PROPOSALS OF MARRIAGE.
For the Ledger.
A writer in one of the English papers has jestingly submitted a project for the consideration of the Chancellor of the Exchequer in the preparation of his financial budget, which might really be taken in earnest for the raising of a large revenue without imposing a very heavy burden upon the public.
The proposal takes the form of a stamp duty of five shillings on offers of marriage, i. e., that whenever a gentleman is about to make a proposal of marriage, he must have in his hand the necessary stamp, which will cost him five shillings, and should the lady agree to his proposal he, as a matter of course, hands over his stamp (not stamps), which she holds until the wedding takes place, as a guarantee of the honor and honesty of the proposer. The stamped proposal would allow no doubt to exist of the man's intentions, and the lady holding it would be assured thereby it was not a mere dictation that was required, for it would establish an unimpeachable ground for an action of breach of promise in the event of a change of mind on the part of the gentleman.

Now what a grand idea this would be if carried out in this city of Memphis. Why, in a short time we could pay off the entire city debt, build hospitals, school houses, public offices and even bridge the Mississippi. Besides all this it would really be doing a great service to both ladies and gentlemen. The number of marriages that take place every year does not represent one tithe of the overtures that are made, and as every one of these overtures would be subject to the stamp duty, the total amount would enable our city fathers to do a great deal more than pay off our debts. Of course, the enactment being compulsory, a verbal offer of marriage or an offer on unstamped paper would be a penal offense; and no considerable number of men would risk a penalty for the sake of saving the tax imposed by the State. Most men, at some period or other of their lives, have a desire to get married; in fact I might add that there are lots who, when once they have felt the desire, never get rid of it; and no man who desires to get married would for a moment object to pay the imposed tax, because he, of course, thinks he will gain a prize if he succeeds in winning the lady's heart and hand. All men think that, and it would be a libel on their affections and sincerity to suppose that they would grudge a couple of dollars for the license to "pop the question." And what a jolly arrangement it would be, when about to make a proposal, to hold in our hands the symbol of authority—the sanction of the State, as it were, to open the gate to matrimonial bliss!

Again, another effect that might attend the suggested stamp duty on proposals is an improved state of matrimonial inclinations. Men would learn to know their own minds, and refrain from backing out of an engagement after its novelty had worn off. There would be more manliness in their dealings with the fair sex, and as a consequence the fair sex would be more womanly; the latter seldom knowing whether men are in jest or earnest, meet in a way which does not indicate their real feeling, and disappointment to both is often the result. The men appear to be heartless, and the ladies appear to be flirts. A man honestly in love would not hesitate in giving proof of his sincerity on the stamped paper, and the lady, in the sincerity of that binding tie, would show what she really is. Their characteristics becoming thus known to each other before marriage, there would be good reason to contemplate a happy future. The stamp would be a virtual betrothal, and its obligation being felt, it would scarcely ever be broken.
The days of courtship would be a preparation for matrimony. Young men would begin to save their money, and the young ladies would study the wants and ways of domestic life. This plea was made in jest by the author, but really would it not be a good one, earnestly taken up?

A CURIOUS OLD CITY.
Delightful Climate and Comfortable Homes—a Paradise for Gamblers.
SANTA FE, N. M.—To a stranger first visiting this old new country, the sights are novel and interesting. Our first view of this city was obtained in the early dawn of morning, just as a few of the more industrious citizens were creeping from their holes. We drove up to one of the many curious blocks of which this city is composed, and after unloading our living freight, entered through an arched doorway into a square courtyard, which we crossed, finding quarters for our Indians in one of the rooms which opened therefrom.
This city, as your readers are aware, is upward of 300 years old, and contains 5,000 people. Situated, as it is, 6,500 feet above the level of the sea, it enjoys a most exhilarating climate. The only signs of any improvement whatever were upon the outskirts, and in a marble slab placed in the center of the grand plaza or square, to commemorate the dead who fell in the battles around Santa Fe in the late war. Save these few signs, everything denotes age and a Spanish origin. The conversation, the customs, and the looks of the people are strange. All the buildings are adobe, and are all built alike. The walls are very thick, which, with the open fireplaces, make the warmest houses in winter and the coolest in summer.
About the only religion observed here is the Roman Catholic. The priests have a great influence with and control over these people, who are very devout in their observances. There is a small society under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church, of which a Mr. Smith, of Pittsburg, is the pastor. He is devoting himself with a great deal of assiduity to his duties, and takes a great interest in the work. The society, though small, is composed of the leading Government officials.
The gamblers form a very numerous class of the people, caring nothing for the future, and only living in the present. Gaming is conducted as openly as any ordinary business. The night of my arrival I attended a dance, the guests being composed almost entirely of Mexicans, with a very little sprinkling of Americans. It was conducted somewhat after the manner of some of the Bowery balls. The most interesting sight I have seen has been the patient, plodding burras. They are very small donkeys, some of them no larger than a good sized dog, and perfectly gentle. These beasts are about the only support of many of the Mexicans; they carry in nearly all the wood that is consumed in the city, it being tied on their backs in piles three and four feet high. Hay is carried in the same way; and sometimes, when the little animals have a very large load, nothing can be seen but a great bundle of hay moving along. These animals, though exceedingly small, are very strong. I think they will carry anything that can be fastened upon their back. No bridle is used, but they are driven loose like a drove of cattle, whether loaded or not. They are outlandish-looking beasts, some of their heads being nearly as large as their bodies. Their fodder consists of almost anything, so that it costs very little to keep them.
It is quite laughable to watch some of the Mexicans who are in "business." Their stock in trade often consists only of a few punts of pinones (a nut which grows in this country, and which is very rich) and over these they will sit on their haunches all day, with their serapes wound around their heads, waiting for custom.

