Building Improvements.
Lately we noted the many new structures in course of erection with gratifying pride. In this direction the permanent progress of Memphis can be clearly seen. On every street we find evidences of solid improvement. One of the landmarks of Memphis is the Commercial Hotel, erected by the late Joseph I. Andrews, who contributed largely to the prosperity and growth of Memphis in the early days of its existence. Like many of the buildings in those times, the Commercial was built of the very best material, solid as a fort, and its foundation and walls to day are equal to the best. But modern taste demands more than strength and stability, and the young Messrs. Andrews, recognizing this fact, have overhauled the Commercial, putting a new and attractive face, within and without, and adding all the modern improvements. Mr. S. Frank Andrews, whose good taste and judgment is well known, personally superintended all the details. The house will be opened for guests about July 1st, Mr. J. H. Priddy, our popular townsman, taking charge. With such a house and such a host, success is assured.

THE Potato Movement.
Our potato shippers are very busy, and a number of firms send off to Northern cities from 300 to 400 barrels daily. A thousand or more barrels go from this city every twenty-four hours, and it is expected that nearly $150,000 will be distributed among the potato growers of this vicinity for the crop they are now digging. The value has fallen considerably during the past three or four days, but dealers do not anticipate much lower figures. At Cincinnati, evening before last, the market was reported easier, at $5 to $5.50 for new potatoes, and $5.75 to $6 per barrel for early rose.

MR. MUNDINGER'S TRIAL.
The Developments Yesterday Afternoon, Last Night and To-day.

The progress of the Munding trial, on the charge of embezzling funds belonging to his late employers, B. Lowenstein & Bros., has disclosed the fact that bitter feelings prevail among the witnesses, as well as among those who are the friends of Mr. Munding, and have been in close attendance throughout his trial at the courthouse. A good deal of hard swearing has been done in the case, as is usual, however, in nearly all cases tried before a Judge. The recklessness of many regarding their assertions, and the directly opposite statements of equally credible people can only be appreciated, and properly understood by those who would like to study human nature, by attending the court-house and watching this important trial.

In the course of the trial yesterday, at the morning and afternoon session of the court, Mr. Wm. Cross and Mr. C. M. Patton testified to having seen Munding on the first of September last six yards of silk to a colored woman, and put the money, amounting to $12, in his pocket. Mr. George Proutt and Mr. Book, cashiers, testified that the books of the firm contained no account of a sale of six yards of silk on the day named. A. H. Harris, an employe at Lowenstein's store, testified that he frequently wrapped goods for Munding without a check, he having authority to do this. Mr. A. Lowenstein said Munding had requested permission to stay here during the fever season of '78, saying he was not afraid of fever having been here in '73. He did not ask Munding to stay as he would not ask any one to do what he would not do himself, and he, Lowenstein, went away ten or twelve days after the fever appeared. Mr. Shouse said Munding was first employed at Lowenstein's in '74 as salesman, and in '79 was promoted to floor walker, and was afterwards made assistant floor manager at his suggestion. He (Shouse) had authority to employ or discharge Munding, being manager of the entire department and employing, discharging or arranging salaries in accordance with his judgment. Mr. Elias Lowenstein caused the arrest of Munding, and the arrest was made by Constable W. R. Sims. The defense offered as testimony Mrs. E. Colby, who said Mr. Patton told her Munding had done him a dirty trick and he would never forget it, also Mrs. Keller Anderson, who said she usually traded with Munding, and had bought a spool of floss at the store for a lady out of the city, but could not give the date, but it was about September 1st; Mr. John Gerber, who said he was a personal friend of Munding, and Mr. Patton said Munding was his worst enemy. Mr. C. M. Brown, now a grocery man, but formerly clerk at Lowenstein's, declared he would have noticed Munding if he had done what he had been charged with doing. He was in the habit of getting his dinner, and of course went to dinner on the day the transaction is reported to have occurred. M. Burke, M. P. Jarnagin, H. F. Farnsworth and P. R. Atly all gave Munding a good character. Mr. J. B. Merritt, now of Humboldt, Tenn., but formerly clerk at Lowenstein's, said Patton had told him Munding had been against him in the store. He also said that Cross tested the only knew of two suspicious transactions in which Munding was implicated, and he was not certain he had seen stealing. Merritt also said he had spent several days as the guest of Munding, that he was a Knight of Honor, and he never said Attorney Gantt had made a mistake in not placing Mr. Newell on the jury when he had a chance. Mr. Wynne Cannon testified that Merritt did say a mistake had been made in not taking Newell as a juror, and that he had winked at Munding to take him when the jury was being made up, but that Munding didn't see the wink.

Several witnesses testified to the good character of the swearer, Merritt included, and at the close Judge Horrigan announced that he would allow attorneys three hours and a half for the speaking on each side, and Attorney Lehman opened for the State this forenoon, and the speeches will occupy the day.
This forenoon the audience was smaller than heretofore. The leading interest centered in a statement of Munding's, who said he had no recollection of the silk transaction, and if such an affair ever occurred it was simply in exchange for goods; such transactions frequently occurred when goods were returned by customers. If any money was handed him at the time it was his own. He frequently loaned small sums of money to customers, which were handed back to him at various times. He had never taken one cent of Lowenstein's money, and if the Lowensteins had come to him and given him an opportunity, he would have made satisfactory explanation. Regarding the spool of floss, his recollection was that Mrs. Anderson asked for a certain kind of floss, not having, he had sent out for, also handing the money to pay for it. This money he may afterwards have put in his pocket. He had a faint recollection when this matter came up that Mrs. Anderson was the lady who paid for the floss. He called on the lady and found she had purchased a spool about the time but could not tell the exact date. She found upon looking over her letters, one bearing the date at the very time this transaction took place, and she also found a postal card showing the receipt of the spool of floss, and he was satisfied this was the same occurrence. If the Lowensteins had come to him at the time he could have readily explained it, and Mrs. Anderson would have remembered all about the matter.
During the argument this morning Rev. Dr. Mahon, of the First Methodist church, sat on one side of the accused and Rev. Dr. Evans, of the Central Methodist, on the other side. Among those present were noticed Dr. John D. White, Thomas J. Forsythe, A. P. Tucker, Joseph Bruce, E. Witzmann, E. H. Brown, W. L. Clapp, Dennis Smith, Captain Tom Dale, Captain Powers, W. T. Gwynne, Captain J. C. McCabe, Ed. Stout, L. C. Cooper, Captain T. B. Norman, Mrs. R. G. Letting, Mrs. A. F. Walton, Miss Mary Boddy, Miss Cynthia Letting, Miss Emma Letting, T. S. Mallory, Mrs. James Warren, Captain W. D. Fowel and several others.

Military Items.
The Crescent and the Louisiana Rifles both go from New Orleans to the Louisville and Indianapolis drills. The "Chiefs" practice in full uniform this afternoon. It will be what the military term a "dress parade." The Quappas expect to give an exhibition drill without an error to their honorary members, before they go to Louisville. If they do as well as that in the match they will go home with first prize. They will be quartered in a large hall while at Louisville and not go into camp.
The local companies at Louisville are working themselves up by close practice.
The Gate City Guards, of Atlanta, have quarrelled among themselves; the Captain was asked to resign by twenty-two men. He would't, and spoke his thoughts on the subject. It was in the armory and spittoons were flung around at a lively rate for a spell, but no body left with broken bones.
