And this difference is not so great between the parties as it is between States and sections. There are vast numbers of Democrats who are nominally "free traders" but are really protectionists. For instance - the Louisiana Democrats want sugar protection. The Texas Democrats demand protection for wool. The free trader Garland and the Arkansas Democrats demand 25 cents a gallon protection for cottonseed oil. The South Carolina Democrats say their rice fields must be protected by the tariff. The Pennsylvania Democrats want coal and iron protected, and so on. A good many Republicans think the present tariff is none too high for the adequate protection of our industries against foreign competition. Other Republicans think it too high. There is a like difference of opinion among Democrats. And Congressmen are now wrangling over the question of amount of protection. A Word to Our Readers They are not concerned about free trade.
