Secured Theatricals. Chicago Times. Long ago, the majority of Protestant churches ceased to be self-supporting. In other words, the rental of the pews did not bring in money enough to pay the current expenses, including the salary of minister, organist, chorister, singers, janitor, and the sum needed to settle bills for fuel, gas, water, insurance, repairs, and interest due on bonds and mortgages.

From present appearances, sacred theaters here to take the place of churches. The materials for these sacred lunches and concerts have been obtained by a sort of forced levies on dealers. The advertising and printing were begged. The faithful were expected to provide part of the provisions, to have them cooked in their houses and to purchase tickets. Table waiters for these meals, served up in public places, were selected from among the pretty girls of the church.

not a very cheerful or edifying spectacle; the faces were hideous, and the one in the coffin, with its black face and grinning white teeth, perfectly ghastly. I walked over to the other house, which was no improvement on the first; on either side, piled neatly up like firewood, were bones of every sort; skulls, arms, legs; it being the custom until some years ago to leave bodies in the earth only so many years, that the bones were dug up, labelled with the name, the date of birth and death, and deposited in the bone-house, making room for other burials in the churchyard.

Seeing the World. Sunday-School Times. A late editorial in a leading daily paper, headed "Certain Holiday Books," attributes the mutiny on the school-ships to the inflated ambition of some of the lads who had been reading the adventures of a certain cheap hero of the Bowery variety. The same article goes on to show that the modern parent's guilty neglect, if not positive misdirection of the "boy's taste for reading," is the fruitful cause of the mass of boy crime that has startled thinking people into closer observation—and finally it adds these very suggestive words:

The Mayor of Philadelphia, it is said, asserts that he could rid the jails of two-thirds of the juvenile criminals in the next year, if he could banish certain plays from the boards of the variety theaters, and put certain books out of print. We only suggest these facts to mothers and fathers. It is their part to clear the paths in future. No Mayor can help them.

When the physical energies are overtaken or flag through weakness or disease, they need prompt reinforcement. Renewed vigor is most speedily supplied through the medium of a tonic stimulant, and among medicinal resources of that class, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters assuredly deserve a prominent place. Weakness, whether constitutional or arising from disease or over-fatigue, cannot be better remedied than by a restorative of this strengthening cordial. The enfeebled invalid, the convalescent and the aged and infirm find in this tonic a most refreshing and invigorating agent. Its combined tonic and alterative properties also constitute it an invaluable remedy for that class of weakness, the organic diseases of urination, constipation, indigestion, and many other irregularities and disabilities, and render it an invaluable protective against malaria, as well as disorders of the stomach and bowels.
