DISTRUST OF THE DEMOCRATIC LEADERS. The following significant paragraph is taken from a Washington special to the Cincinnati Commercial:

"There have been rumors here of a disinclination of capitalists to invest money in the usual channels which employ capital, owing mainly to the uncertainty as to the outcome of the fall election."

"Mr. Biggs, a leading banker in Washington, said there was one million dollars lying idle in his bank waiting for the result before investment. There seems to be no doubt that capital is distrustful all over the country, and will be hoarded in safe places from this time on till after the election."

This is very significant. There is no disguising the fact that the solid business men of the country are entirely satisfied with the present condition of the public finances.

Whatever politicians may think and say, it is certain that the business men of the country do not demand a change. The consequence is, democratic politicians do not appeal to reason, but are engaged in active endeavor to arouse prejudice and stir up the passions of the people.

Hence it is, we see them raking up false and exploded charges against General Garfield and retailing them upon the hustings. They know, if they know anything, that the charges of corruption against General Garfield are false and malignant, but having nothing good to say of themselves they try to divert public attention from their own political hypocrisy and double-dealing by lying about their opponents.

This is plain language, but there are times when plain language is a necessity—when nothing else will answer. This timidity on the part of capital, showing a hesitation about investments, is one of the strongest arguments against trusting the democratic party that could possibly be furnished.

The party is looked upon with distrust by five out of every six thinking business men all over the country. They have no confidence in its leaders. If it was not such a very tender subject we would like to ask the democratic managers of this district what they think of Tom Williams' discretion and stumping abilities now, but we refrain. We would also like to ask them how many Irish and negro votes they think he has made by his speech at Fair Garden.

In regard to it we publish a card from Mr. Pat. Shea, as worthy a young man as there is in the city, in another column, and respectfully call attention to it. In order that our Irish and colored citizens can see exactly in what estimation they are held by the democratic candidate, we reproduce that passage of his Fair Garden speech, referring to them, prefacing it with the remark that the report was made by an attache of the CHRONICLE, in whom greatest confidence is reposed.

Referring to a statement of Mr. Pat. Shea that Alderman Williams made a speech in the city council, in 1878, advocating the reduction of street laborers' wages from $1.00 to 80 cents per day, Mr. Williams said: "I am surprised at the character of what the judge brings against me. Who is Pat. Shea? I don't want to say anything harsh against him, but he is no account. He is a worthless fellow, who has made no success in life. He has been in the city council once or twice from a ward composed largely of Irishmen and negroes. He was for a long time a democrat, and because he could not get office there he turned over to the republicans, or at least he voted for Hook and was appointed enumerator of the census as a reward for turning over. Now, that is the kind of men the judge brings up against me."

Observe that phrase, "composed largely of Irishmen and negroes!" But one construction can be put upon it, and that is that Williams considers "Irishmen and negroes" entirely unworthy, and not at all responsible or particular who represents them.

This is one of the evidences of the way Williams is "using Hook up," and if the CHRONICLE had any idea that the former would not be muzzled and ordered to confine himself to his written speech, it would detail a representative to accompany the candidates to all of their appointments, knowing that no better means of securing a 5,000 majority in this district could be devised.

We are glad to have our friends send us communications from various portions of the state, showing the progress of the campaign; but we must beg them to be brief and pointed as possible. Just now we are overrun with matter of this kind, and our friends must not complain if it does not all appear. We will try to make the paper as generally interesting as we can, and to do this, our correspondents must learn brevity. We will do the best we can to accommodate all, but we must give space to local and telegraphic news, as well as political and other correspondence.

Supreme Court Opinions. Saturday, September 25th. Reported for the CHRONICLE by L. Tilma, Jr. Criminal Law—Alibi—Defense of. The defense of an alibi, both in the trial of a criminal offense and when relied upon a motion for a new trial to contradict a witness for the State, depends so much upon the circumstantial evidence which can be under the view of the circuit judge only, that this court will not revise the finding of the jury or the action of the judge, even in a case where the conviction rests on circumstantial evidence, except the error be plain.—Cooper, J.—Leeper v. State.

Criminal Law—Plea in abatement, not good, when. It is not a good plea in abatement to an indictment that one of the grand jurors who found the indictment was not one of the venire selected by the county court to serve as jurors, that the venire was not returned in amending the grand jury, and that more than thirteen of the venire were in attendance and could have been selected.—Cooper, J.—Epperson v. State.

Same—Same. The fact that a juror, otherwise qualified, had been selected from the bystanders instead of a juror from the venire, would be no ground for abating an indictment returned by him and several grand jurors taken from the venire.—Idem.

Same—Plea waived how. By pleading not guilty and going to trial, the defendant waives a plea in abatement on which no action is taken.—Idem.

