Mich., want an agent in this county at once, at a salary of $100 per month and expenses paid. For full particulars address as above.

A Clever Editor Says:

The world is wide and public opinion is lax, but the stigma of having acted in bad faith is a very large load for one man or any set of men to carry.

Maine News.

Hop Bitters, which are advertised in our columns, are a sure cure for ague, biliousness and kidney complaints. Those who use them say they cannot be too highly recommended. Those afflicted should give them a fair trial, and will become thereby enthusiastic in the praise of their curative qualities.—Portland Ad.

"Been having your boots half-soled?" asked Tom. "Well, yes," said Ben, who was looking a little seedy; "but they're not half soled as my hat." And it was just three o'clock the next afternoon before Tom understood just what he meant by it.
