I Cannot Forget Thee.

Forget thee—no! 'tis vain to try,
Though months may pass, and years go by,
It matters not where'er I be,
What other form or face I see—
Those dark bright eyes will haunt me yet,
Though years have passed since last we met.

Forget thee! 'tis an idle thought,
Where'er I roam it matters not;
As well could I forget the sun,
Which lights my path where'er I turn,
As to forgetfulness consign
One look, or word, or tone of thine.

Forget thee—no! 'twere the day,
Though heavy clouds loom o'er my way,
The joy, and friends, and peace, and rest,
Surround my path, and I am blest;
There's yet a something coming to me,
And whispers, softly, still of thee.

Forget thee—never! though the world,
And dearest friends might faithless prove,
Through grief, or pleasure, joy or pain,
I yet thy faithful friend remain;
By these means, for, and unthought;
This be it so—'t matters not.

Forget thee—never! although by thee
Was bestowed one thought on me,
By thee remembered or forgot,
How'er that be, it matters not;
I only know, where'er I will
Thy bright dark eyes do haunt me still.

What is beauty, after all? Each eye makes it for itself. You think Smith's lady-love ravished and hard featured. He calls her a "magnificent woman," and wonders what you see in your little angel with her little baby face and stature. So it is the world over; and yet we would each give something to be beautiful after our own fashion. How the powders and lotions which are to bestow upon poor blighted mortals' skins of satin and snow, and the hair dyes, and pomades, and cosmetics of all sorts, sell, we need not mention to prove the fact. In France, old ladies are being made over at a cost of half their fortunes. Heaven keep me from ever catching a glimpse of one of these emmeled, dyed and miserable old creatures after the renovation by the way. Yes, we all want to be beautiful; and if only our ideas of beauty were what they should be, we might accomplish our desire easily. Meekness and love make all faces pleasant. Were we good we should be beautiful. We all feel this. There are plain features so charming with the sparkle of good humor that we love them. There are blemished faces so sweet that they are pleasanter to look upon than the most perfect. After all it is in the expression that the actual charm lies. So that were some one to promise the secret of beauty for twenty-five cents and a postpaid envelope, he would scarcely be an impostor should he return the golden rule with instructions to learn and practice it. If we only could do this earnestly and truly for one generation, the next might wonder whether it were not a fable that such a thing as ugliness was ever known upon old earth.—Emaline Palmer.

We Fade as a Leaf.
As the trials of life thicken, and the dreams of other days fade, one by one, in the deep vista of disappointed hope, the heart grows weary of the struggle, and we begin to realize our insignificance. Those who have climbed to the pinnacles of fame, or revel in luxury and wealth, go to the grave at last with the poor mendicant who begs pennies by the way-side, and like him are soon forgotten. Generation after generation, says an eloquent writer, have felt as we feel, and their fellows were as active in life as ours are now. They passed away as a vapor, while nature wore the same aspect of beauty as when her Creator commanded her to be. So, likewise, shall it be when we are gone. The heavens will be as bright over our graves as they are now around our path; the world will have the same attraction for offsprings yet unborn that she had once for ourselves, and that she has now for her children. Yet a little while and all this will happen! Days will continue to move on, and laughter and song will be heard in the very chamber in which we die; and the eye that mourned for us will be dry, and will gladden with joy; and even our children will cease to think of us, and will not remember to kiss our name.

Robbers are the most ingenious of men. A new, a bold, and certainly a most original, trick was recently played by one of their fraternity, at the consecration of the new Chapel of Battersea, in London. About the time of the ceremony a well dressed man, mounted on a handsome horse, rode up to the church-door, leaving his horse in charge of a boy, mingled with the worshippers inside. His devout demeanor greatly endeared him to all near him. At last, when the last psalm had been sung, and two of the elders of the church were starting on their rounds to take up a collection, the interesting stranger took out his purse, and depositing a piece of gold coin in his hat, also made the tour of the aisles, holding out the hat to the faithful. Parson and worshippers alike were greatly moved by this exhibition of zeal, and ascribed it to a sudden conversion, so that the hat was quickly laden with big and little contributions. But what was the horror of all parties when they saw the collector disappear out of the church-door instead of returning with his collection to the secretary! Before they had recovered from their astonishment, he had remounted his horse and galloped away. This was a sudden conversion, but of the funds of the church!

