The boiler in Latham's steam flouring mill, at Jackson, Tennessee, exploded a few days ago, mortally wounding the fireman, Bedford Piles, colored, and killing Jesse Nelson, another colored workman. The boiler was blown to a height of thirty feet in the air, and a fifty pound fragment was carried a distance of a quarter of a mile away.

The locomotive "E. D. Frost," owned by the Memphis and Charleston Railroad Company, exploded at a point twelve miles below Grand Junction on Friday. J. Beckham, the engineer, received such severe wounds that he died soon afterward. The colored fireman was severely injured. The driving wheels of the engine were burst into fragments, many yards of the track torn up, and several freight cars demolished.

The case of the State vs Pat Adkins, was taken up for trial in the Criminal Court yesterday; the evidence heard, and the argument on the part of the defence closed. The Attorney-General will close the case on the assembling of the Court this morning, and the case will be given to the jury. Adkins, it will be remembered, is the man that figured in that "mysterious robbery" about which so much was said just about the time of the last Sheriff's election.

The New Foundry and Machine Shop. We took a look at this splendid structure yesterday, and found it nearly completed. In fact workmen are now engaged getting everything ready for moving in the machinery from the old shop on Broad street, which we understand will be commenced next week. There are two separate buildings side by side, one for the machine shop and the other for the foundry, and we understand another will be erected on the opposite side of the street for storing purposes.

The Knoxville Foundry and Machine Company deserve credit for the manner in which they have pushed this enterprise, and we trust they will make a perfect success of the business.

Accident. Ex-Mayor Peter Staub was riding out of Cox's livery stable, on Prince street yesterday, when his horse slipped or stumbled by some means, and fell with him, catching one of his legs and crushing it pretty badly. He feared at first that it was broken, but on being conveyed home and a medical examination made, it was discovered not to be broken, though badly sprained. We hope, however, that with proper care he will be all right again soon.

DOUBLE WEDDING.

Mr. Richard A. Jackson and Miss Laura A. Read - Maj. R. A. Griffith and Miss Mary A. Thompson.

Last night quite a number of the friends and relations of the above named couples met at the residence of Mr. S. S. Thompson, on Cumberland street, East Knoxville, to witness the nuptial ceremonies, some of the guests expecting only one wedding, others, however, were better informed. We were among the former class, and when the couples filed into the parlor and confronted Revs. J. S. Burnett, of the M. E. Church, South, and J. J. Manker, of the M. E. Church, and the former addressed himself to Mr. Jackson and Miss Read, we began to think that there must be a mistake somewhere, but when Mr. Manker united Mr. Griffith and Miss Thompson, light dawned upon our benighted mind, and we took in the situation at once, and thus it was that at 8:15 P. M. Mr. Richard A. Jackson, of this city, and Miss Laura A. Read, of Morristown, were united in matrimony by Rev. J. S. Burnett, and Maj. R. A. Griffith, of Ninety-Six, S. C., and Miss Mary A. Thompson, of this city, by Rev. J. J. Manker were also made man and wife.

After the usual congratulations, the happy couples were followed by the guests into the dining hall, where the table was fairly loaded down with the good things of this life, and all partook of a sumptuous repast.

May the future be ever bright for the newly wedded pairs and their honeymoon last as long as life, is doubtless the wish of all who witnessed the ceremonies last night, as well as of the many friends who were not present.

MUSICAL CONCERT

For the Benefit of the Savannah Sufferers.

We learn that it is proposed to have a concert at the Opera House on next Monday night, to consist of vocal and instrumental music, and perhaps other kinds of entertainment, for the purpose of raising funds for the relief of the persons suffering from the terrible scourge of the yellow fever in Georgia. The plan was originated by Prof. John Marshall, who will have charge of, and will manage the getting up of, the entertainment, which is a guarantee that there will be something worth going to hear, and we are confident that our citizens will turn out en masse and assist in relieving the sufferers.

Mr. Staub has kindly and generously offered the use of his Opera House, free of charge, for the occasion, and the various city papers will charge nothing for advertising it.

Announcements of the programme, etc., will be made through the press in due time.

School of Elocution and Oratory.

By reference to a notice elsewhere it will be seen that an institution will be opened next Monday night in the room over Williams & Zimmerman, on Gay street, under the guidance of Rev. Prof. Thos. C. Teasdale as Principal, for the purpose of imparting instruction in all the principles of Elocution and Oratory. The manner of teaching will correspond with that observed in the celebrated National School of Elocution and Oratory in the city of Philadelphia. This, as will be acknowledged by all, is one of the most important branches in the acquirement of an education, and Dr. Teasdale, the Principal, is well known throughout the country as one of our ablest and most accomplished educators. Therefore, we would heartily recommend this institution to all who may wish to attend. See the announcement elsewhere, or address the Principal for further particulars.

Call and learn prices at Campbell's Shoe Store.

Elocution and Oratory.

