WARNING ON THE FALLEN ORES. St. Louis Globe, Sept. 9.

The prostitutes are turning on their persecutors. So far their persecutors, the police, have been having the best of it. Under a warrant, sworn out before the Court by Chairman of the Board, "landladies" have been arrested, and together with their girls, have been captured, taken to the stationhouse, and kept in confinement several hours before they could be bailed out and placed in a position to commence business again.

Now the prostitutes propose to arrest the police. It is claimed under the provisions of the new law only the "landladies" can be arrested, and that the inmates of a house of prostitution cannot be arrested except upon a warrant sworn out against each and every one of them. If that is the case, the "landladies" have been served with a notice of arrest, the inmates have been arrested at the same time. The point at issue has recently gained the case, when a warrant for her individual arrest. It is understood that a list has been made up of the names of the "landladies" and that a police officer will be arrested on a charge of entering a house of prostitution without a warrant, and that the case will be prosecuted in a final decision reached in the Supreme Court. Sergeant Watkins, it is understood, will be the victim, and against him a warrant, it is said, was sworn out yesterday, and he is arrested on a charge of Criminal Correction.

BLAQUET, the son-in-law of Bordaux, was about to make his third hundred and thirty-first arrest on Monday morning, August 10, at Royan (Charente-Inférieure), when, by some accident, the order to "let go" was given to him. The balloon, in rising, came in contact with a ladder, and the jerk dislodged Bordaux, who was seated on his trappeze. He, however, caught the salvage rope, and by superhuman efforts, he nearly gained the air, when the cord broke, and he fell from a height of three hundred yards. The body was horribly shattered when it was picked up, and life was, of course, extinct.

The American Agriculturalist, in its last issue, contains an article upon a new species of fungi, lately imported to this country in the hollowy, which has already made deplorable work that plants of the family of the "rag" war, a fungus of a serious nature and threaten still worse.

The writer asserts that the whole family of plants to which the hollowy belongs is in fatal danger, and as this includes cotton, this great industrial interest, it is, in imminent danger. As a remedy, farmers are urged to inspect no more of this species of plants to the country, as their destruction has so far defied all remedies applied.