THE CONVENTION.

Unparalleled Harmony and Enthusiasm.
Although the New York Convention has nominated its candidates and adjourned, we publish below the last day or two's proceedings to show the great enthusiasm and perfect harmony which prevailed, the popularity of the ticket, evinced by cheers that made the walls to tremble, and the manner in which the thing was done:
Associated Press Dispatches.

TAMMANY HALL, N. Y., June 9.—The Convention met at 10 A. M. Mr. Brodhead, of Missouri, rose to nominate Hon. F. P. Blair, Missouri's choice, as their candidate, before this convention for President. He has firmness of purpose, great courage, and a will that was especially required at this time. He would give a living meaning to the pledge to preserve and defend the Constitution, and assert and maintain the independence of the Executive. He knows the duties of the exalted station, and will dare maintain them. He therefore nominated Mr. Blair in behalf of the Missouri delegation.

Mr. Vallandigham said he had a communication in writing, which, with leave of the Chair, he would read from the stand.—His appearance on the platform was greeted with moderate cheers. He read a letter from Mr. Pendleton, dated July 2, and addressed to Washington McLean, of the Ohio delegation, authorizing the withdrawal of his name whenever it should seem desirable. He deemed the success of the party far more important than the gratification of any personal ambition. If at any time a name could be presented that would be more likely to more heartily unite the party than his (Pendleton's) name, it should at once be withdrawn.

CINCINNATI, July 2, 1868.
Washington McLean, Fifth Avenue Hotel.
MY DEAR SIR—You know better than any one the feelings and principles which have guided my conduct since the suggestion of my name for the Presidential nomination. You know that while I received the good opinion of my countrymen, and would feel honest pride in so distinguished a mark of their confidence, I do not desire it at the expense of one single electoral vote. [Great applause] or of the least disturbance of the harmony of our party. I considered the success of the Democratic party in the next election as of far greater importance than the gratification of any personal ambition, however pure and lofty it might be, [loud cheers]. If, therefore, at any time, a name should be suggested, which, in the opinion of yourself and those friends who have shared our confidence, shall be stronger before the country, or which can more thoroughly represent our party, I beg that you will instantly withdraw my name, and I pledge to the convention my hearty, zealous and active support for its nominee.

Very truly yours,
Geo. H. PENDLETON.

Mr. Vallandigham said it was McLean's desire to present this letter early yesterday, but the Ohio delegation had thought best to keep his name before the convention throughout yesterday. He commended the magnanimity and unselfish patriotism of this letter, and finally withdrew Pendleton's name with thanks to those who had supported him with such fidelity. [Great cheering.]

The roll was then called for the 10th ballot. The chair announced the result: Hancock, 135; English, 6; Paeker, 22; Doolittle, 12; Hendricks, 107; Blair, 13; Field, 15; Chase, 3; Seymour, 4.

Ohio asked time and was passed. Excitement and interest intense. Pennsylvania adhered to Hancock. Kentucky gave Hendricks 5; Hancock, 3. Massachusetts asked and obtained leave to retire for fifteen minutes. Ohio gave English 10; Hancock, 11, and then obtained leave to retire for consultation. The chair announced a general recess for fifteen minutes. During the recess John Morrissey offered bets that English would be the nominee. The canvassing was active all over the hall; each delegation reviewing the field, discussing the chances of different candidates and determining how to vote on the next ballot, or how to change their votes if there should be any general change of vote.

On the 22nd ballot California voted solid for Hendricks; Minnesota gave Hendricks her 4; Missouri gave Hendricks 8; Nevada gave him 3; New York adhered to him; North Carolina gave him her 6. Great cheers when Ohio was called. Mr. McCook, by the unanimous direction of his delegation, and with the assent and approval of every public man in the State, including Pendleton, asked leave to put in nomination against his inclination, but no longer against his honor, the name of Hon. Horatio Seymour. Let us vote for a man whom the Presidency has sought and who has not sought the Presidency. This he believed would drive from power the radical cabal at Washington. He believed this nomination would commend the unanimous approval of Democratic conservative men of all sections, and he asked, on behalf of the country, that Mr. Seymour should yield to this wish of the convention. [Great excitement and applause; delegates rising and cheering.]

