

HE'S COMING.
 He's coming, the light blushing rose Whispers it low to me,
 And the starlight hastens with it Over the twilight sea.
 All trembling the zephyrs fall me,
 On light winds hurrying past,
 And my own heart quickly beating, Coming, coming at last.

The soft-lipped waves of the ocean,
 GATHERING at my feet,
 Breeze-borne from the coral island, MURMUR the secret sweet.
 There's not a dew-steeped blossom Or glistening orange tree, But furnish its leaves glistening,
 To breathe this joy for me.

List! that is the sound of rowing Stealing along the air, I must gather round my temples This weight of braided hair,
 And trust to glowing darkness,
 And evening shadows die, To hide with their wings the traces Of tears I've shed for him.

"THEY SAY."—They say: Who are they? Who are the monks the hooded friars who glide with shrouded faces in the procession of life, muttering in an unknown tongue words of mysterious import? Who are they? The midnight assassins of reputation, who lurk in the by-lanes of society, with dagger tongues sharpened by invention and emboldened malice, to draw the blood of innocence and hyena-like banquet on the dead.
 Who are they? They are a multitude no man can number, black-souled familiars of the inquisition of slander, searching for victims in every city, town and village, wherever the heart of humanity throbs, or the ashes of mortality find rest. Oh! toward; coward world skulkers! Give me the bold brigand, who thunders along the highways with flashing weapons that eats the sunbeam as well as the shades; give me the pirate who unfurls the black flag, emblem of his terrible trade, and shows the plank which your doomed feet must tread; but save me from the 'they sayers' of society, whose knives are hidden in a velvet sheath, whose bridge of death is wove in flowers; and who spread with invisible poison, even the spotless whiteness of the winding sheet."— Mrs. Hunt.

VENGEANCE OF WATERLOO.—Once upon a time there was a bad fight between a cock and a lion, and the cock flew into the lion's face and pecked his eyes so that he could hardly see, and scratched his nose so that it bled badly, while the cock was so spry that the lion could not catch him nor do him much harm. But the other beasts were afraid that if the cock should beat the lion he might next fight them, and so some of them helped him; and at last they beat the cock and broke his spurs, and pulled out his tail feathers, and bit off his comb, until he was a sad bird to see.

Some time afterward the cock's spurs and tail feathers grew out again, and his comb grew up as fine as ever, so that if any of the beasts growled at him he flew at them and taught them to let him alone. One day one of the beasts that had helped the lion beat him got saucy, and the cock gave him a good drubbing, and drove him back into his den, and got his finger from him and ate it himself, but the lion never once came near to help the beast that had helped him. Then the cock turned around to go back to his roost, and as he stretched himself up and held up his head to crow, he saw the lion, whose hair was just beyond the cock's roost, and he lion was shaking and trembling, and everybody saw that he was in mortal terror for fear that the cock was just then coming to fight him again, when the other beasts might not care to come and help him as they did before. But the cock, after laughing from ear to ear, took pity on him, and did not crow, but went quietly about his business.

Now, all you little boys, don't you think that Waterloo is avenged?—

CATCHING COLD.—Some people take cold easily. Howard Paul, in his amusing "Patch-work," tells of a delicate young man who kissed a lady's "snowy brow," and was laid up with influenza a week in consequence.

We would like to catch cold in that manner ourselves.

Humbag.—when a wife says she loves you and leaves the buttons off your shirt.

HOW A SOLDIER FEELS IN BATTLE.
 —A young French officer thus writes of his first experience in battle:

"Our officers kept us back, for we were not numerous enough to charge upon the enemy. This was, moreover, most prudent; for this murderous fire so fatal to the white coats, did us but little harm. Our conical balls penetrated their dense masses, while those of the Austrians whistled past our ears and respected our persons. It was the first time I had faced fire, nor was I the only one. Well I am satisfied with myself. True, I dodged the first balls, but Henry IV., they say, did the same at the beginning of every battle.
 It is, in fact, a physical effect, independent of the will.

"But, this tribute paid, if you could only feel how each shot electrifies you!
 It is like a whip on a racer's legs.— The balls whistle past you, turn up the earth around you, kill one, wound another, and you hardly notice them.
 You grow intoxicated, the smell of gunpowder mounts to your brain.— The eye becomes bloodshot, and the look is fixed upon the enemy. There is something of all the passions in that terrible passion excited in the soldier by the sight of blood and the tumult of battle.

"Every body who tried it, testifies to the peculiar intoxication that is produced by being in a battle. There is an infatuating influence about the smell of powder, the shrill whistle of a bullet, and the sight of human blood that instantly transforms men from cowards to heroes—from women sometimes to monsters. None can tell of the nature or mystery of that influence but those who have been in the fray themselves."

DR.—"How do you do, Mrs. Digge?" said Mrs. Gad. "Have you heard the story about Mrs. Ludly?" Why no—Really, Mrs. Gad, what is it? Do tell me?" "Oh, I promised not to tell for all the world! No I must never tell only I'm afraid every body will know it."
 "No I will never open my mouth about it; no never." "Well if you'll believe it, Mrs. Fuddy told me last night that Mrs. Trot told her that her sister's husband was told by a person that Mrs.
 Trouble's oldest daughter told Mrs.
 Nickens that her grandmother heard by a letter, which she got from her sister second husband's oldest brother's stepdaughter in Australia, that it was reported by a skipper just arrived from the Feejee Islands, that the mermaid wear crinoline made out of shark skin!"

THE BOY AND THE BRICK.—A boy hearing his father say, "Was a poor rule that wouldn't work both ways," said "If father applies this rule about his work, I will test it in my play." So setting up a row of bricks, he tipped over the first, which striking the second, caused it to fall on the third, which overturned the fourth, and so on, until all the bricks lay prostrate.

"Well," said the little boy, "each brick has knocked down his neighbor I only tipped one. Now I will raise one, and see if he will raise his neighbor." He looked in vain to see them rise. "Here, father," said the boy, "is a poor rule that will not work both ways. They knock each other down but will not raise each other up."
 "My son, brick and mink are alike made of clay, active in knocking each other down but not disposed to help each other up."

"Father said the boy, "does the first brick represent the first Adam?"

The father replied: "When men fall, they love company, but when they rise, they love to stand alone, like yonder brick, and see others prostrate below them."

16th SECTION TO BE SOLD.
