In London Courts.

Some of the London local courts have adopted the method of drawing jurors' names from a box, in the American style. The London Mail says the method has a distinctly novel, not to say sporting character, about it.

A Hair Dressing

Nearly every one likes a fine hair dressing. Something to make the hair more manageable; to keep it from being too rough, or from splitting at the ends. Something, too, that will feed the hair at the same time, a regular hair-food. Well-fed hair will be strong, and will remain where it belongs—on the head, not on the comb!

REMNANTS OF GALILEO.

Finger and Thumb of the Famous Astronomer to Be Bought by Italian Government.

What is the finger of a dead scientist worth? This question has been stirring all Florence, the thumb and index finger of the right hand of Galileo having recently been offered for sale in that city by an old woman, Laura Jont. Being in straitened circumstances, she tried to obtain the highest offer for her strange property.

The government, getting wind of the affair, caused an investigation to be made, and ascertained that these relics of the great astronomer were genuine, having been cut off in 1737 by a fanatical admirer, Marquis Capponi, when the body was reinterred in the splendid mausoleum in the Santa Croce church. Thereupon the government decided to acquire them and to replace them in the mausoleum.

The only question still to be discussed is the matter of price. Upon this point experts will undoubtedly be called in. But one person, we are sure, would not be welcome—the American tourist, who, as reported recently in the Atlantic Monthly, remarked on being told that Galileo's tomb in the Santa Croce: "Galileo? Oh, yes; Galileo? Why, of course! Pygmalion and Galileo; you always hear of them together; now, who was Pygmalion?"

Sent Fort to Die.

It was at the Port Arthur siege during the assault on the celebrated 103-meter hill which cost the Japanese so many men. Before sending forth to certain death a regiment held until then in reserve Gen. Nogi, addressing the colonel, said: "Your regiment is the first in all this world!" "General," replied the officer, gravely. "It will be the first in the other!"

German Export Rates.

The German railroads give quick transit of goods for export at favored rates. The rates from Plauen to Bremen, American Consul Hurst reports, for export, express, are only 38 cents per 100 pounds for a distance of 315 miles, and to Hamburg 37 cents per 100 for 300 miles. If the goods are not for export, the usual rate for express, taking a longer time, costs nearly three times as much.

Don't Kill the Hawk.

Man has sinned more than any other animal in trifling with nature's balance. Clover crops and the killing of hawks are apparently unrelated yet the hawks eat the field-mice, the field-mice prey on the immature bees, and the bees fertilize the clover-blossoms. The death of a hawk means an over-increase of field-mice and a consequent destruction of the bees.—Country Life in America.

Skulls Preserved.

It is the custom in Brittany to dig up the bones of the dead after a certain time and preserve the skull only in a small box with a heart-shaped opening in its front. Each box is marked with the name and date of the dead.

ARE LEAD TO DEATH IN STUPOR.

Condemned Persons Drugged Before Their Execution.

They were discussing the horrors that attended on the hanging of Mary Rogers.

"But she suffered little," said a physician. "Every murderer who goes to the gallows or the electric chair is drugged to the point almost of unconsciousness. Otherwise the death sentence, unendurably hideous, would be abolished."

He frowned and continued: "No man alone in a cell with the knowledge that on a certain day, at a certain hour, he is to be killed can keep his nerve."

"He stops eating, he stops sleeping; in a little while he begins to shriek."

"Then the drugging begins. With opium or with alcohol he is lulled into a torpor. On the day of his death he is so heavily dosed as to be, to all practical intents and purposes, unconscious."

"Condemned murderers as the last day approaches are so wild with terror that it takes an incredible lot of dosing to compose them. I have seen men untouched by three grains of morphia, and a pint of whisky would have no more effect on them than a shell of beer."

"Thank goodness, I say, that man is at least humane enough before he slays his brother to drug the poor fellow into a stupor. Thank goodness that when we kill legally we kill with kindness."—Chicago Chronicle.

SHOULD THE FEEBLE BE SLAIN?

Civilization Dependent Upon the Safety of Each Life.

Civilization depends upon the safety of each life, and it would cut away our very foundation to give any one the legal right to destroy others, says American Medicine. It is this inherited instinct which causes some states to abolish capital punishment, though it is generally believed that they thereby do not properly guard the lives of the normal citizens. The medical profession has only one reason for its existence, and that reason is the prolongation of life. It is a reason bound up in the very growth of modern society itself. To give a physician the legal right to end a life would therefore destroy the foundation of the existence of the profession. As a body physicians are emphatic against all such propositions. In addition, it is frequently pointed out that it is not always possible to say when a life is surely doomed. Patients not infrequently recover from conditions which had every appearance of being fatal. If a physician had the right to end a painful life, which apparently was soon to end itself, how long would he retain his practice? People want a doctor who will struggle to keep them alive to the very end, even when appearances are all against them.

Where Man's Influence is Fatal.

Man is the only animal which is always accompanied by diseases, except those creatures that are his companions and share his patronage. There is reason to believe that the denizens of the forests, the veld, the rivers and the ocean, so far as they escape man's influence, live, with hardly an exception, healthy lives. Chronic ailments begin with man's protection in the dairy, stable and kennel. Man has created artificial conditions with which the "thousand ills that flesh is heir to" are associated. If the human family dwell in ventilated houses, breathed pure air, lived temperately, with little or no alcohol, and took daily exercise in the open it would perhaps know little more of gout, rheumatism, cancer, fever, lumbago, dyspepsia, asthma, and the host of infectious troubles than do the lower animals.—London Telegraph.

English Woman Voter.

In the recent parliamentary elections in England a woman in East Marylebone succeeded in voting. Accounts differ as to how she polled her vote. Some say she went disguised as a man; others that she was driven in Lord Robert Cecil's carriage. According to the London Pall Mall Gazette she is a Miss Alwyn Bussey, a teacher of singing and the daughter of a German who naturalized himself as an Englishman. Miss Bussey will come off the register next time. But it is pleasant to think that a woman can be as cool about "spoofing" as canvassers as the most hardened male voter.