Mr. McCook cast 21 votes for Horatio Seymour. [Renewed cheering.]
Mr. Seymour rose, and said the motion just made excited mingled emotions. He had no language in which to thank the convention and express his regret that his name had been presented, but in a question affecting his duty and honor he must stand by his opinion against the world. He could not be nominated without putting himself and the Democratic party in peril. When he declined the nomination he meant it. He paid an eloquent tribute to Pendleton and his magnanimity, in closing, and said, thanking the convention, your candidate I cannot be.

Mr. Vallandigham said, in times of great exigency and calamity every personal consideration should be laid aside. He insisted that Horatio Seymour must yield to the demonstration in his behalf. Ohio's vote must and should stand for Horatio Seymour. He called upon the several delegations to follow that.

Mr. Keran, of New York, said, to relieve every body in the New York delegation, they have had no lot nor part in this movement of Ohio. They had heard something of it, but declined taking part in it, out of regard for the proper sensitiveness of the President of the National Convention and all other States should show by their actions that Mr. Seymour was demanded by the party in the convention. He urged the necessity of success in the campaign; expressed it as his opinion that Mr. Seymour could accept the judgement of the Convention with honor, and that he should yield, as a matter of duty, to its wishes. With him as a candidate, New York was good for a hundred thousand majority.

The call of the roll was then proceeded with. Tennessee gave Horatio Seymour 10. When Wisconsin was called Mr. Palmer seconded the State of Ohio and cast nine votes for Horatio Seymour. [Great cheering.] Kentucky gave Seymour her 11 votes. [Great cheering.] Massachusetts gave 12 for Horatio Seymour. North Carolina changed her 3 votes from Hendricks to Seymour. [Cheers.] Pennsylvania asked that her vote be not recorded for President. Mississippi changed from Hancock to Horatio Seymour. [Great cheering and confusion ensued, delegations standing upon their seats; cries of "sit down, sit down in front," "order."]

Mr. Paine took the chair and insisted that gentlemen must take their seats, that he would recognize no one until order was restored.

Mr. Woodward, of Pennsylvania, now rose and transferred her twenty-six votes to Horatio Seymour. [Great cheering and disorder; cries of the delegates all over the house to their respective Chairmen, "change our vote, change our vote" Half a dozen States at once wanted to change their vote.

Missouri changed to Seymour, 11; Illinois followed for Seymour. [Tremendous cheering and indescribable confusion.]—Indiana changed solid 13 to Seymour; Texas cast her 6. Here the cannon in the street began to fire a salute for the nomination, as State after State came in; but the confusion and noise was so great that not a word could be distinguished of what anybody said.

Mr. Seymour being clearly nominated, and the confusion subsiding, Alabama, Maine, Kansas and Arkansas followed successively with unanimous votes for him.

Mr. Dawson, of Pennsylvania, moved that the nomination be made by acclamation; but there was so much confusion nothing was done with the motion.

A delegate from Minnesota, frantically waving one of the State standards, attracted the attention of the Chairman, and cast the vote of Minnesota for Seymour.

Georgia paid her last tribute to Hancock, the most knightly soldier of the war, who she had supported earnestly, but she now united in voting unanimously for Seymour.

Mr. Stuart, of Michigan, said that State came to the Convention with the single purpose to nominate a candidate who could certainly be elected. That position she occupied to-day. He proceeded to eulogize Seymour as the greatest statesman now living, and cast the Michigan vote for him.

The band on Fourteenth street struck up "The Battle Cry of Freedom." The cannon still saluting.

A delegate from South Carolina said he was from a State which felt most heavily the chains of oppression from radical rule. He said South Carolina came here caring more for men than measures, they were satisfied with the platform adopted so unanimously, and South Carolina with the invocation of God's blessing on the party on which rests the last hope of the country, cast her vote for Seymour.