Same—Certified copy of indictment may be used when. After the jury have been empaneled and sworn, the trial court may, under the code, section 5123, permit a certified copy of the original indictment to be used in proof that the original indictment has been lost or mislaid, without a formal adjudication of loss and order of substitution; and the affidavit of the clerk of the court that he had made diligent search among the papers of his office and was unable to find the indictment, is prima facie sufficient evidence of the fact.—Idem.

Same—Malice presumed when killing is proved. On a trial for murder there is no error in the charge that where the State proves the fact of killing, without more, malice is presumed until the contrary appears from the direct or circumstantial evidence in the case, whether offered by the defendant or existing in the evidence of the state.—Idem.

Chancery court has no jurisdiction to inquire into regularity of probate, when. If the certificate of the probate examination of a feme covert and the commission under which it is taken are in due form, and signed by the proper officers, a court of chancery has no authority to inquire into their regularity, nor is probate evidence admissible to impeach them for mere irregularity. The policy of the law requires that they shall be conclusive, and they can only be attacked for fraud.—Cooper, J.—Shields v. Netherland.

Married woman—What will not constitute fraud upon. The fact that the husband misled the wife as to the nature of the instrument she was called upon by him to sign, and which she executed at his request and without reading it, does not constitute such fraud as will enable her to contradict by parol, the certificate of acknowledgment as to the validity of a deed to secure money loaned to the husband, neither the creditor nor the trustee being present, nor having any reason to suspect the imposition.—Idem.

Practical Discretion of Chancellor—when. Where a decree of foreclosure of a trust deed by sale directs the trust property to be sold by the clerk of the court instead of the trustee, the beneficiary who does not appeal, cannot complain if the sale made in accordance with the decree, nor would this court control the discretion of the chancellor in such a matter, except in a clear case of its erroneous exercise.—Idem.

Tender—Plea of—bad, when. To a suit upon a note for so many dollars on a day certain, payable in current money, a plea of tender after the day is bad.—Cooper, J.—Miller vs McKinney.

Practical Discretion of Chancellor—when. Where a decree of foreclosure of a trust deed by sale directs the trust property to be sold by the clerk of the court instead of the trustee, the beneficiary who does not appeal, cannot complain if the sale made in accordance with the decree, nor would this court control the discretion of the chancellor in such a matter, except in a clear case of its erroneous exercise.—Idem.

County bonds. Issued under act 1851-2, void. The act of 1851-2 whereby certain counties (including Hawkins) were given power to subscribe stock to railroads, under certain conditions, and issued bonds in certain amounts, and to receive the proceeds therefor, was repealed by section 41 of the code; consequently, the bonds of said county issued in 1856 in aid of the Rogersville and Jefferson railroad under a subscription for stock made in pursuance of said act, are valid.—McFarland, J.—Clay vs. Justices of Hawkins county.

Attachment cases—Sheriff's costs in. Where a vendor files his bill against his non-resident vendee to enforce his lien and takes out an attachment upon the land, the sheriff who levies the same is not entitled to commission under section 4564 a. of code.—McFarland, J.—Harris vs. Pettigrew.

Fees of clerk and commissioner. The work or commissioner who makes a sale under decree of court is not entitled to any fee for making out his report of sale distinct from the commissions the statute allows for making the sale. The making of the report is not a separate act for which commissions are given.—Idem.

Costs—Justice of peace. A justice of the peace, before whom a suit has been tried, may bring a suit in his own behalf against the successful party for the costs occasioned by him when the same can not be made from the unsuccessful party.—McFarland, J.—Evans v. Smith.

Cross-bills—New parties, practice. New parties can not be brought into a suit by a cross-bill.—Turney, J.—Watterson v. Anderson.

Practice—Party put under the rule when. There was no error in the Circuit Judge directing the plaintiff (who had required the witness to be put under the rule) to be examined first, or retire until he was called as a witness.—Desdriock, C. J.—Hull vs. Marshall.

"Associate Administrator." There is nothing in our law which prevents the county court from appointing an Associate Administrator when the first appointee consents.—Turney, J.—Johnson vs. Uchales.

Administration of Estates—Creditor paid in full—refunding. Where one creditor of an estate has in good faith received from the administrator his debt in full, and subsequently the estate by reason of the waste and mismanagement of the administrator becomes insolvent, a second creditor cannot compel the first to refund.—Idem.

Practice—Answer vs Cross Bill—new parties. A new party can not be brought into a suit by a cross-bill.—Turney, J.—Desdriock, C. J.—Huffmaster vs. Payne.

Our Fancy Cream Cheese Has come and is sold out, but John Hurdburg will have another lot the first of the week that is Cream Cheese—none of your poor skim-milk stuff that is sold on this market by some.
