over the defeat for which he is largely responsible. But these gentlemen and others of their school, if they are really Republicans, and if they really desire the future success of the Republican party, will find that it must be reached in a different way. They must be tolerant of those who differ with them and who are opposed to bossism in the party.

The big bosses may attempt to send out of the party all who refuse to wear the yoke they would place upon their necks, and the little bosses, surrounded by the rabble, may bark like any other curs at the independence, intelligence and respectability which is too far above them to be brought under their control, but it is all no use. There are men who prefer a Democrat to a Republican who refuses to blindly follow in the dark and tortuous paths over which they would lead.

There are thousands of Republicans throughout the country who belong to that party because they believe its principles are right. They earn a living by their own exertions. They are industrious and intelligent. They do not vote for this or that man because they expect an office. Such men can not be induced to vote for a candidate who is low, degraded, vile, corrupt, even if such an one should be labeled with a party nomination.

Such men are the backbone of the party. They are the men who will stand by the party in the hour of its greatest need. They are the men who will stand by the party in the hour of its greatest need. They are the men who will stand by the party in the hour of its greatest need.

GEN. RAUM ON THE SITUATION. Gen. Green B. Raum is an estate politician, and knows more about political matters than most people. He belongs to what is known as the "Stalwart" wing of the Republican party and was one of the "306" at Chicago.

Senator Don Cameron, the self-constituted boss of Pennsylvania Republicanism, is reported as sullen and morose, swearing vengeance against all Republicans of that State who declined to fall into his procession and move forward at his word of command.

Underlying the trouble in both States to take the selection of their candidates for important political offices into their own hands. In the earlier days of our Government Congressional or Legislative caucuses were accepted as expressions of the popular will.

Another and less consequential light in the hateful constellation of bossism, Mr. Jay A. Hubbell, is reported as speaking lightly of the result of November's balloting. Instead of curses, he affects to despise the opposition to bossism. Like old Maurepas, who could laugh into the very crater of the volcano of the French revolution, so Mr. Hubbell dismisses the matters of the independent masses with bon mots, and laughs and looks wise important political offices have been selected through the machinery of political parties and by popular conventions. This party machinery and these political conventions, however, have been uncontrolled by law; and the question is whether we are not entering upon a third epoch, when the people will demand that the primaries shall be regulated and controlled by law as well as the elections themselves.

In answer to a question whether he did not think the course of the Congressional committee in levying voluntary contributions on government employes had exercised an injurious effect, General Raum replied that he believed it had. There was a strong feeling among Republicans that such action by a self-appointed campaign committee was at best an exercise of delegated powers, was in fact, a return to the first a worst epoch in our political history—that of Congressional and Legislative caucus dictation and that the management of a Republican campaign ought to be confined to the committee selected by the Republican party in its National convention.

Upon the whole, it must be admitted that Gen. Raum takes a very judicious view of the situation. He proposes to send no one out of the party. He does not propose to drive out such as refuse to submit to the operation of the boss machine. On the contrary, he proposes to remove the cause of discontent and reunite the party.

We have received from Mr. Campbell Wallace, one of the commissioners, a copy of the sixth semi-annual report of the railroad commission of the State of Georgia. It gives, in detail, the action of the commission, embracing the decisions of the courts in many cases where there has been litigation, to which the commission, representing the people of Georgia, was a party.

Our New York correspondent writes that the independent vote in the Republican party at not less than half a million. He said this was too powerful an element to be disregarded, and if the Republican party was to be reunited, it was obviously necessary to ascertain the exact causes of this discontent, and if possible to remedy them.

It is a well known fact that the independent vote in the Republican party at not less than half a million. He said this was too powerful an element to be disregarded, and if the Republican party was to be reunited, it was obviously necessary to ascertain the exact causes of this discontent, and if possible to remedy them.

Such things ought not to be. It is a swindle. It is the worst sort of fraud. It is a wrong inflicted upon meritorious pensioners, and upon the community generally.
