A BRACE OF BOYS.

(CONTINUED FROM LAST WEEK.) Daniel knew how much his parents wished him to make a figure in the world and only blamed himself for his failure, magnanimously forgetting that they had crushed out the faculties which enable a man to mint the small change of everyday society to the exclusive cultivation of such as fit him for smelting the ponderous ingots. With that merciful blindness which alone prevents all our lives from becoming a horror of nerveless self-reproach, his parents were equally unaware of their share in the harm done im, ascribing to delicate organization the fact that, at an age when love runs riot in all healthy blood, he hands could not see a Balmoral without his cheeks rivaling the most vivid stripe in it. They flattered themselves that he would outgrow his bashfulness; but Daniel had no such hope, and frequently confided in me that he thought he should never marry at all.

About two hours after Bill's disaphis arm. His cheeks shone with washand other indignities had been offered him to the extent of the comb and Billy and I also obtained permission to go out together and be gone the entire afternoon. We put Crab on a comfortable bed of rags in an old shoe-box, and then strolled hand in hand across that most delightful of New York breathing-places,

Stuyvesant Square. "Uncle Teddy!" exclaimed Billy with ardor, "I wish I could do something to show you how much I think of you for being so good to me. don't know how-would it make you happy if I was to learn a hymn for you—a smashing big hymn—six verses, long metre, and no grumbling?" Among these was a young lady apparently about nineteen, in a tight-fitting basque of black velvet which showed her elegant figure to fine advantage, a skirt of garnet silk looped ip over a pretty Balmoral, and the daintiest imaginable pair of kid walking-boots. Her height was a trifle over the medium-her eyes a soft exressive brown, shaded by masses of hair which exactly matched their color, and, at that rat-and-miceless day fell in such graceful abandon as t show at once that nature was the only maid who crimped their waves into them. Her complexion was rosy with health and sympathetic enjoyment; her mouth was faultless, her nose sensitive, her manners full of reinement, and her voice musical as a

They encourage revelations when their ears should be deaf to everything approaching to scandal. All judicious pastors discourage familiarity on the part of their people, especially of the female denomination. For this way lies the danger. A silly woman, pious perhaps, but very soft and shallow, hears the stirring words of her eloquent pastor; is roused, warmed, soothed, exalted-she thinks edified-and straightway she believes him to be the man sent to do her good. She goes to his study to tell him so: how much enjoyment she finds in his words; or she writes him a letter and pours out her little soul-full of twaddle about her gratitude for what her dear pastor has done for her: how she "is lifted up" by his instructions: how she loves him as a friend given to be her guide and comfort, and so on, and so on more and worse, running into a mawkish sentimentality, a sickening Jabez Andrews, I'll consider." man-worship, disgusting to every sensible person, but very nectar to a vain, worldly preacher, who seeks only to make his hearers "feel good." Such people never go to their pastor to ask good bye." "what they must do to be saved?" It is to tell him how good they feel; how he is "exalting" them, "filling them with joy, peace and love." We cannot go into particulars without offending the tastes of every reader. We make our meaning plain. It is of the earth, earthly. It is "carnal conceived in sin." It is simply the lower nature, the human passion of one creature toward another. God is not in it. God never led a man or woman to desire forbidden fruit. "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: every man, when he is tempted, is drawn away of his own lust and enticed. Then lust, when it hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin, and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." It is in immediate connection with those divine teachings that and superfluity of naughtiness and familiarity with himself.

The hav harvest has in many places been a failure, and it seems to be generally supposed that improved drainage, combined with the felling of woods and forests, which have been proceeding pari passu during the last twenty years, are in a measure answerable for these results. The prospects of partridge shooters are deplorable, for under the modern conditions of agriculture a want of cover is experienced more or less every year. On the upland pastures, the thick tufts of grass, so lively both for hares or birds, are all worn away, and in the meadows the young grass is thin and feeble.