Maryland changed to Seymour. Mr. Tilden, of New York, rose. Great interest to hear him was manifested, and cries uttered of, "take the platform." He spoke from his place, however. Said that he did not, last evening, believe that the event which has now occurred could have happened. His remarks here were not distinctly audible to the reporter, because of conversation in his vicinity. He was understood to say he had no expectation that Ohio would have come to the support of the distinguished citizen of New York.—He had opposed Ohio's earnest wishes. In conclusion he announced the unanimous vote of New York for Seymour.

Mr. Clark, of Wisconsin, called for the ratification of the nomination by three cheers for Seymour, which were given with a will.

The Chair announced the result, all the States having voted. The result was, Seymour 317 votes. Enthusiastic cheering by the whole Convention, the audience rising, waving hats, handkerchiefs, fans, etc., for several minutes. Loud calls for Seymour and cries of sit down in front.

Preston, of Kentucky, offered a resolution to proceed to nominate a candidate for Vice President.

The Convention then took a recess for one hour.

At 2 P. M. the delegates are reassembling, and various State delegations are causing in the hall. There seems a general conviction that the second place on the ticket must be assigned to a soldier.

The chair called the convention to order at 2:30 P. M.

Governor Seymour having retired to his quarters at the St. Nicholas Hotel, the call of States was continued for nomination for Vice President.

Ordered to be spread on the minutes.

Mr. Preston, of Kentucky, made a few remarks, in which he said this nomination was due to the West, and presented General F. P. Blair, of Missouri. As a Southern soldier, who had differed from General Blair in the war, he desired to say that the soldiers of the South extended their hands to the soldiers of the North in token of amity and good will.

General Sewardman, of Louisiana, nominated his companion in arms, General F. P. Blair. He claimed the support given by the South to General Hancock, and the nomination of General Blair by Mr. Preston was evidence that the soldiers of the South accepted the situation and the issues of the war in good faith.

Under the circumstances, Indiana said she would sustain General Blair.

Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska and Nevada also seconded General Blair.

North Carolina, to show that she had no prejudice against a soldier who fought gallantly for his own side during the war, seconded the nomination of Gen. Blair.

Oregon also seconded Gen. Blair.

Pennsylvania recorded the nomination of that great soldier and sound statesman, Gen. Blair. [Cheers.]

When South Carolina was called, her Chairman rose and introduced Wade Hampton to announce her response. He was received with uproarious applause.

Gen. Hampton said the soldiers of the South frankly, cheerfully and cordially accepted the hand of amity extended to them. He thought it due to the soldiers of the North that they should have the second place on the ticket, and he seconded the nomination of Gen. Blair.

As he took his seat, Gen. McClelland crossed the hall and took Mr. Hampton's hand, amid vociferous applause.

Virginia accepted Gen. Blair on the token of acceptance of the proffer by the Northern soldiers of amity and good will.

At the close Mr. Tilden concurred in the nomination of Gen. Blair.

The delegation from Kansas who nominated Gen. Ewing rose and said, that by request of that gentleman, and by the instructions of his delegation, he withdrew the nomination of Gen. Ewing, and moved that Gen. Blair be nominated by acclamation.

Maine seconded the nomination.

Iowa then withdrew the nomination of Gen. Dodge, which left Gen. Blair the only nominee before the Convention.

There was great cries of "call the roll, call the roll," which was ordered. Each State in its order voted unanimously for Gen. Blair.

A delegate from Alabama led off, saying: "As a rebel soldier of Alabama, I take pleasure in casting her vote for a gallant Union soldier, Frank P. Blair."

Mr. Woodward, in casting the vote of Pennsylvania for General Blair, pledged 200,000 majority for the ticket in that State in November next.

When Tennessee was called, Mr. Nelson introduced Gen. N. B. Forrest, to cast the vote. [Great cheers.] Gen. Forrest rose cast the vote for Gen. Blair, and thanked the convention for the courtesy and kindness extended by its members to the soldiers of the South.

Colonel Ashbal Smith, with a few remarks, cast the vote of Texas, for General Blair.

The Chair then announced that as a unanimous vote having been cast for Frank P. Blair, he was the nominee of the convention for Vice President.

Mr. S. S. Cox, of New York, rose to move that the nomination be ratified by the unanimous voice of both delegates and audience.