The only inviting, homelike-looking places in Santa Fe are the Government quarters, or houses for United States officers and their families. These present a very inviting appearance, with their neatly-fenced yards and cultivated gardens.

MRS. BEECHER.
The Kind of a Woman She Is—What She Thinks of "Dory."
Mrs. Beecher has grown quite thin since the trial commenced. She says she is so nervous that she can't sleep nights. When I told her that her face looked full and round she held up her hands and said:
"Look at these! I never saw the bones in these hands before. I am really afraid I shall get sick before this trial ends. Henry seems very happy. In fact, he is always in hot water, and I don't think he would feel natural if he was not in some tribulation. Somebody is always making a fool of him. Why, after he gets out of this trouble I don't believe it will be three months before he will be into another scrape, and all because he is so innocent and generous. Why, if I had been one-half as honest as Henry has been we would both of us have been ruined a dozen times before this."
"Did you lose faith in Theodore before Mr. Beecher did?" I asked.
"Why, yes—years ago. Fifteen years ago I told Theodore to his face that he was a wolf in sheep's clothing. He came here and took his meals for two weeks. I found him out then. He used to sit and copy Mr. Beecher's handwriting. One day he showed me a page written in exact imitation of Mr. Beecher. When he held it up to me and asked me if I knew whose writing it was, I said, 'Yes, sir; it is a miserable attempt to copy my husband's.'"
"What did Theodore say to this?"
"He went up stairs to Mr. Beecher, who came down, and said I wasn't talk so to Theodore, 'for, said he, 'he really has a great deal of good in him.' 'Good in him!' said I; 'I should think so. There must be a great deal of good in him, Henry, for none has ever come out of him.'"
"I really believe that if I should say anything about Theodore three months after this trial Mr. Beecher would say, 'Now don't be so hard on poor Theodore; he's really a good man at heart.'"

"One night," continued Mrs. Beecher, "after Theodore had taken his meals with us for two weeks (fifteen years ago) Mrs. Tilton called and asked if I had seen Dory? 'Seen Dory?' said I. 'Who's Dory?'"
"Why, my Theodore," said Mrs. Tilton.
"Yes, I've seen your Dory, if that's him," said I. "I've seen him for two weeks, and that's two weeks too long. I'd be glad to have you take your Dory home and keep him, and never let him come in sight of our house again."
"What do you think," said Mrs. Beecher, as her eyes snapped fire. "Why, that miserable man, that sneaking Dory, had not been home for two weeks, but had spent the whole time loafing around Mr. Beecher and sponging his meals off our table. And Henry all the time saying, 'Now, my dear, there is really a great deal of good in Theodore. You must be kind to him.' Bah! kind to a snake in a cradle!" and Mrs. Beecher's old Puritan features assumed a look sterner than the figure of justice on the court-house.
Utterly Sympathy.
Arizona Miner.]
Tim Burke, of Yuma, was on the gallows with a rope around his neck, when a messenger out of breath appeared, and mounting the ladder, handed a document to the sheriff. Tim thought it was a reprieve, and began to dance and laugh and hoot, but when the sheriff walked up and read to him a series of resolutions from his friends down town, regretting that he had to be hanged, nary a hoot went up from Tim.

THRASHING MACHINE.
NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO.'S
"Vibrator" Thresher.
The Brilliant Success of this Grain-Saving, Time-Saving THRESHER is unprecedented in the annals of Farm Machinery. In a brief period it has become widely known and FULLY ESTABLISHED as the LEADING THRESHING MACHINE.

A RAISER'S REFUSE to submit to the wasteful and imperfect work of other threshers, when pointed out the superior quality of this one, for saving grain, saving time, and doing fast, thorough and economical work.
THE THRESHING MACHINE FINDS IT highly advantageous to run a machine that has no "beat-ers," "pickers," or "Apron," that handles Heavy Grain, Heavy Straw, Heading, Flax, Timothy, Millet, and all such different grain and seeds, with ENTIRE EASE AND EFFICIENCY. Cleans to perfection; saves the farmer's thresh bill by extra saving of grain, makes no "Litterings"; requires LESS THAN ONE-HALF the usual Belts, Boxes, Journals, and Gears; easier managed; less repairs; one that grain raisers prefer to employ and wait for, even at advanced prices, while other machines are "out of job."
Four sizes made with 4, 5, 10 and 12 horse "Mounted" Powers, also a specialty of separating "clean" especially for STEAM POWER and to match other Horse Powers.
If interested in grain raising, or threshing, write for Illustrated Circulars (sent free) with full particulars of sizes, styles, prices, terms, etc. NICHOLS, SHEPARD & CO., 40-153-4, Battle Creek, Michigan.

conduct an Agency for the reception of advertisements for American Newspapers—the most complete establishment of the kind in the world. Six thousand Newspapers are kept regularly on file, and open to inspection by customers. Every Advertisement is taken at the home price of the paper, without any additional charge or commission. An advertiser, in dealing with the Agency is saved trouble and correspondence, making a contract instead of a dozen, a bundle or a thousand A Book containing large lists of papers, circulations, with some information about prices, is sent to any address for twenty-five cents. Persons wishing to make contracts for advertising in any town, city, county, State or Territory of the United States, or any portion of the Dominion of Canada, may send a concise statement of what they want, together with a copy of the Advertisements, and receive information which will enable them to decide whether to increase or reduce the order. For such information there is no charge. Orders are taken for a single paper as well as a list; for a single dollar as readily as for a larger sum. Offices (Times Building),