The Rev. Dr. Teasdale will deliver a free lecture on the subject of "Elocution and Oratory," in the First Baptist Church, on Gay street, on Thursday night, the 28th inst., 7:30 o'clock. He will exhibit and explain the new and well-arranged charts on the subject of elocution, which have been originated by Prof. Shoemaker, the Principal of the National School of Elocution and Oratory, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and he will read a few pieces from some of our popular authors to exemplify the various qualities and modulations of the voice. All who feel an interest in a graceful style of conversation and reading, and an effective delivery, are respectfully and cordially invited to attend.

Notice to Shippers.

The steamer "Harry Helm" will arrive on Wednesday, the 27th inst., and leave for Chattanooga and intermediate points.

HEISKELL'S STATION, Sept. 25, '76. To the Editors of the Chronicle:

The Baptist Association for the Clinton district has just closed at this place. The gathering on Sabbath was large. The meetings will be continued during this week by Rev. Messrs. Smith and Ager. The boys say that during the Association, while the preachers were around in numbers, that all the chickens absconded themselves. But I observed preachers Coram, Demarcus and Pope leaving late yesterday, and this morning about daybreak I also observed a cunning-looking man coming in from the fields carrying a large live chicken by the legs.

Uncle John Ingram, a widower, 55 or 60 years old, was recently married to Mrs. Peak, 25 years old. This peculiar kind of marrying has come to be very fashionable.

The late rains have revived the ploughing everywhere in this section. It has been repeatedly remarked here that more molasses to be manufactured in this part of East Tennessee than for any one season in several years past. Men think that because of the price on molasses last year would justify its manufacture here, that it is a paying crop here. But they forget that the demand for it is only local and that such an increase in the growth of sugar cane as we have this year, will glut the market. But, in reference to the growth of tobacco, men see the demand is general and the shipping expense light. There is no danger of glutting the market. Then why not grow tobacco instead of sugar cane.

I notice that there is a very great scarcity of hogs in the country, and the market price is high. On the other hand there is a good supply of cattle and a bountiful supply of hay. The hog and cow business is well looked after here by two firms, Oates & Cox and Graham Bros. It would seem from every indication that E. T. White, a rising merchant in East Tennessee, having a connection with two firms on this road and two in Knoxville. He has displayed in this section an ability to succeed in business and we predict he will do so.

Randolph and McFarland at Rogersville.

To the Editors of the Chronicle: Hon. Wm. McFarland and Judge Randolph addressed a crowded court house of their fellow citizens to day at this place.

The Tall Pine labored with great earnestness to show that President Grant and the Republican party had stolen millions of the people's money, but the records being against him, failed most signally to mislead his hearers. His harangue against Republicanism was a miserable subterfuge, and his friends in Hawkins are aware of the fact that it will lose him more votes than it will give him.

Judge Randolph, in his answer, brought before the people the infamous black record of the great rebel, and the friends of the "sheep jin" cotton claim record, which was, beyond question, a very unpleasant subject for the ears of this distinguished gentleman to hear discussed. The Judge is more than a match for his competitor, and his speech was all that his friends could ask for. He took his seat amidst enthusiastic applause.

The Democrats not being satisfied with the efforts of their standard-bearer, kind of an afterthought "sheep jin" to say a few things, and he did, but they were very few. Yours, &c., LEO, JR.

Flag Raising at Bristol.

BRISTOL, TENN., Sept. 25, 1876. To the Editors of the Chronicle: This has been a glorious day for "Young Democracy" hereabouts - a political love-feast for those who are fondly awaiting the November election for "deliverance," for "truth crushed to earth shall rise again."

The event of the day was the raising of a "Tilden and Hendricks" flag. Hon. J. W. Daniel, of Lynchburg, and Col. Samuel McKinney, of Knoxville, were the orators of the occasion.

It is a large as anticipated, but this was doubly made good by the Bourbon energy that characterized the whole proceedings.

The principal argument used in favor of "reform," was the usual rebuke of personal abuse of every one that has ever differed with Democracy, and especially for the past four years, extending as far back at least as the "tyrant and usurper" relieved Democracy of the reins of the general government.

These are the words of the speaker who rejoiced that we are in our "father's house."

In the course of Mr. McKinney's remarks on ex-Gov. Foote, he applied the term "rebel," which Mr. Daniel retorted, claiming that Washington, "our illustrious Sec." Jackson and others were "rebels"; that he was proud of his record, and thanked God he had been one.

Of course, quick to repair the injury done by his blaspheming that sacred title, McKinney said "old Foote" was unworthy of it, and promised to do better hereafter. He illustrated how Liberty had been oppressed, but "had survived the tyranny of the eastern world, and taking wing, had sailed across the broad Atlantic, conquered a world of savages; had given us the Government of our fathers centering in "our illustrious Lee." He said Tilden would be elected, but Grant would refuse to vacate the Presidency, when the boys in blue and the "boys in gray" would march side by side to wrest the Government from the tyrant and usurper.

Of course there were those present foolish enough to believe these incendiary declarations, and ex-pressions of "there'll be another war," were not unrequited. Witnessing these events, my memory reverts to other days when like demonstrations "asserted themselves in another form." The sister States were joined together then as now, but it was another flag raised by the same hands. When I see all this - see them draw up that flag and hear them rejoice in their treason, I can but exclaim "humbug, thy name is Democratic reform."
