THE symptoms of Liver Complaint are heaviness and pain in the side. Sometimes the pain is in the shoulder, and is mistaken for rheumatism. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, bowels in general constive, sometimes alternating with lax. The head is troubled with pain, and heavy, sometimes considerable loss of memory, accompanied with painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. Often complaining of weakness, debility, and low spirits. Sometimes many of the above symptoms attend the Liver with DR. SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR. A preparation of roots and herbs, warranted to be strictly vegetable, and can do injury to no one. It has been used by hundreds, and known for the last 40 years as one of the most reliable, efficacious and harmless preparations ever offered to the suffering. If taken regularly and persistently, it is sure to cure. Dyspepsia, headache, jaundice, constive bowels, sick, nervous, chronic diarrhoea, affections of the bladder, camp fever, nervousness, cholera, disease of the skin, impurity of the blood, melancholy, or depression of spirits, heartburn, colic, or pain in the bowels; pain in the head, fever and ague, dropsy, flatulency, in the back, etc. Prepared only by J. AN UNWELCOME VISITOR

A TERRIBLE SKETCH.

The burglars had been very active and bold in their operations in our city, but as the thermometer had marked above the nineties for several days, I had little of value in my room, I preferred to risk that little and leave my window open, although of easy access, rather than undergo partial suffocation. If any uninvited guest made his appearance, and I did not awake, he would not disturb me; if I did awake, I could feign sleep and let him take whatever he could find.

"This class of visitors," I reasoned with myself, "do not generally commit personal violence, if they can accomplish theft and make good their escape with it."

These were my reflections every night as I undressed and threw myself on my bed, leaving my window open to the enemy. I had been asleep one night about an hour, when I was awakened by the falling of a china ornament. Starting slightly, and opening my eyes, I saw the gas burning, and a tall, broad shouldered man with his back turned toward me, his face looking over his shoulder to see whether the noise had awakened me. Our eyes met, so that my plan to feign sleep would have been useless. My self-possession did not, however, forsake me. What followed illustrates the value of presence of mind.

Opposite the side of my bed, and about eight feet from it, was the door of my room, two or three feet from which were the stairs leading to the lower hall. The burglar must have used a ladder in ascending to the roof, from which he entered the window. It was some thirty feet from the ground, and isolated. My plan was, not only to escape harm myself, but to effect his capture. I knew the policeman's beat, and he would pass in a short time.

Sitting bolt upright, then, as I opened my eyes and saw the burglar looking very unpleasantly at me, I said, rubbing my eyes drowsily—although, to tell the truth, I never was more wide awake in my life: "Hello, John, what are you looking for? Can't you come in my room without making such a commotion as this?"

The fellow, taken somewhat aback at being addressed this way, said, in a low but menacing voice, and pointing a revolver at me: "Shut up! what do you take me for?"

"I took you for John!" I replied, with a well assumed nonchalance. "But I didn't suppose he was after anything valuable in my room, except one thing, and—by the way, if you are not the unluckiest fellow in the world."

"How's that?" growled my visitor.

"Well, I have a very good watch; but if you want to get it, you must put a visit to the watchmaker's after you leave here, for I had what I considered the bad, but what now seems the good fortune, to break the spring yesterday, and let it for repairs."

"You're a precious cool one!" he said evidently astonished at my indifference.

"What's the use of my getting excited or attempting to resist you? You are armed, and you see I am not. And if you had no weapon, your fighting weight must be at least thirteen stones, while mine is not more than nine and a half. I have no idea of interfering with you. If the room were filled with diamonds, I would not lift my finger to save them. Take all you can find; I am going to sleep—so don't make any more noise."

"Hold on!" said the fellow; "where's your keys?"

"I suppose you want to make as much of a haul as you can," I said; "so look in my pants hanging over the bedpost there, and you'll find my pocket-book, with a few stamps in it."

It was nearly time for the policeman to pass, and I paused to listen. I must, in a few moments, put my plan into execution.

A glance quick as lightning showed me that the key of the door was on the outside.

My listening expression did not escape the sharp and practiced eye of my grim visitor. It was a curious scene no doubt. I sitting in my bed, in my night clothes, unarmed, and this stalwart ruffian, pistol in hand, glaring half suspiciously at me, and almost in the crouching attitude of a tiger about to spring upon his prey. But there I sat, coolly conversing with him, the necessity of the moment keeping my wits too wide awake to allow my fears to get the upper hand for an instant.

"What are you listening to?" asked the burglar.

"I thought I heard a cry of fire."

"I thought I heard a cry of fire."
