PULASKI, TENN.
FRIDAY MORNING, JULY 27th, 1886.

A Chapter on Woman—A Chemical and Mechanical Analysis.

The following is Alphonse Karr's view of the sex: I wrote you the other day something about women. Having folded, sealed and dispatched my letter, I sat down in my easy chair, following my thoughts as a smoker plays with the wreaths of smoke that rise from his pipe, and I began to reflect upon a very grave matter—a little late to be sure, but I thought of it nevertheless: it is no longer a question of dividing the other sex into women and strong-minded women. I ask myself seriously, are there any women? Is woman a real living thing, or is she a conventional creature, imaginary, formed by the fancy of poets?

What is a woman? In what consists a woman? What is a woman made of? Is she simply Adam's rib—one rib, dressed up, adorned like the Gauls festooned with rich spoils, and then worshipped?

Is there anything real in woman? Let us open a newspaper—anywhere—especially Northern papers, and read the advertisements.

Here is what a perfumer says, and what he offers:

"Bloom of Roses, to color the lips and the nails." Ah! that opal tint of the nails, that carnation of the lips are not true—do not belong naturally to women? They are sold—they are bought.

"Powder to whiten the teeth." Has woman, then, naturally yellow teeth? Or rather has woman really teeth at all? Here are ten very expensive advertisements of dentists who, to be able to afford them, ought to sell a good many false teeth.

To return to the perfumer.

"Circassian Black, to give the velvet lustre to the eyes." Ah! those black velvety eyes, which so passionately pierce the heart are not true—they are artificial.

"Blue Mysotis, to imitate the veins." Goodness! they have not even veins of their own, nor blood. Veins and blood are all artificial, and bought at a shop.

Imperial Cream, clear bluish, warm blood, chestnut brown and black, for the eyelashes and eyebrows, etc.

Let us have done with the perfumer—he is odious; but stop. He announces a certain toilette water, Nymphonia. It is horrible, meretricious, shameful! Enough of this.

All here is a mantua maker who tells us what gives elegance, grace and suppleness of gait—it is the waist which she makes. So much suppleness, grace, elegance! It is the mantua maker who furnishes them.—Those who have not the means of buying grace, suppleness and elegance, must do without them.

Ask the women themselves. Each will acknowledge that all the others wear false hair. Some will confess that they wear it themselves.

No hair, no eyelashes, no eyebrows, no white teeth, no ruby lips, no rosy nails, no velvety eyes, no veins, no blood, no suppleness, no elegance, no grace, without opening the purse. Women buy all these of the shopkeepers.

Contrary to the ways of other traders, woman buys herself at retail and sells herself at wholesale.

But is it not to be feared that some day, man, finding that she would make too much by the operation, may make provision for himself, and buy at first hand all the minute details—grace, eyelashes, elegance, ruby lips, veins, hair, opal nails, etc., etc.—mix them according to art, miscet secundum artem, as the physicians have it, M. S. A., then adorn his mixture and do without the rest? What is the rest, in effect, especially if you have bought it with Nymphonia?

A WINCHESTER GIRL.—One day, during the hard winter of 1863, a Miss Arnold applied to Gen. Milroy for a permit to purchase forage for her cow, whose milk was an item of no little importance to the subsistence of her father's family.

"Are you loyal?" asked the General.

"Yes," she replied.

He began to write the permit. "To the United States or Confederate States?"

"To the Confederate States, of course," she replied.

"Then I shall give you no permit. This infamous rebellion must be crushed."

"Well," said she, "if you can crush it by starving John Arnold's old cow, do it, and be drot to you."

One Sunday night a clergyman was preaching in Belfast, Me., when a young man in the congregation getting weary of the sermon looked repeatedly at his watch. Just as he was in the act of examining his time, the pastor, with great earnestness, was urging the truth upon the conscience of his hearers. "Young man," said he, "how is it with you?" Whereupon the young man with the gold repeater bawled out in hearing of the whole congregation, "A quarter past eight." As may be supposed, the gravity of the assembly was very much disturbed.

Among the proceedings of the Ohio Sunday School Convention we find the following:

"Resolved, that a committee of ladies and gentlemen be appointed to raise children for the Sabbath School."

RATES OF POSTAGE.
In consequence of the general ignorance in the South of the rates of postage established by law, many letters of importance are daily lost to those interested by being improperly or insufficiently stamped. The regulations require that all such letters dropped into post offices shall be immediately forwarded to the Dead Letter office, where they are never heard from unless they contain money, or other enclosures of value. We give below some information which may prevent vexation to correspondents.

The rate of postage on letters within the United States is 2 cents for every letter or sealed package weighing one half ounce or under. Those over one half ounce, 3 cents and 4 cents for every additional half ounce. Prepayment with stamps in all cases is required. All letters without the necessary postage stamps, or which are stamped with revenue stamps, will be forwarded to the Dead Letter office immediately after being dropped into any post office.

Postage stamps issued prior to 1869 are worthless, and will not answer for present purposes.

Opinions of Distinguished Business Men.
"Advertise your business. Do not hide your light under a bushel. Whatever your calling or occupation may be, if it needs support from the public, advertise it thoroughly and efficiently in some shape or other, that will arrest public attention. I freely confess that what success I have had in life may fairly be attributed more to the public press than to nearly all the other causes combined. There may possibly be occupations that do not require advertising, but I cannot well conceive what they are."—P. T. HANSEN.

"I have always considered advertising—liberally and long—to be the great medium of success in business, and the prelude to wealth. And I have always made it an invariable rule, too, to advertise in the oldest times, a long experience having taught me that money thus spent is well laid out; as by keeping my business continually before the public, has secured me many sales that I otherwise would have lost."—S. F. GIBSON.

"Whatever success I may have had in business I owe mainly to continuous advertising, and I deem it good policy to advertise long in the same papers. From a close observation I am fully convinced that it is impossible to make much headway in any kind of business, without the facilities which the press alone can give."—JACOB RINGWAY.

"My motto through life has been, work and advertise. In business, advertising is the true philosopher's stone, that turns whatever it touches to gold. I have advertised much, both in the weekly as well as the daily papers; nor have I found that those of the largest circulation, of either class, benefited me the most."—JOHN JACOB ASTOR.

"Advertise! advertise! advertise! This is the life of trade, and standing advertisements, you will find, will prove the most remunerative. At least I have found it so during my business career thus far; for should you withdraw but a single week from the paper in which you are accustomed to advertise, ten to one that would be the time when some would be new customers will look into the paper for your business address, and not finding it, you will lose several profitable sales."—WILLIAM GRAY.
